emptiness of nonexclusion is not the emptiness of nonexclusion. The emptiness of nonexclusion is not other than emptiness, nor is emptiness other than the emptiness of nonexclusion. Emptiness is indeed the emptiness of nonexclusion, and the emptiness of nonexclusion is indeed emptiness. That emptiness of the emptiness of inherent nature is not the emptiness of inherent nature. The emptiness of inherent nature is not other than emptiness, nor is emptiness other than the emptiness of inherent nature. Emptiness is indeed the emptiness of inherent nature, and the emptiness of inherent nature is indeed emptiness. That emptiness of the emptiness of all phenomena is not the emptiness of all phenomena. The emptiness of all phenomena is not other than emptiness, nor is emptiness other than the emptiness of all phenomena. Emptiness is indeed the emptiness of all phenomena, and the emptiness of all phenomena is indeed emptiness. That emptiness of the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics is not the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics. The emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics is not other than [F.171.b] emptiness, nor is emptiness other than the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics. Emptiness is indeed the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, and the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics is indeed emptiness. That emptiness of the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended is not the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended. The emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended is not other than emptiness, nor is emptiness other than the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended. Emptiness is indeed the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, and the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended is indeed emptiness. That emptiness of the emptiness of nonentities is not the emptiness of nonentities. The emptiness of nonentities is not other than emptiness, nor is emptiness other than the emptiness of nonentities. Emptiness is indeed the emptiness of nonentities, and the emptiness of nonentities is indeed emptiness. That emptiness of the emptiness of essential nature is not the emptiness of essential nature. The emptiness of essential nature is not other than emptiness, nor is emptiness other than the emptiness of essential nature. Emptiness is indeed the emptiness of essential nature, and the emptiness of essential nature is indeed emptiness. That emptiness of the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities is not the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities. The emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities is not other than emptiness, nor is emptiness other than the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities. Emptiness is indeed the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities is indeed emptiness.

6.149 “That emptiness of the four applications of mindfulness is not the applications of mindfulness. The applications of mindfulness are not other than emptiness, nor is emptiness other than the applications of mindfulness. [F.172.a] Emptiness is indeed the applications of mindfulness, and the applications of mindfulness are indeed emptiness. That emptiness of the four correct exertions is not the correct exertions. The correct exertions are not other than emptiness, nor is emptiness other than the correct exertions. Emptiness is indeed the correct exertions, and the correct exertions are indeed emptiness. That emptiness of the four supports for miraculous ability is not the supports for miraculous ability. The supports for miraculous ability are not other than emptiness, nor is emptiness other than the supports for miraculous ability. Emptiness is indeed the supports for miraculous ability, and the supports for miraculous ability are indeed emptiness. That emptiness of the five faculties is not the faculties. The faculties are not other than emptiness, nor is emptiness other than the faculties. Emptiness is indeed the faculties, and the faculties are indeed emptiness. That emptiness of the five powers is not the powers. The powers are not other than emptiness, nor is emptiness other than the powers. Emptiness is indeed the powers, and the powers are indeed emptiness. That emptiness of the seven branches of enlightenment is not the branches of enlightenment. The branches of enlightenment are not other than emptiness, nor is emptiness other than the branches of enlightenment. Emptiness is indeed the branches of enlightenment, and the branches of enlightenment are indeed emptiness. That emptiness of the noble eightfold path is not the noble eightfold path. The noble eightfold path is not other than emptiness, [F.172.b] nor is emptiness other than the noble eightfold path. Emptiness is indeed the noble eightfold path, and the noble eightfold path is indeed emptiness.

6.150 “That emptiness of the four meditative concentrations is not the meditative concentrations. The meditative concentrations are not other than emptiness, nor is emptiness other than the meditative concentrations. Emptiness is indeed the meditative concentrations, and the meditative concentrations are indeed emptiness. That emptiness of the four immeasurable attitudes is not the immeasurable attitudes. The immeasurable attitudes are not other than emptiness, nor is emptiness other than the immeasurable attitudes. Emptiness is indeed the immeasurable attitudes, and the immeasurable attitudes are indeed emptiness. That emptiness of the four formless absorptions is not the formless absorptions. The formless absorptions are not other than emptiness, nor is emptiness other than the formless absorptions. Emptiness is indeed the formless absorptions, and the formless absorptions are indeed emptiness. That emptiness of the eight liberations is not the liberations. The liberations are not other than emptiness, nor is emptiness other than the liberations. Emptiness is indeed [F.173.a] the liberations, and the liberations are indeed emptiness. That emptiness of the nine serial steps of meditative absorption is not the serial steps of meditative absorption. The serial steps of meditative absorption are not other than emptiness, nor is emptiness other than the serial steps of meditative absorption. Emptiness is indeed the serial steps of meditative absorption, and the serial steps of meditative absorption are indeed emptiness. That emptiness of the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways is not the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways. The emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways are not other than emptiness, nor is emptiness other than the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways. Emptiness is indeed the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways, and the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways are indeed emptiness. That emptiness of the six extrasensory powers is not the extrasensory powers. The extrasensory powers are not other than emptiness, nor is emptiness other than the extrasensory powers. Emptiness is indeed the extrasensory powers, and the extrasensory powers are indeed emptiness. That emptiness of the meditative stabilities is not the meditative stabilities. The meditative stabilities are not other than emptiness, nor is emptiness other than [F.173.b] the meditative stabilities. Emptiness is indeed the meditative stabilities, and the meditative stabilities are indeed emptiness. That emptiness of the dhāraṇī gateways is not the dhāraṇī gateways. The dhāraṇī gateways are not other than emptiness, nor is emptiness other than the dhāraṇī gateways. Emptiness is indeed the dhāraṇī gateways and the dhāraṇī gateways are indeed emptiness.

6.151      “That emptiness of the ten powers of the tathāgatas is not the powers of the tathāgatas. the powers of the tathāgatas are not other than emptiness, nor is emptiness other than the powers of the tathāgatas. Emptiness is indeed the powers of the tathāgatas, and the powers of the tathāgatas are indeed emptiness. That emptiness of the four fearlessnesses is not the fearlessnesses. The fearlessnesses are not other than emptiness, nor is emptiness other than the fearlessnesses. Emptiness is indeed the fearlessnesses, and the fearlessnesses are indeed emptiness. That emptiness of the four kinds of exact knowledge is not the kinds of exact knowledge. The kinds of exact knowledge are not other than emptiness, nor is emptiness other than the kinds of exact knowledge. Emptiness is indeed the kinds of exact knowledge, and the kinds of exact knowledge are indeed emptiness. That emptiness of great loving kindness is not great loving kindness. Great loving kindness is not other than emptiness, nor is emptiness other than great loving kindness. Emptiness is indeed great loving kindness, and great loving kindness is indeed emptiness. That emptiness of great compassion [F.174.a] is not great compassion. Great compassion is not other than emptiness, nor is emptiness other than great compassion. Emptiness is indeed great compassion, and great compassion is indeed emptiness. That emptiness of the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas is not the distinct qualities of the buddhas. The distinct qualities of the buddhas are not other than emptiness, nor is emptiness other than the distinct qualities of the buddhas. Emptiness is indeed the distinct qualities of the buddhas, and the distinct qualities of the buddhas are indeed emptiness.

6.152 “That emptiness of omniscience is not omniscience. Omniscience is not other than emptiness, nor is emptiness other than omniscience.<sup>300</sup> Emptiness is indeed omniscience, and omniscience is indeed emptiness. That knowledge of the aspects of the path is not the knowledge of the aspects of the path. The knowledge of the aspects of the path is not other than emptiness, nor is emptiness other than the knowledge of the aspects of the path. Emptiness is indeed the knowledge of the aspects of the path, and the knowledge of the aspects of the path is indeed emptiness. That all-aspect omniscience is not all-aspect omniscience. All-aspect omniscience is not other than emptiness, nor is emptiness other than all-aspect omniscience. Emptiness is indeed all-aspect omniscience, and all-aspect omniscience is indeed emptiness.

6.153 “Venerable Śāradvatīputra, one should know that bodhisattva great beings who practice the [F.174.b] perfection of wisdom in that manner do possess skillful means.

6.154 “Venerable Śāradvatīputra, bodhisattva great beings who practice the perfection of wisdom in that manner have the good fortune to awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. Those bodhisattva great beings, even when they are practicing the perfection of wisdom, do not apprehend<sup>301</sup> that they are practicing; even when not practicing do not apprehend that they are not practicing; do not apprehend that they are practicing when they practice and not practicing when they do not practice; and do not apprehend that they are neither practicing nor not practicing.”

6.155 “Why, Venerable Subhūti,” asked Śāradvatīputra, “when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom, do they not apprehend that they are practicing? Do they not apprehend that they are not practicing even when not practicing? Do they not apprehend that they are practicing when they practice and not practicing when they do not practice? And do they not apprehend that they are neither practicing nor not practicing?”

6.156 “Venerable Śāradvatīputra,” replied Subhūti, “this is because they do not apprehend an essential nature of the perfection of wisdom. If you ask why, it is because the perfection of wisdom has the essential nature of a nonentity.

For this reason, Venerable Śāradvatīputra, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom, they do not apprehend that they are practicing; even when not practicing do not apprehend that they are not practicing; do not apprehend that they are practicing when they practice and not practicing when they do not practice; and do not apprehend that they are neither practicing nor not practicing. If you ask why, it is because they have understood that all phenomena have the essential nature of [F.175.a] a nonentity, so<sup>302</sup> they have not appropriated them.

6.157 “If, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom in this manner, if they are not disheartened, not intimidated, not afraid, not frightened, and not fearful, then, Venerable Śāradvatīputra, one should know that these bodhisattva great beings are approaching all-aspect omniscience.

6.158 “This all-aspect omniscience, furthermore, is without duality and cannot be divided into two because all phenomena have the essential nature of a nonentity.<sup>303</sup> It is the meditative stability of bodhisattva great beings named the nonarising of all phenomena. It is spacious, supreme, definitely immeasurable, and it cannot be misappropriated by any śrāvakas or pratyekabuddhas. Bodhisattva great beings who engage in this meditative stability will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment.”

6.159 “Venerable Subhūti, do bodhisattva great beings who engage with this meditative stability alone swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment, or are there also other meditative stabilities similar to it?”

6.160 “Venerable Śāradvatīputra,” replied Subhūti, “bodhisattva great beings engaging in the practice of other meditative stabilities also swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment.”

6.161 “Venerable Subhūti, bodhisattva great beings engaging in the practice of which other meditative stabilities also swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment?”

6.162 Subhūti replied, “Venerable [F.175.b] Śāradvatīputra, there is the meditative stability of bodhisattva great beings named heroic valor. Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named precious seal. Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named lion’s play. Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named beautiful moon. Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named crest of the moon's victory banner. Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named surpassing all phenomena. Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named seal of all phenomena. Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named surveying the crown pinnacle. Engaging with [F.176.a] this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named certainty in the realm of phenomena. Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named crest of certainty's victory banner.<sup>304</sup> Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named vajra. Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named seal of entry into all phenomena. Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named well established as the king of meditative stabilities. Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named excellently well established.<sup>305</sup> Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named well-engaging king of meditative stabilities. Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings [F.176.b] will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named diffusion of light rays. Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named without mistakes. Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named because of the diffusion of light rays not making mistakes. Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named power of effort. Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named array of power. Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named exalted. Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named engaging with certainty in lexical explanations. Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully [F.177.a] to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named entry into designations. Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named observation of spatial directions. Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named sealed with the seal. Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named unimpaired. Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named oceanic seal gathering all phenomena. Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named seal of the king.<sup>306</sup> Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named permeation of space. Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named vajra maṇḍala. Engaging with this meditative stability, [F.177.b] bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named purified of the three spheres.<sup>307</sup> Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named shoulder ornament of the victory banner's crest. Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named Indra's crest. Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named pursuit of the stream. Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named yawning lion. Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named stretching lion.<sup>308</sup> Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named stretching-out lion. Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named beyond sequence.<sup>309</sup> [F.178.a] Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named without attachment or impediment.<sup>310</sup> Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named repudiation of afflicted mental states. Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named illumination. Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named unseeking. Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named no fixed abode. Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named free from mentation. Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named taming the four māras.<sup>311</sup> Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named stainless lamplight [F.178.b]. Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named boundless light. Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named illuminator. Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment.

There is the meditative stability named total illumination. Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named pure supremacy.<sup>312</sup> Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named stainless light. Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named bringer of joy. Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named lightning lamp. Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named inexhaustible. [F.179.a] Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named unvanquished. Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named majestic. Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named free from extinction. Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named unmoving. Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named calmed.<sup>313</sup> Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named imperishable.<sup>314</sup> Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named lamp of the sun. Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named immaculate moon. [F.179.b] Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named clear-eyed.<sup>315</sup> Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named lamp of wisdom. Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named clear appearance. Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named moon lamp.<sup>316</sup> Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named illuminating. Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named does what needs to be done. Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named glory of transcendental knowledge. Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named vajra-like. Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings [F.180.a] will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named stability of mind. Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named total illumination. Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named well situated. Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named jewel cusp. Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named seal of the supreme phenomenon. Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named sameness of all phenomena. Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named renunciation of delight. Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named elevated by phenomena.<sup>317</sup> Engaging with this meditative stability, [F.180.b] bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named expanded on account of being elevated by phenomena.<sup>318</sup> Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named jewel state. Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named forsaking fights. Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named dispersal. Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named distinguishing the terms associated with all phenomena. Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named determination.<sup>319</sup> Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named stainless performance. Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named [F.181.a] arranging the sameness of letters. Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named devoid of letters. Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named cutting off the objective support.<sup>320</sup> Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. [B14]

6.163 “There is the meditative stability named unmodified. Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named aspectless. Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named entering into names and signs.<sup>321</sup> Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named free from activity. Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named entering into the ascertainment of names. Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings [F.181.b] will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named a practitioner without a dwelling. Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named devoid of darkness. Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named endowed with practice. Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named unwavering. Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named transcendence of the range. Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named accumulation of all attributes. Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named abiding without mentation. Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named abiding with certainty.<sup>322</sup> Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly [F.182.a] awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named blossoming and vibrance of the flowers of virtue. Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named endowed with the branches of enlightenment. Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named boundless eloquence. Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named boundless lamplight. Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named equal to the unequalled. Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named transcending all phenomena. Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named delineator. Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named dispelling doubt. Engaging with [F.182.b] this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named without settled focus.<sup>323</sup> Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named single array. Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named manifest attainment of aspects. Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named single aspect. Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named nonexclusion of the aspect. Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named supreme performance.<sup>324</sup> Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named comprehension of all bases of existence through realization.<sup>325</sup> Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability [F.183.a] named entrance to symbols and sounds. Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named jewel heart.<sup>326</sup> Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named unattached to any phenomena. Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named array of flashes of lightning. Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named forsaking. Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named lamp of doctrine. Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named lamp of transcendental knowledge. Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named manifest attainment of the miraculous ability to not return. Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully [F.183.b] to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named devoid of vocalic syllables. Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named burning lamp. Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named purification of defining characteristics. Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named nondistinguished.<sup>327</sup> Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named endowed with a distinct forbearance. Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named endowed with all finest aspects. Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named endowed with dhāraṇīs. Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named [F.184.a] absence of joy with respect to all happiness and suffering. Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named inexhaustible cornucopia. Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named dhāraṇī intelligence. Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named perfect elimination of right and wrong. Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named perfect calming of all contradictions and refutations. Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named no harmony or disharmony. Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named taintless light. Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named endowed with the essence. Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva [F.184.b] great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named taintless light of the full moon. Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named lightning light. There is the meditative stability named great ornament. Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named flash of lightning that does not cause pain.<sup>328</sup> Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named illuminator in all respects. Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named protector of all worlds.<sup>329</sup> Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named sameness of meditative stability. Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named with a dustless and dust-free principle [F.185.a]. Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named convergence in nonaffliction. Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named convergence of all afflicted mental states in nonaffliction. Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named intent on a dwelling that has not been apprehended. Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named abiding in the real nature without mentation. Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named self-originated from the vessel.<sup>330</sup> Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named incinerating all afflicted mental states. Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability [F.185.b] named lamp of great transcendental knowledge. Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named origin of the ten powers. Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named opener of the gateways. Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named dispelling the defects of corporeality.<sup>331</sup> Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named obliterating defects of speech, transforming them as if into space. Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named dispelling the defects of speech.<sup>332</sup> Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named dispelling the defects of the mind. Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named thorough investigation.<sup>333</sup> Engaging with this meditative stability, [F.186.a] bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named space-like.<sup>334</sup> Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There is the meditative stability named space-like and without attachment, hence free and without blemish. Engaging with this meditative stability, bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment.

6.164 “Venerable Śāradvatīputra, these are the meditative stabilities of bodhisattva great beings. Through engaging with those meditative stabilities bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. There are also countless and inestimable other meditative stabilities and dhāraṇī gateways, like these, having trained in which bodhisattva great beings will swiftly awaken fully to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment.”

- 6.165 Then, through the power of the buddhas, the venerable Subhūti said, “Venerable Śāradvatīputra, the tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas of the past have indeed prophesied that those bodhisattva great beings who dwell in those meditative stabilities will fully awaken to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. The tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas presently residing and maintaining themselves in the world systems of the ten directions, [F.186.b] numerous as the sand particles in the Gaṅgā River, also prophesy that those bodhisattva great beings will attain unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment.
- 6.166 “But still, those bodhisattva great beings do not even observe those meditative stabilities. They do not give rise to conceit on account of those meditative stabilities, thinking, ‘I have been absorbed in meditation. I am absorbed in meditation. I will be absorbed in meditation.’ Those conceptual imaginations are absent and will not arise.”
- 6.167 “Venerable Subhūti, are bodhisattva great beings who dwell in these meditative stabilities prophesied by the tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas?”
- 6.168 “Venerable Śāradvatīputra, they are not!” replied Subhūti. “If you ask why, Venerable Śāradvatīputra, it is because it is not that ‘the perfection of wisdom is one thing, the meditative stability another, and the bodhisattva yet another.’ Rather, the perfection of wisdom is itself the meditative stability, the meditative stability is itself the bodhisattva, and the bodhisattvas themselves are the meditative stability.”
- 6.169 “Venerable Subhūti, if it is because it is not that ‘the meditative stability is one thing, and the bodhisattva another,’ and it is not that ‘the bodhisattva is one thing, and the meditative stability another,’ which is to say, if the meditative stability is itself the bodhisattva, and the bodhisattvas are themselves the meditative stability owing to the sameness of all phenomena, is it then possible to teach the meditative stability?”
- “Venerable Śāradvatīputra, it is not!” replied Subhūti.
- 6.170 “Venerable Subhūti, do those children of good family [F.187.a] perceive these meditative stabilities?”
- “Venerable Śāradvatīputra, they do not perceive them!” replied Subhūti.
- 6.171 “How do they not perceive them?”
- “Because they are without conceptual thought,” replied Subhūti.
- 6.172 “How are they without conceptual thought?”
- “They are without conceptual thought because all phenomena are nonexistent,” replied Subhūti. “So it is that those children of good family have no conceptual thoughts regarding those meditative stabilities. For this reason, Venerable Śāradvatīputra, those children of good family do not distinguish those meditative stabilities. They do not perceive them.”

6.173 “Why, Venerable Subhūti, do they not distinguish and not perceive them?”

“They do not distinguish and do not perceive them because the meditative stabilities are nonexistent, and bodhisattva great beings, also, are nonexistent,” replied Subhūti.

6.174 Then the Blessed One congratulated the venerable Subhūti: “Excellent, excellent, Subhūti! You have spoken these words eloquently! This is an explanation by one whom I have declared to be supreme among śrāvakas abiding free of conflict. Bodhisattva great beings should also train in the perfection of wisdom in that manner. They should train in the perfection of meditative concentration, should train in the perfection of perseverance, should train in the perfection of tolerance, should train in the perfection of ethical discipline, and should train in the perfection of generosity; should train in the applications of mindfulness, should train in the correct exertions, should train in the supports for miraculous ability, [F.187.b] should train in the faculties, should train in the powers, should train in the branches of enlightenment, and should train in the noble eightfold path; should train in the truths of the noble ones, should train in the meditative concentrations, should train in the immeasurable attitudes, should train in the formless absorptions, should train in the liberations, should train in the serial steps of meditative absorption, should train in the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation, should train in the extrasensory powers, should train in the meditative stabilities, and should train in the dhāraṇī gateways; and should train in the powers of the tathāgatas, should train in the fearlessnesses, should train in the kinds of exact knowledge, should train in great loving kindness, should train in great compassion, and should train in the distinct qualities of the buddhas.”

6.175 Then Venerable Śāradvatīputra asked the Blessed One, “Blessed Lord, do bodhisattva great beings, training like that, train in the perfection of wisdom by way of not apprehending anything? Do they train in the perfection of meditative concentration by way of not apprehending anything? Do they train in the perfection of perseverance by way of not apprehending anything? Do they train in the perfection of tolerance by way of not apprehending anything? Do they train in the perfection of ethical discipline by way of not apprehending anything? Do they train in the perfection of generosity by way of not apprehending anything? Do they train in the applications of mindfulness [F.188.a] by way of not apprehending anything? Do they train in the correct exertions by way of not apprehending anything? Do they train in the supports for miraculous ability by way of not apprehending anything? Do they train in the faculties by way of not apprehending anything? Do they train in the powers by way of not apprehending anything? Do they train in the branches of enlightenment by way of not apprehending anything? Do they train in the noble eightfold path by way of not apprehending anything? Do they train in the truths of the noble ones by way of not apprehending anything? Do they train in the meditative concentrations by way of not apprehending anything? Do they train in the immeasurable attitudes by way of not apprehending anything? Do they train in the formless absorptions by way of not apprehending anything? Do they train in the liberations by way of not apprehending anything? Do they train in the serial steps of meditative absorption by way of not apprehending anything? Do they train in the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation by way of not apprehending anything? Do they train in the extrasensory powers by way of not apprehending anything? Do they train in the meditative stabilities by way of not apprehending anything? Do they train in the dhāraṇī gateways by way of not apprehending anything? Do they train in the powers of the tathāgatas by way of not apprehending anything? Do they train in the fearlessnesses by way of not apprehending anything? Do they train in the kinds of exact knowledge by way of not apprehending anything? Do they train in great loving kindness by way of not apprehending anything? Do they train in great compassion by way of not apprehending anything? And do they train in the distinct qualities of the buddhas by way of not apprehending anything?"

6.176     “Śāradvatīputra,” replied the Blessed One, “bodhisattva great beings, [F.188.b] training like that, do train in the perfection of wisdom by way of not apprehending anything. They do train in the perfection of meditative concentration by way of not apprehending anything. They do train in the perfection of perseverance by way of not apprehending anything. They do train in the perfection of tolerance by way of not apprehending anything. They do train in the perfection of ethical discipline by way of not apprehending anything. They do train in the perfection of generosity by way of not apprehending anything. They do train in the applications of mindfulness by way of not apprehending anything. They do train in the correct exertions by way of not apprehending anything. They do train in the supports for miraculous ability by way of not apprehending anything. They do train in the faculties by way of not apprehending anything. They do train in the powers by way of not apprehending anything. They do train in the branches of enlightenment by way of not apprehending anything. They do train in the noble eightfold path by way of not apprehending anything. They do train in the truths of the noble ones by way of not apprehending anything. They do train in the meditative concentrations by way of not apprehending anything. They do train in the immeasurable attitudes by way of not apprehending anything. They do train in the formless absorptions by way of not apprehending anything. They do train in the liberations by way of not apprehending anything. They do train in the serial steps of meditative absorption by way of not apprehending anything. They do train in the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation by way of not apprehending anything. They do train in the extrasensory powers by way of not apprehending anything. They do train in the meditative stabilities by way of not apprehending anything. They do train in the dhāraṇī [F.189.a] gateways by way of not apprehending anything. They do train in the powers of the tathāgatas by way of not apprehending anything. They do train in the fearlessnesses by way of not apprehending anything. They do train in the kinds of exact knowledge by way of not apprehending anything. They do train in great loving kindness by way of not apprehending anything. They do train in great compassion by way of not apprehending anything. And they do train in the distinct qualities of the buddhas by way of not apprehending anything.

6.177 Then Venerable Śāradvatīputra asked, “Blessed Lord, why is it that they do not apprehend?”

The Blessed One replied, “Owing to utter purity,<sup>335</sup> they do not apprehend a self, do not apprehend a being, do not apprehend a life form, do not apprehend a living being, do not apprehend a life, do not apprehend an individual, do not apprehend a person, do not apprehend one born of Manu, do not apprehend a child of Manu, do not apprehend an agent, do not apprehend an experiencer, do not apprehend a knower, and do not apprehend a viewer.

6.178 “Owing to utter purity, they do not apprehend physical forms. Owing to utter purity, they do not apprehend feelings. Owing to utter purity, they do not apprehend perceptions. Owing to utter purity, they do not apprehend formative predispositions. Owing to utter purity, they do not apprehend consciousness. Owing to utter purity, they do not apprehend the eyes. Owing to utter purity, they do not apprehend the ears. Owing to utter purity, they do not apprehend the nose. Owing to utter purity, they do not apprehend the tongue. Owing to utter purity, they do not apprehend the body. Owing to utter purity, they do not apprehend the mental faculty. Owing to utter purity, they do not apprehend sights. Owing to utter purity, they do not apprehend sounds. [F.189.b] Owing to utter purity, they do not apprehend odors. Owing to utter purity, they do not apprehend tastes. Owing to utter purity, they do not apprehend tangibles. Owing to utter purity, they do not apprehend mental phenomena. Owing to utter purity, they do not apprehend the sensory element of the eyes. Owing to utter purity, they do not apprehend the sensory element of sights. Owing to utter purity, they do not apprehend the sensory element of the visual consciousness. Owing to utter purity, they do not apprehend the sensory element of the ears. Owing to utter purity, they do not apprehend the sensory element of sounds. Owing to utter purity, they do not apprehend the sensory element of the auditory consciousness. Owing to utter purity, they do not apprehend the sensory element of the nose. Owing to utter purity, they do not apprehend the sensory element of odors. Owing to utter purity, they do not apprehend the sensory element of the olfactory consciousness. Owing to utter purity, they do not apprehend the sensory element of the tongue. Owing to utter purity, they do not apprehend the sensory element of tastes. Owing to utter purity, they do not apprehend the sensory element of the gustatory consciousness. Owing to utter purity, they do not apprehend the sensory element of the body. Owing to utter purity, they do not apprehend the sensory element of tangibles. Owing to utter purity, they do not apprehend the sensory element of the tactile consciousness. Owing to utter purity, they do not apprehend the sensory element of the mental faculty. Owing to utter purity, they do not apprehend the sensory element of mental phenomena. Owing to utter purity, they do not apprehend the sensory element of the mental consciousness.

6.179      “Owing to utter purity, they do not apprehend the earth element. Owing to utter purity, they do not apprehend the water element. Owing to utter purity, they do not apprehend the fire element. Owing to utter purity, they do not apprehend the wind element. Owing to utter purity, they do not apprehend the space element. [F.190.a] Owing to utter purity, they do not apprehend the consciousness element.

6.180      “Owing to utter purity, they do not apprehend ignorance. Owing to utter purity, they do not apprehend formative predispositions. Owing to utter purity, they do not apprehend consciousness. Owing to utter purity, they do not apprehend name and form. Owing to utter purity, they do not apprehend the six sense fields. Owing to utter purity, they do not apprehend sensory contact. Owing to utter purity, they do not apprehend sensation. Owing to utter purity, they do not apprehend craving. Owing to utter purity, they do not apprehend grasping. Owing to utter purity, they do not apprehend the rebirth process. Owing to utter purity, they do not apprehend birth. Owing to utter purity, they do not apprehend aging and death.

6.181      “Owing to utter purity, they do not apprehend suffering. Owing to utter purity, they do not apprehend the cause. Owing to utter purity, they do not apprehend the cessation. Owing to utter purity, they do not apprehend the path.

6.182 “Owing to utter purity, they do not apprehend the realm of desire. Owing to utter purity, they do not apprehend the realm of form. Owing to utter purity, they do not apprehend the realm of formlessness.

6.183 “Owing to utter purity, they do not apprehend the perfection of generosity. Owing to utter purity, they do not apprehend the perfection of ethical discipline. Owing to utter purity, they do not apprehend the perfection of tolerance. Owing to utter purity, they do not apprehend the perfection of perseverance. Owing to utter purity, they do not apprehend the perfection of meditative concentration. Owing to utter purity, they do not apprehend [F.190.b] the perfection of wisdom.

6.184 “Owing to utter purity, they do not apprehend the applications of mindfulness. Owing to utter purity, they do not apprehend the correct exertions. Owing to utter purity, they do not apprehend the supports for miraculous ability. Owing to utter purity, they do not apprehend the faculties. Owing to utter purity, they do not apprehend the powers. Owing to utter purity, they do not apprehend the branches of enlightenment. Owing to utter purity, they do not apprehend the noble eightfold path. Owing to utter purity, they do not apprehend the truths of the noble ones. Owing to utter purity, they do not apprehend the meditative concentrations. Owing to utter purity, they do not apprehend the immeasurable attitudes. Owing to utter purity, they do not apprehend the formless absorptions. Owing to utter purity, they do not apprehend the liberations. Owing to utter purity, they do not apprehend the serial steps of meditative absorption. Owing to utter purity, they do not apprehend the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation. Owing to utter purity, they do not apprehend the extrasensory powers. Owing to utter purity, they do not apprehend the meditative stabilities. Owing to utter purity, they do not apprehend the dhāraṇī gateways. Owing to utter purity, they do not apprehend the powers of the tathāgatas. Owing to utter purity, they do not apprehend the fearlessnesses. Owing to utter purity, they do not apprehend the kinds of exact knowledge. Owing to utter purity, they do not apprehend great loving kindness. Owing to utter purity, [F.191.a] they do not apprehend great compassion. Owing to utter purity, they do not apprehend the distinct qualities of the buddhas.

6.185 “Owing to utter purity, they do not apprehend those who have entered the stream. Owing to utter purity, they do not apprehend once-returners. Owing to utter purity, they do not apprehend non-returners. Owing to utter purity, they do not apprehend arhats. Owing to utter purity, they do not apprehend pratyekabuddhas. Owing to utter purity, they do not apprehend bodhisattvas. Owing to utter purity they do not apprehend enlightenment. Owing to utter purity, they do not apprehend buddhas.”

- 6.186 “Blessed Lord, what is purity?”
“That all phenomena are nonarising, unceasing, neither defiled nor purified, nonemerging, not apprehended, and unconditioned is called their purity,” replied the Blessed One. “Śāradvatīputra, so it is that bodhisattva great beings train with respect to all phenomena, by way of not apprehending anything.”
- 6.187 “Blessed Lord, in what phenomena do bodhisattva great beings who train like that then train?”
“Śāradvatīputra,” replied the Blessed One, “bodhisattva great beings who train like that do not train in anything at all. If you ask why, Śāradvatīputra, it is because these phenomena do not exist in the way that foolish ordinary people are fixated<sup>336</sup> on them.”
- 6.188 “Blessed Lord, how then do these phenomena exist?”
“As they do not exist, so do they exist. [F.191.b] Because they thus do not exist, they are therefore said to be ‘nonexistent,’ ”<sup>337</sup> replied the Blessed One.
- 6.189 “Blessed Lord,” he asked, “why are the nonexistent said to be ‘nonexistent’?”
“Śāradvatīputra,” replied the Blessed One, “physical forms are nonexistent owing to the emptiness of internal phenomena, the emptiness of external phenomena, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, the emptiness of emptiness, the emptiness of great extent, the emptiness of ultimate reality, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, the emptiness of the unlimited, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, the emptiness of nonexclusion, the emptiness of inherent nature, the emptiness of all phenomena, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, the emptiness of nonentities, the emptiness of essential nature, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities.
- 6.190 “Śāradvatīputra, feelings are nonexistent owing to the emptiness of internal phenomena, the emptiness of external phenomena, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, the emptiness of emptiness, the emptiness of great extent, the emptiness of ultimate reality, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, the emptiness of the unlimited, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, the emptiness of nonexclusion, the emptiness of inherent nature, the emptiness of all phenomena, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, the emptiness of nonentities, the emptiness of essential nature, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities. Śāradvatīputra, perceptions are nonexistent owing to the emptiness of internal phenomena, the emptiness of external phenomena, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, the emptiness of emptiness, the emptiness of great extent, the emptiness of ultimate reality, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, the emptiness of the unlimited, [F.192.a] the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, the emptiness of nonexclusion, the emptiness of inherent nature, the emptiness of all phenomena, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, the emptiness of nonentities, the emptiness of essential nature, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities. Śāradvatīputra, formative predispositions are nonexistent owing to the emptiness of internal phenomena, the emptiness of external phenomena, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, the emptiness of emptiness, the emptiness of great extent, the emptiness of ultimate reality, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, the emptiness of the unlimited, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, the emptiness of nonexclusion, the emptiness of inherent nature, the emptiness of all phenomena, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, the emptiness of nonentities, the emptiness of essential nature, and the emptiness of the essential nature nonentities. Śāradvatīputra, consciousness is nonexistent owing to the emptiness of internal phenomena, the emptiness of external phenomena, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, the emptiness of emptiness, the emptiness of great extent, the emptiness of ultimate reality, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, the emptiness of the unlimited, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, the emptiness of nonexclusion, the emptiness of inherent nature, the emptiness of all phenomena, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, the emptiness of nonentities, the emptiness of essential nature, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities.

6.191 “Śāradvatīputra, the eyes are nonexistent owing to the emptiness of internal phenomena, the emptiness of external phenomena, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, the emptiness [F.192.b] of emptiness, the emptiness of great extent, the emptiness of ultimate reality, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, the emptiness of the unlimited, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, the emptiness of nonexclusion, the emptiness of inherent nature, the emptiness of all phenomena, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, the emptiness of nonentities, the emptiness of essential nature, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities. Śāradvatīputra, the ears are nonexistent owing to the emptiness of internal phenomena, the emptiness of external phenomena, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, the emptiness of emptiness, the emptiness of great extent, the emptiness of ultimate reality, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, the emptiness of the unlimited, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, the emptiness of nonexclusion, the emptiness of inherent nature, the emptiness of all phenomena, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, the emptiness of nonentities, the emptiness of essential nature, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities. Śāradvatīputra, the nose is nonexistent owing to the emptiness of internal phenomena, the emptiness of external phenomena, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, the emptiness of emptiness, the emptiness of great extent, the emptiness of ultimate reality, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, the emptiness of the unlimited, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, the emptiness of nonexclusion, the emptiness of inherent nature, the emptiness of all phenomena, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, the emptiness of nonentities, the emptiness of essential nature, [F.193.a] and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities. Śāradvatīputra, the tongue is nonexistent owing to the emptiness of internal phenomena, the emptiness of external phenomena, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, the emptiness of emptiness, the emptiness of great extent, the emptiness of ultimate reality, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, the emptiness of the unlimited, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, the emptiness of nonexclusion, the emptiness of inherent nature, the emptiness of all phenomena, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, the emptiness of nonentities, the emptiness of essential nature, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities. Śāradvatīputra, the body is nonexistent owing to the emptiness of internal phenomena, the emptiness of external phenomena, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, the emptiness of emptiness, the emptiness of great extent, the emptiness of ultimate reality, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, the emptiness of the unlimited, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, the emptiness of nonexclusion, the emptiness of inherent nature, the emptiness of all phenomena, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, the emptiness of nonentities, the emptiness of essential nature, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities. Śāradvatīputra, the mental faculty is nonexistent owing to the emptiness of internal phenomena, the emptiness of external phenomena, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, the emptiness of emptiness, the emptiness of great extent, the emptiness of ultimate reality, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, the emptiness of the unlimited, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, the emptiness of nonexclusion, [F.193.b] the emptiness of inherent nature, the emptiness of all phenomena, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, the emptiness of nonentities, the emptiness of essential nature, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities.

6.192 “Śāradvatīputra, sights are nonexistent owing to the emptiness of internal phenomena, the emptiness of external phenomena, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, the emptiness of emptiness, the emptiness of great extent, the emptiness of ultimate reality, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, the emptiness of the unlimited, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, the emptiness of nonexclusion, the emptiness of inherent nature, the emptiness of all phenomena, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, the emptiness of nonentities, the emptiness of essential nature, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities. Śāradvatīputra, sounds are nonexistent owing to the emptiness of internal phenomena, the emptiness of external phenomena, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, the emptiness of emptiness, the emptiness of great extent, the emptiness of ultimate reality, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, the emptiness of the unlimited, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, the emptiness of nonexclusion, the emptiness of inherent nature, the emptiness of all phenomena, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, the emptiness of nonentities, the emptiness of essential nature, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities. Śāradvatīputra, odors are nonexistent owing to the emptiness of internal phenomena, the emptiness of external phenomena, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, the emptiness of emptiness, the emptiness of great extent, the emptiness of ultimate reality, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, the emptiness of [F.194.a] unconditioned phenomena, the emptiness of the unlimited, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, the emptiness of nonexclusion, the emptiness of inherent nature, the emptiness of all phenomena, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, the emptiness of nonentities, the emptiness of essential nature, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities. Śāradvatīputra, tastes are nonexistent owing to the emptiness of internal phenomena, the emptiness of external phenomena, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, the emptiness of emptiness, the emptiness of great extent, the emptiness of ultimate reality, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, the emptiness of the unlimited, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, the emptiness of nonexclusion, the emptiness of inherent nature, the emptiness of all phenomena, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, the emptiness of nonentities, the emptiness of essential nature, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities. Śāradvatīputra, tangibles are nonexistent owing to the emptiness of internal phenomena, the emptiness of external phenomena, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, the emptiness of emptiness, the emptiness of great extent, the emptiness of ultimate reality, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, the emptiness of the unlimited, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, the emptiness of nonexclusion, the emptiness of inherent nature, the emptiness of all phenomena, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, the emptiness of nonentities, the emptiness of essential nature, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities. Śāradvatīputra, mental phenomena are nonexistent owing to the emptiness of internal phenomena, [F.194.b] the emptiness of external phenomena, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, the emptiness of emptiness, the emptiness of great extent, the emptiness of ultimate reality, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, the emptiness of the unlimited, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, the emptiness of nonexclusion, the emptiness of inherent nature, the emptiness of all phenomena, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, the emptiness of nonentities, the emptiness of essential nature, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities.

6.193 “Śāradvatīputra, visual consciousness is nonexistent owing to the emptiness of internal phenomena, the emptiness of external phenomena, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, the emptiness of emptiness, the emptiness of great extent, the emptiness of ultimate reality, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, the emptiness of the unlimited, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, the emptiness of nonexclusion, the emptiness of inherent nature, the emptiness of all phenomena, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, the emptiness of nonentities, the emptiness of essential nature, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities. Śāradvatīputra, auditory consciousness is nonexistent owing to the emptiness of internal phenomena, the emptiness of external phenomena, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, the emptiness of emptiness, the emptiness of great extent, the emptiness of ultimate reality, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, the emptiness of the unlimited, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, the emptiness of nonexclusion, the emptiness of inherent nature, the emptiness of all phenomena, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, [F.195.a] the emptiness of nonentities, the emptiness of essential nature, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities. Śāradvatīputra, olfactory consciousness is nonexistent owing to the emptiness of internal phenomena, the emptiness of external phenomena, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, the emptiness of emptiness, the emptiness of great extent, the emptiness of ultimate reality, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, the emptiness of the unlimited, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, the emptiness of nonexclusion, the emptiness of inherent nature, the emptiness of all phenomena, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, the emptiness of nonentities, the emptiness of essential nature, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities. Śāradvatīputra, gustatory consciousness is nonexistent owing to the emptiness of internal phenomena, the emptiness of external phenomena, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, the emptiness of emptiness, the emptiness of great extent, the emptiness of ultimate reality, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, the emptiness of the unlimited, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, the emptiness of nonexclusion, the emptiness of inherent nature, the emptiness of all phenomena, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, the emptiness of nonentities, the emptiness of essential nature, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities. Śāradvatīputra, tactile consciousness is nonexistent owing to the emptiness of internal phenomena, the emptiness of external phenomena, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, the emptiness of emptiness, the emptiness of great extent, the emptiness of ultimate reality, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, the emptiness [F.195.b] of the unlimited, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, the emptiness of nonexclusion, the emptiness of inherent nature, the emptiness of all phenomena, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, the emptiness of nonentities, the emptiness of essential nature, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities. Śāradvatīputra, mental consciousness is nonexistent owing to the emptiness of internal phenomena, the emptiness of external phenomena, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, the emptiness of emptiness, the emptiness of great extent, the emptiness of ultimate reality, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, the emptiness of the unlimited, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, the emptiness of nonexclusion, the emptiness of inherent nature, the emptiness of all phenomena, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, the emptiness of nonentities, the emptiness of essential nature, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities.

6.194 “Śāradvatīputra, visually compounded sensory contact is nonexistent owing to the emptiness of internal phenomena, the emptiness of external phenomena, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, the emptiness of emptiness, the emptiness of great extent, the emptiness of ultimate reality, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, the emptiness of the unlimited, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, the emptiness of nonexclusion, the emptiness of inherent nature, the emptiness of all phenomena, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, the emptiness of nonentities, the emptiness of essential nature, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities. Śāradvatīputra, aurally compounded sensory contact is nonexistent owing to the emptiness of internal phenomena, the emptiness of external phenomena, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, [F.196.a] the emptiness of emptiness, the emptiness of great extent, the emptiness of ultimate reality, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, the emptiness of the unlimited, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, the emptiness of nonexclusion, the emptiness of inherent nature, the emptiness of all phenomena, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, the emptiness of nonentities, the emptiness of essential nature, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities. Śāradvatīputra, nasally compounded sensory contact is nonexistent owing to the emptiness of internal phenomena, the emptiness of external phenomena, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, the emptiness of emptiness, the emptiness of great extent, the emptiness of ultimate reality, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, the emptiness of the unlimited, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, the emptiness of nonexclusion, the emptiness of inherent nature, the emptiness of all phenomena, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, the emptiness of nonentities, the emptiness of essential nature, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities. Śāradvatīputra, lingually compounded sensory contact is nonexistent owing to the emptiness of internal phenomena, the emptiness of external phenomena, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, the emptiness of emptiness, the emptiness of great extent, the emptiness of ultimate reality, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, the emptiness of the unlimited, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, the emptiness of nonexclusion, the emptiness of inherent nature, the emptiness of all phenomena, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, the emptiness of [F.196.b] nonentities, the emptiness of essential nature, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities. Śāradvatīputra, corporeally compounded sensory contact is nonexistent owing to the emptiness of internal phenomena, the emptiness of external phenomena, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, the emptiness of emptiness, the emptiness of great extent, the emptiness of ultimate reality, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, the emptiness of the unlimited, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, the emptiness of nonexclusion, the emptiness of inherent nature, the emptiness of all phenomena, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, the emptiness of nonentities, the emptiness of essential nature, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities. Śāradvatīputra, mentally compounded sensory contact is nonexistent owing to the emptiness of internal phenomena, the emptiness of external phenomena, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, the emptiness of emptiness, the emptiness of great extent, the emptiness of ultimate reality, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, the emptiness of the unlimited, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, the emptiness of nonexclusion, the emptiness of inherent nature, the emptiness of all phenomena, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, the emptiness of nonentities, the emptiness of essential nature, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities.

6.195 “Śāradvatīputra, feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact are nonexistent owing to the emptiness of internal phenomena, the emptiness of external phenomena, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, the emptiness of emptiness, the emptiness of great extent, the emptiness of ultimate reality, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, the emptiness of the unlimited, [F.197.a] the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, the emptiness of nonexclusion, the emptiness of inherent nature, the emptiness of all phenomena, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, the emptiness of nonentities, the emptiness of essential nature, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities. Śāradvatīputra, feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact are nonexistent owing to the emptiness of internal phenomena, the emptiness of external phenomena, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, the emptiness of emptiness, the emptiness of great extent, the emptiness of ultimate reality, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, the emptiness of the unlimited, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, the emptiness of nonexclusion, the emptiness of inherent nature, the emptiness of all phenomena, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, the emptiness of nonentities, the emptiness of essential nature, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities. Śāradvatīputra, feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact are nonexistent owing to the emptiness of internal phenomena, the emptiness of external phenomena, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, the emptiness of emptiness, the emptiness of great extent, the emptiness of ultimate reality, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, the emptiness of the unlimited, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, the emptiness of nonexclusion, the emptiness of inherent nature, the emptiness of all phenomena, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, the emptiness of nonentities, the emptiness of essential nature, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities. Śāradvatīputra, feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact [F.197.b] are nonexistent owing to the emptiness of internal phenomena, the emptiness of external phenomena, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, the emptiness of emptiness, the emptiness of great extent, the emptiness of ultimate reality, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, the emptiness of the unlimited, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, the emptiness of nonexclusion, the emptiness of inherent nature, the emptiness of all phenomena, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, the emptiness of nonentities, the emptiness of essential nature, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities. Śāradvatīputra, feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact are nonexistent owing to the emptiness of internal phenomena, the emptiness of external phenomena, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, the emptiness of emptiness, the emptiness of great extent, the emptiness of ultimate reality, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, the emptiness of the unlimited, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, the emptiness of nonexclusion, the emptiness of inherent nature, the emptiness of all phenomena, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, the emptiness of nonentities, the emptiness of essential nature, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities. Śāradvatīputra, feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact are nonexistent owing to the emptiness of internal phenomena, the emptiness of external phenomena, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, the emptiness of emptiness, the emptiness of great extent, the emptiness of ultimate reality, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, the emptiness of the unlimited, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, the emptiness of nonexclusion, [F.198.a] the emptiness of inherent nature, the emptiness of all phenomena, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, the emptiness of nonentities, the emptiness of essential nature, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities.

6.196      “Śāradvatīputra, the earth element is nonexistent owing to the emptiness of internal phenomena, the emptiness of external phenomena, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, the emptiness of emptiness, the emptiness of great extent, the emptiness of ultimate reality, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, the emptiness of the unlimited, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, the emptiness of nonexclusion, the emptiness of inherent nature, the emptiness of all phenomena, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, the emptiness of nonentities, the emptiness of essential nature, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities. Śāradvatīputra, the water element is nonexistent owing to the emptiness of internal phenomena, the emptiness of external phenomena, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, the emptiness of emptiness, the emptiness of great extent, the emptiness of ultimate reality, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, the emptiness of the unlimited, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, the emptiness of nonexclusion, the emptiness of inherent nature, the emptiness of all phenomena, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, the emptiness of nonentities, the emptiness of essential nature, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities. Śāradvatīputra, the fire element is nonexistent owing to the emptiness of internal phenomena, the emptiness of external phenomena, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, the emptiness of emptiness, the emptiness of great extent, the emptiness of ultimate reality, [F.198.b] the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, the emptiness of the unlimited, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, the emptiness of nonexclusion, the emptiness of inherent nature, the emptiness of all phenomena, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, the emptiness of nonentities, the emptiness of essential nature, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities.” [B15]

6.197 “Śāradvatīputra, the wind element is nonexistent owing to the emptiness of internal phenomena, the emptiness of external phenomena, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, the emptiness of emptiness, the emptiness of great extent, the emptiness of ultimate reality, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, the emptiness of the unlimited, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, the emptiness of nonexclusion, the emptiness of inherent nature, the emptiness of all phenomena, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, the emptiness of nonentities, the emptiness of essential nature, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities. Śāradvatīputra, the space element is nonexistent owing to the emptiness of internal phenomena, the emptiness of external phenomena, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, the emptiness of emptiness, the emptiness of great extent, the emptiness of ultimate reality, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, the emptiness of the unlimited, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, the emptiness of nonexclusion, the emptiness of inherent nature, the emptiness of all phenomena, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, [F.199.a] the emptiness of nonentities, the emptiness of essential nature, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities. Śāradvatīputra, the consciousness element is nonexistent owing to the emptiness of internal phenomena, the emptiness of external phenomena, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, the emptiness of emptiness, the emptiness of great extent, the emptiness of ultimate reality, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, the emptiness of the unlimited, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, the emptiness of nonexclusion, the emptiness of inherent nature, the emptiness of all phenomena, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, the emptiness of nonentities, the emptiness of essential nature, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities.

6.198 “Śāradvatīputra, ignorance is nonexistent owing to the emptiness of internal phenomena, the emptiness of external phenomena, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, the emptiness of emptiness, the emptiness of great extent, the emptiness of ultimate reality, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, the emptiness of the unlimited, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, the emptiness of nonexclusion, the emptiness of inherent nature, the emptiness of all phenomena, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, the emptiness of nonentities, the emptiness of essential nature, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities. Śāradvatīputra, formative predispositions are nonexistent owing to the emptiness of internal phenomena, the emptiness of external phenomena, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, the emptiness of emptiness, the emptiness of great extent, the emptiness of ultimate reality, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, the emptiness of the unlimited, [F.199.b] the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, the emptiness of nonexclusion, the emptiness of inherent nature, the emptiness of all phenomena, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, the emptiness of nonentities, the emptiness of essential nature, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities. Śāradvatīputra, consciousness is nonexistent owing to the emptiness of internal phenomena, the emptiness of external phenomena, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, the emptiness of emptiness, the emptiness of great extent, the emptiness of ultimate reality, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, the emptiness of the unlimited, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, the emptiness of nonexclusion, the emptiness of inherent nature, the emptiness of all phenomena, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, the emptiness of nonentities, the emptiness of essential nature, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities. Śāradvatīputra, name and form are nonexistent owing to the emptiness of internal phenomena, the emptiness of external phenomena, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, the emptiness of emptiness, the emptiness of great extent, the emptiness of ultimate reality, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, the emptiness of the unlimited, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, the emptiness of nonexclusion, the emptiness of inherent nature, the emptiness of all phenomena, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, the emptiness of nonentities, the emptiness of essential nature, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities. Śāradvatīputra, the six sense fields are nonexistent owing to the emptiness of internal phenomena, the emptiness of external phenomena, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, [F.200.a] the emptiness of emptiness, the emptiness of great extent, the emptiness of ultimate reality, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, the emptiness of the unlimited, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, the emptiness of nonexclusion, the emptiness of inherent nature, the emptiness of all phenomena, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, the emptiness of nonentities, the emptiness of essential nature, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities. Śāradvatīputra, sensory contact is nonexistent owing to the emptiness of internal phenomena, the emptiness of external phenomena, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, the emptiness of emptiness, the emptiness of great extent, the emptiness of ultimate reality, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, the emptiness of the unlimited, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, the emptiness of nonexclusion, the emptiness of inherent nature, the emptiness of all phenomena, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, the emptiness of nonentities, the emptiness of essential nature, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities. Śāradvatīputra, sensation is nonexistent owing to the emptiness of internal phenomena, the emptiness of external phenomena, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, the emptiness of emptiness, the emptiness of great extent, the emptiness of ultimate reality, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, the emptiness of the unlimited, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, the emptiness of nonexclusion, the emptiness of inherent nature, the emptiness of all phenomena, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, the emptiness of nonentities, [F.200.b] the emptiness of essential nature, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities. Śāradvatīputra, craving is nonexistent owing to the emptiness of internal phenomena, the emptiness of external phenomena, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, the emptiness of emptiness, the emptiness of great extent, the emptiness of ultimate reality, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, the emptiness of the unlimited, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, the emptiness of nonexclusion, the emptiness of inherent nature, the emptiness of all phenomena, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, the emptiness of nonentities, the emptiness of essential nature, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities. Śāradvatīputra, grasping is nonexistent owing to the emptiness of internal phenomena, the emptiness of external phenomena, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, the emptiness of emptiness, the emptiness of great extent, the emptiness of ultimate reality, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, the emptiness of the unlimited, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, the emptiness of nonexclusion, the emptiness of inherent nature, the emptiness of all phenomena, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, the emptiness of nonentities, the emptiness of essential nature, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities. Śāradvatīputra, the rebirth process is nonexistent owing to the emptiness of internal phenomena, the emptiness of external phenomena, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, the emptiness of emptiness, the emptiness of great extent, the emptiness of ultimate reality, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, the emptiness of the unlimited, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, the emptiness of nonexclusion, the emptiness of inherent nature, the emptiness of all phenomena, [F.201.a] the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, the emptiness of nonentities, the emptiness of essential nature, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities. Śāradvatīputra, birth is nonexistent owing to the emptiness of internal phenomena, the emptiness of external phenomena, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, the emptiness of emptiness, the emptiness of great extent, the emptiness of ultimate reality, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, the emptiness of the unlimited, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, the emptiness of nonexclusion, the emptiness of inherent nature, the emptiness of all phenomena, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, the emptiness of nonentities, the emptiness of essential nature, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities. Śāradvatīputra, aging and death are nonexistent owing to the emptiness of internal phenomena, the emptiness of external phenomena, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, the emptiness of emptiness, the emptiness of great extent, the emptiness of ultimate reality, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, the emptiness of the unlimited, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, the emptiness of nonexclusion, the emptiness of inherent nature, the emptiness of all phenomena, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, the emptiness of nonentities, the emptiness of essential nature, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities.

6.199 “Śāradvatīputra, the perfection of generosity is nonexistent owing to the emptiness of internal phenomena, the emptiness of external phenomena, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, the emptiness of emptiness, the emptiness of great extent, the emptiness of ultimate reality, the emptiness of [F.201.b] conditioned phenomena, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, the emptiness of the unlimited, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, the emptiness of nonexclusion, the emptiness of inherent nature, the emptiness of all phenomena, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, the emptiness of nonentities, the emptiness of essential nature, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities. Śāradvatīputra, the perfection of ethical discipline is nonexistent owing to the emptiness of internal phenomena, the emptiness of external phenomena, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, the emptiness of emptiness, the emptiness of great extent, the emptiness of ultimate reality, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, the emptiness of the unlimited, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, the emptiness of nonexclusion, the emptiness of inherent nature, the emptiness of all phenomena, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, the emptiness of nonentities, the emptiness of essential nature, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities. Śāradvatīputra, the perfection of tolerance is nonexistent owing to the emptiness of internal phenomena, the emptiness of external phenomena, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, the emptiness of emptiness, the emptiness of great extent, the emptiness of ultimate reality, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, the emptiness of the unlimited, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, the emptiness of nonexclusion, the emptiness of inherent nature, the emptiness of all phenomena, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, the emptiness of nonentities, the emptiness of essential nature, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities. Śāradvatīputra, [F.202.a] the perfection of perseverance is nonexistent owing to the emptiness of internal phenomena, the emptiness of external phenomena, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, the emptiness of emptiness, the emptiness of great extent, the emptiness of ultimate reality, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, the emptiness of the unlimited, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, the emptiness of nonexclusion, the emptiness of inherent nature, the emptiness of all phenomena, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, the emptiness of nonentities, the emptiness of essential nature, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities. Śāradvatīputra, the perfection of meditative concentration is nonexistent owing to the emptiness of internal phenomena, the emptiness of external phenomena, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, the emptiness of emptiness, the emptiness of great extent, the emptiness of ultimate reality, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, the emptiness of the unlimited, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, the emptiness of nonexclusion, the emptiness of inherent nature, the emptiness of all phenomena, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, the emptiness of nonentities, the emptiness of essential nature, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities. Śāradvatīputra, the perfection of wisdom is nonexistent owing to the emptiness of internal phenomena, the emptiness of external phenomena, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, the emptiness of emptiness, the emptiness of great extent, the emptiness of ultimate reality, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, the emptiness of the unlimited, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, the emptiness of nonexclusion, the emptiness of inherent nature, [F.202.b] the emptiness of all phenomena, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, the emptiness of nonentities, the emptiness of essential nature, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities.

6.200 “Śāradvatīputra, the applications of mindfulness are nonexistent owing to the emptiness of internal phenomena, the emptiness of external phenomena, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, the emptiness of emptiness, the emptiness of great extent, the emptiness of ultimate reality, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, the emptiness of the unlimited, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, the emptiness of nonexclusion, the emptiness of inherent nature, the emptiness of all phenomena, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, the emptiness of nonentities, the emptiness of essential nature, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities. Śāradvatīputra, the correct exertions are nonexistent owing to the emptiness of internal phenomena, the emptiness of external phenomena, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, the emptiness of emptiness, the emptiness of great extent, the emptiness of ultimate reality, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, the emptiness of the unlimited, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, the emptiness of nonexclusion, the emptiness of inherent nature, the emptiness of all phenomena, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, the emptiness of nonentities, the emptiness of essential nature, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities. Śāradvatīputra, the supports for miraculous ability are nonexistent owing to the emptiness of internal phenomena, the emptiness of external phenomena, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, the emptiness of emptiness, the emptiness of great extent, the emptiness of ultimate reality, [F.203.a] the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, the emptiness of the unlimited, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, the emptiness of nonexclusion, the emptiness of inherent nature, the emptiness of all phenomena, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, the emptiness of nonentities, the emptiness of essential nature, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities. Śāradvatīputra, the faculties are nonexistent owing to the emptiness of internal phenomena, the emptiness of external phenomena, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, the emptiness of emptiness, the emptiness of great extent, the emptiness of ultimate reality, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, the emptiness of the unlimited, the

emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, the emptiness of nonexclusion, the emptiness of inherent nature, the emptiness of all phenomena, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, the emptiness of nonentities, the emptiness of essential nature, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities. Śāradvatīputra, the powers are nonexistent owing to the emptiness of internal phenomena, the emptiness of external phenomena, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, the emptiness of emptiness, the emptiness of great extent, the emptiness of ultimate reality, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, the emptiness of the unlimited, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, the emptiness of nonexclusion, the emptiness of inherent nature, the emptiness of all phenomena, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, the emptiness of nonentities, the emptiness of essential nature, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities. [F.203.b] Śāradvatīputra, the branches of enlightenment are nonexistent owing to the emptiness of internal phenomena, the emptiness of external phenomena, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, the emptiness of emptiness, the emptiness of great extent, the emptiness of ultimate reality, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, the emptiness of the unlimited, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, the emptiness of nonexclusion, the emptiness of inherent nature, the emptiness of all phenomena, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, the emptiness of nonentities, the emptiness of essential nature, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities. Śāradvatīputra, the noble eightfold path is nonexistent owing to the emptiness of internal phenomena, the emptiness of external phenomena, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, the emptiness of emptiness, the emptiness of great extent, the emptiness of ultimate reality, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, the emptiness of the unlimited, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, the emptiness of nonexclusion, the emptiness of inherent nature, the emptiness of all phenomena, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, the emptiness of nonentities, the emptiness of essential nature, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities.

6.201      “Śāradvatīputra, the truths of the noble ones are nonexistent owing to the emptiness of internal phenomena, the emptiness of external phenomena, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, the emptiness of emptiness, the emptiness of great extent, the emptiness of ultimate reality, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, the emptiness of the unlimited, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, the emptiness of nonexclusion, the emptiness of inherent nature, the emptiness of [F.204.a] all phenomena, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, the emptiness of nonentities, the emptiness of essential nature, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities. Śāradvatīputra, the meditative concentrations are nonexistent owing to the emptiness of internal phenomena, the emptiness of external phenomena, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, the emptiness of emptiness, the emptiness of great extent, the emptiness of ultimate reality, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, the emptiness of the unlimited, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, the emptiness of nonexclusion, the emptiness of inherent nature, the emptiness of all phenomena, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, the emptiness of nonentities, the emptiness of essential nature, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities. Śāradvatīputra, the immeasurable attitudes are nonexistent owing to the emptiness of internal phenomena, the emptiness of external phenomena, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, the emptiness of emptiness, the emptiness of great extent, the emptiness of ultimate reality, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, the emptiness of the unlimited, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, the emptiness of nonexclusion, the emptiness of inherent nature, the emptiness of all phenomena, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, the emptiness of nonentities, the emptiness of essential nature, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities. Śāradvatīputra, the formless absorptions are nonexistent owing to the emptiness of internal phenomena, the emptiness of external phenomena, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, the emptiness of emptiness, the emptiness of [F.204.b] great extent, the emptiness of ultimate reality, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, the emptiness of the unlimited, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, the emptiness of nonexclusion, the emptiness of inherent nature, the emptiness of all phenomena, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, the emptiness of nonentities, the emptiness of essential nature, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities. Śāradvatīputra, the formless absorptions are nonexistent owing to the emptiness of internal phenomena, the emptiness of external phenomena, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, the emptiness of emptiness, the emptiness of great extent, the emptiness of ultimate reality, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, the emptiness of the unlimited, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, the emptiness of nonexclusion, the emptiness of inherent nature, the emptiness of all phenomena, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, the emptiness of nonentities, the emptiness of essential nature, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities. Śāradvatīputra, the eight liberations are nonexistent owing to the emptiness of internal phenomena, the emptiness of external phenomena, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, the emptiness of emptiness, the emptiness of great extent, the emptiness of ultimate reality, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, the emptiness of the unlimited, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, the emptiness of nonexclusion, the emptiness of inherent nature, the emptiness of all phenomena, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, the emptiness of nonentities, the emptiness of essential nature, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities. Śāradvatīputra, the nine serial steps of meditative absorption are nonexistent owing to the emptiness of internal phenomena, the emptiness of external phenomena, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, the emptiness of emptiness, the emptiness of great extent, the emptiness of ultimate reality, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, the emptiness of the unlimited, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, the emptiness of nonexclusion, the emptiness of inherent nature, [F.205.a] the emptiness of all phenomena, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, the emptiness of nonentities, the emptiness of essential nature, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities. Śāradvatīputra, the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation are nonexistent owing to the emptiness of internal phenomena, the emptiness of external phenomena, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, the emptiness of emptiness, the emptiness of great extent, the emptiness of ultimate reality, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, the emptiness of the unlimited, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, the emptiness of nonexclusion, the emptiness of inherent nature, the emptiness of all phenomena, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, the emptiness of nonentities, the emptiness of essential nature, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities. Śāradvatīputra, the extrasensory powers are nonexistent owing to the emptiness of internal phenomena, the emptiness of external phenomena, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, the emptiness of emptiness, the emptiness of great extent, the emptiness of ultimate reality, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, the emptiness of the unlimited, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, the emptiness of nonexclusion, the emptiness of inherent nature, the emptiness of all phenomena, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, the emptiness of nonentities, the emptiness of essential nature, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities. Śāradvatīputra, the meditative stabilities are nonexistent owing to the emptiness of internal phenomena, the emptiness of external phenomena, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, the emptiness of emptiness, the emptiness of great extent, the emptiness of ultimate reality, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, the emptiness of the unlimited, [F.205.b] the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, the emptiness of nonexclusion, the emptiness of inherent nature, the emptiness of all phenomena, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, the emptiness of nonentities, the emptiness of essential nature, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities. Śāradvatīputra, the dhāraṇī gateways are nonexistent owing to the emptiness of internal phenomena, the emptiness of external phenomena, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, the emptiness of emptiness, the emptiness of great extent, the emptiness of ultimate reality, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, the emptiness of the unlimited, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, the emptiness of nonexclusion, the emptiness of inherent nature, the emptiness of all phenomena, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, the emptiness of nonentities, the emptiness of essential nature, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities.

6.202 “Śāradvatīputra, the ten powers of the tathāgatas are nonexistent owing to the emptiness of internal phenomena, the emptiness of external phenomena, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, [F.206.a] the emptiness of emptiness, the emptiness of great extent, the emptiness of ultimate reality, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, the emptiness of the unlimited, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, the emptiness of nonexclusion, the emptiness of inherent nature, the emptiness of all phenomena, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, the emptiness of nonentities, the emptiness of essential nature, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities. Śāradvatīputra, the four fearlessnesses are nonexistent owing to the emptiness of internal phenomena, the emptiness of external phenomena, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, the emptiness of emptiness, the emptiness of great extent, the emptiness of ultimate reality, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, the emptiness of the unlimited, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, the emptiness of nonexclusion, the emptiness of inherent nature, the emptiness of all phenomena, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, the emptiness of nonentities, the emptiness of essential nature, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities. Śāradvatīputra, the four kinds of exact knowledge are nonexistent owing to the emptiness of internal phenomena, the emptiness of external phenomena, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, the emptiness of emptiness, the emptiness of great extent, the emptiness of ultimate reality, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, the emptiness of the unlimited, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, the emptiness of nonexclusion, the emptiness of inherent nature, the emptiness of all phenomena, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, the emptiness of nonentities, the emptiness of essential nature, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities. Śāradvatīputra, great compassion<sup>338</sup> is nonexistent owing to the emptiness of internal phenomena, the emptiness of external phenomena, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, the emptiness of emptiness, the emptiness of great extent, the emptiness of ultimate reality, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, the emptiness of the unlimited, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, the emptiness of nonexclusion, the emptiness of inherent nature, the emptiness of all phenomena, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, the emptiness of [F.206.b] nonentities, the emptiness of essential nature, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities. Śāradvatīputra, the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas are nonexistent owing to the emptiness of internal phenomena, the emptiness of external phenomena, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, the emptiness of emptiness, the emptiness of great extent, the emptiness of ultimate reality, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, the emptiness of the unlimited, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, the emptiness of nonexclusion, the emptiness of inherent nature, the emptiness of all phenomena, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, the emptiness of nonentities, the emptiness of essential nature, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities.

6.203     “There, foolish ordinary people, through their fixation on the nonexistent, are fixated on their cravings. By imagining the nonexistent, they are fixated on the nonexistent,<sup>339</sup> and through adherence to the two extremes of eternalism and nihilism, they do not know, and they do not see. After imagining those phenomena that are nonexistent, they become fixated on name and form. They become fixated on the perfection of generosity, become fixated on the perfection of ethical discipline, become fixated on the perfection of tolerance, become fixated on the perfection of perseverance, become fixated on the perfection of meditative concentration, and become fixated on the perfection of wisdom; they become fixated on the emptiness of internal phenomena, become fixated on the emptiness of external phenomena, become fixated on the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, become fixated on the emptiness of emptiness, become fixated on the emptiness of great extent, become fixated on the emptiness of [F.207.a] ultimate reality, become fixated on the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, become fixated on the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, become fixated on the emptiness of the unlimited, become fixated on the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, become fixated on the emptiness of nonexclusion, become fixated on the emptiness of inherent nature, become fixated on the emptiness of all phenomena, become fixated on the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, become fixated on the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, become fixated on the emptiness of nonentities, become fixated on the emptiness of essential nature, and become fixated on the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities; they become fixated on the applications of mindfulness, become fixated on the correct exertions, become fixated on the supports for miraculous ability, become fixated on the faculties, become fixated on the powers, become fixated on the branches of enlightenment, and become fixated on the noble eightfold path; they become fixated on the truths of the noble ones, become fixated on the meditative concentrations, become fixated on the immeasurable attitudes, become fixated on the formless absorptions, become fixated on the liberations, become fixated on the serial steps of meditative absorption, become fixated on the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation, become fixated on the extrasensory powers, become fixated on the meditative stabilities, and become fixated on the dhāraṇī gateways; and they become fixated on the powers of the tathāgatas, become fixated on the fearlessnesses, become fixated on the kinds of [F.207.b] exact knowledge, become fixated on great compassion, and become fixated on the distinct qualities of the buddhas.

6.204 “Since, owing to such a fixation on these phenomena, they falsely imagine phenomena that are nonexistent, they do not know, and they do not see. If you ask what they do not know and do not see, they neither know nor see physical forms, neither know nor see feelings, neither know nor see perceptions, neither know nor see formative predispositions, and neither know nor see consciousness; neither know nor see the eyes, neither know nor see the ears, neither know nor see the nose, neither know nor see the tongue, neither know nor see the body, and neither know nor see the mental faculty; neither know nor see sights, neither know nor see sounds, neither know nor see odors, neither know nor see tastes, neither know nor see tangibles, and neither know nor see mental phenomena; neither know nor see visual consciousness, neither know nor see auditory consciousness, neither know nor see olfactory consciousness, neither know nor see gustatory consciousness, neither know nor see tactile consciousness, and neither know nor see mental consciousness; neither know nor see visually compounded sensory contact, neither know nor see aurally compounded sensory contact, neither know nor see nasally compounded sensory contact, neither know nor see lingually compounded sensory contact, neither know nor see corporeally compounded sensory contact, and neither know nor see mentally compounded sensory contact; neither know nor see feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact, neither know nor see feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact, neither know nor see feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact, neither know nor see feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact, neither know nor see [F.208.a] feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact, and neither know nor see feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact; neither know nor see the earth element, neither know nor see the water element, neither know nor see the fire element, neither know nor see the wind element, neither know nor see the space element, and neither know nor see the consciousness element; neither know nor see ignorance, neither know nor see formative predispositions, neither know nor see consciousness, neither know nor see name and form, neither know nor see the six sense fields, neither know nor see sensory contact, neither know nor see sensation, neither know nor see craving, neither know nor see grasping, neither know nor see the rebirth process, neither know nor see birth, and neither know nor see aging and death; neither know nor see the perfection of generosity, neither know nor see the perfection of ethical discipline, neither know nor see the perfection of tolerance, neither know nor see the perfection of perseverance, neither know nor see the perfection of meditative concentration, and neither know nor see the perfection of wisdom; neither know nor see the emptiness of internal phenomena, neither know nor see the emptiness of external phenomena, neither know nor see the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, neither know nor see the emptiness of emptiness, neither know nor see the emptiness of great extent, neither know nor see the emptiness of ultimate reality, neither know nor see the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, neither know nor see the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, neither know nor see the emptiness of the unlimited, neither know nor see the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, neither know nor see the emptiness of nonexclusion, neither know nor see the emptiness of inherent nature, neither know nor see the emptiness of [F.208.b] all phenomena, neither know nor see the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, neither know nor see the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, neither know nor see the emptiness of nonentities, neither know nor see the emptiness of essential nature, and neither know nor see the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities; neither know nor see the four applications of mindfulness, neither know nor see the four correct exertions, neither know nor see the four supports for miraculous ability, neither know nor see the five faculties, neither know nor see the five powers, neither know nor see the seven branches of enlightenment, and neither know nor see the noble eightfold path; neither know nor see the truths of the noble ones, neither know nor see the meditative concentrations, neither know nor see the immeasurable attitudes, neither know nor see the four formless absorptions, neither know nor see the eight liberations, neither know nor see the nine serial steps of meditative absorption, neither know nor see the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation, neither know nor see the extrasensory powers, neither know nor see the meditative stabilities, and neither know nor see the dhāraṇī gateways; and neither know nor see the ten powers of the tathāgatas, neither know nor see the four fearlessnesses, neither know nor see the four kinds of exact knowledge, neither know nor see great compassion, and neither know nor see the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas.

6.205     “This is why they come to be styled ‘foolish ordinary people.’ These people will not be emancipated, and if you ask what it is that they will not be emancipated from, they will not be emancipated from the realm of desire. They will not be emancipated from [F.209.a] the realm of form. They will not be emancipated from the realm of formlessness. They will not be emancipated from the level of the śrāvakas, and they will not be emancipated from the level of the pratyekabuddhas.

6.206 “They lack conviction. If you ask how they lack conviction, they lack the conviction that physical forms are empty of physical form, lack the conviction that feelings are empty of feeling, lack the conviction that perceptions are empty of perception, lack the conviction that formative predispositions are empty of formative predispositions, and lack the conviction that consciousness is empty of consciousness; lack the conviction that the eyes are empty of the eyes, lack the conviction that the ears are empty of the ears, lack the conviction that the nose is empty of the nose, lack the conviction that the tongue is empty of the tongue, lack the conviction that the body is empty of the body, and lack the conviction that the mental faculty is empty of the mental faculty; lack the conviction that sights are empty of sights, lack the conviction that sounds are empty of sounds, lack the conviction that odors are empty of odors, lack the conviction that tastes are empty of tastes, lack the conviction that tangibles are empty of a tangibles, and lack the conviction that mental phenomena are empty of mental phenomena; lack the conviction that visual consciousness is empty of visual consciousness, lack the conviction that auditory consciousness is empty of auditory consciousness, lack the conviction that olfactory consciousness is empty of olfactory consciousness, lack the conviction that gustatory consciousness is empty of gustatory consciousness, lack the conviction that tactile consciousness is empty of tactile consciousness, and lack the conviction that mental consciousness is empty of mental consciousness; lack the conviction that visually compounded sensory contact is empty of visually compounded sensory contact, lack the conviction that aurally compounded sensory contact is empty of [F.209.b] aurally compounded sensory contact, lack the conviction that nasally compounded sensory contact is empty of nasally compounded sensory contact, lack the conviction that lingually compounded sensory contact is empty of lingually compounded sensory contact, lack the conviction that corporeally compounded sensory contact is empty of corporeally compounded sensory contact, and lack the conviction that mentally compounded sensory contact is empty of mentally compounded sensory contact; lack the conviction that feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact are empty of feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact, lack the conviction that feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact are empty of feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact, lack the conviction that feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact are empty of feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact, lack the conviction that feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact are empty of feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact, lack the conviction that feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact are empty of feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact, and lack the conviction that feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact are empty of feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact; lack the conviction that the earth element is empty of the earth element, lack the conviction that the water element is empty of the water element, lack the conviction that the fire element is empty of the fire element, lack the conviction that the wind element is empty of the wind element, lack the conviction that the space element is empty of the space element, and lack the conviction that the consciousness element is empty of the consciousness element; lack the conviction that ignorance is empty of ignorance, lack the conviction that formative predispositions are empty of formative predispositions, lack the conviction that consciousness [F.210.a] is empty of consciousness, lack the conviction that name and form are empty of name and form, lack the conviction that the six sense fields are empty of the six sense fields, lack the conviction that sensory contact is empty of sensory contact, lack the conviction that sensation is empty of sensation, lack the conviction that craving is empty of craving, lack the conviction that grasping is empty of grasping, lack the conviction that the rebirth process is empty of the rebirth process, lack the conviction that birth is empty of birth, and lack the conviction that aging and death are empty of aging and death; lack the conviction that the perfection of generosity is empty of the perfection of generosity, lack the conviction that the perfection of ethical discipline is empty of the perfection of ethical discipline, lack the conviction that the perfection of tolerance is empty of the perfection of tolerance, lack the conviction that the perfection of perseverance is empty of the perfection of perseverance, lack the conviction that the perfection of meditative concentration is empty of the perfection of meditative concentration, and lack the conviction that the perfection of wisdom is empty of the perfection of wisdom; lack the conviction that the emptiness of internal phenomena is empty of the emptiness of internal phenomena, lack the conviction that the emptiness of external phenomena is empty of the emptiness of external phenomena, lack the conviction that the emptiness of external and internal phenomena is empty of the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, lack the conviction that the emptiness of emptiness is empty of the emptiness of emptiness, lack the conviction that the emptiness of great extent is empty of the emptiness of great extent, lack the conviction that the emptiness of ultimate reality is empty of the emptiness of ultimate reality, lack the conviction that the emptiness of conditioned phenomena is empty of the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, lack the conviction that [F.210.b] the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena is empty of the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, lack the conviction that the emptiness of the unlimited is empty of the emptiness of the unlimited, lack the conviction that the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end is empty of the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, lack the conviction that the emptiness of nonexclusion is empty of the emptiness of nonexclusion, lack the conviction that the emptiness of inherent nature is empty of the emptiness of inherent nature, lack the conviction that the emptiness of all phenomena is empty of the emptiness of all phenomena, lack the conviction that the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics is empty of the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, lack the conviction that the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended is empty of the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, lack the conviction that the emptiness of nonentities is empty of the emptiness of nonentities, lack the conviction that the emptiness of essential nature is empty of the emptiness of essential nature, and lack the conviction that the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities is empty of the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities; lack the conviction that the four applications of mindfulness are empty of the applications of mindfulness, lack the conviction that the four correct exertions are empty of the correct exertions, lack the conviction that the four supports for miraculous ability are empty of the supports for miraculous ability, lack the conviction that the five faculties are empty of the faculties, lack the conviction that the five powers are empty of the powers, lack the conviction that the seven branches of enlightenment are empty of the branches of enlightenment, and lack the conviction that the noble eightfold path is empty of the noble eightfold path; [F.211.a] lack the conviction that the truths of the noble ones are empty of the truths of the noble ones, lack the conviction that the meditative concentrations are empty of the meditative concentrations, lack the conviction that the immeasurable attitudes are empty of the immeasurable attitudes, lack the conviction that the formless absorptions are empty of the formless absorptions, lack the conviction that the eight liberations are empty of the eight liberations, lack the conviction that the nine serial steps of meditative absorption are empty of the nine serial steps of meditative absorption, lack the conviction that the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation are empty of the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation, lack the conviction that the extrasensory powers are empty of the extrasensory powers, lack the conviction that the meditative stabilities are empty of the meditative stabilities, and lack the conviction that the dhāraṇī gateways are empty of the dhāraṇī gateways; lack the conviction that the ten powers of the tathāgatas are empty of the ten powers of the tathāgatas, lack the conviction that the four fearlessnesses are empty of the four fearlessnesses, lack the conviction that the four kinds of exact knowledge are empty of the four kinds of exact knowledge, lack the conviction that great compassion is empty of great compassion, and lack the conviction that the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas are empty of the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas; and lack the conviction that the fruit of having entered the stream is empty of the fruit of having entered the stream, [F.211.b] lack the conviction that the fruit of once-returner is empty of the fruit of once-returner, lack the conviction that the fruit of non-returner is empty of the fruit of non-returner, lack the conviction that arhatship is empty of arhatship, lack the conviction that individual enlightenment is empty of individual enlightenment, lack the conviction that the knowledge of the aspects of the path is empty of the knowledge of the aspects of the path, and lack the conviction that all-aspect omniscience is empty of all-aspect omniscience.

6.207 “Also, they are not stable. If you ask what it is in which they are not stable, they are not stable in the perfection of generosity. They are not stable in the perfection of ethical discipline. They are not stable in the perfection of tolerance. They are not stable in the perfection of perseverance. They are not stable in the perfection of meditative concentration. They are not stable in the perfection of wisdom. They are not stable in the emptiness of internal phenomena, are not stable in the emptiness of external phenomena, are not stable in the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, are not stable in the emptiness of emptiness, are not stable in the emptiness of great extent, are not stable in the emptiness of ultimate reality, are not stable in the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, are not stable in the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, are not stable in the emptiness of the unlimited, are not stable in the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, are not stable in the emptiness of nonexclusion, are not stable in the emptiness of inherent nature, are not stable in the emptiness of all phenomena, are not stable in the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, are not stable in the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, are not stable in the emptiness of [F.212.a] nonentities, are not stable in the emptiness of essential nature, and are not stable in the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities. They are not stable in the applications of mindfulness, are not stable in the correct exertions, are not stable in the supports for miraculous ability, are not stable in the faculties, are not stable in the powers, are not stable in the branches of enlightenment, and are not stable in the noble eightfold path; are not stable in the truths of the noble ones, are not stable in the meditative concentrations, are not stable in the immeasurable attitudes, are not stable in the formless absorptions, are not stable in the eight liberations, are not stable in the nine serial steps of meditative absorption, are not stable in the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation, are not stable in the extrasensory powers, are not stable in the meditative stabilities, and are not stable in the dhāraṇī gateways; and are not stable in the ten powers of the tathāgatas, are not stable in the four fearlessnesses, are not stable in the four kinds of exact knowledge, are not stable in great loving kindness, are not stable in great compassion, and are not stable in the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas.

6.208      “They are fixated. If you ask how they are fixated, they are fixated on physical forms, fixated on feelings, fixated on perceptions, fixated on formative predispositions, and fixated on consciousness. [F.212.b] They are fixated on the eyes, are fixated on the ears, are fixated on the nose, are fixated on the tongue, are fixated on the body, and are fixated on the mental faculty; are fixated on sights, are fixated on sounds, are fixated on odors, are fixated on tastes, are fixated on tangibles, and are fixated on mental phenomena; are fixated on the sensory element of the eyes, are fixated on the sensory element of sights, and are fixated on the sensory element of visual consciousness; are fixated on the sensory element of the ears, are fixated on the sensory element of sounds, and are fixated on the sensory element of auditory consciousness; are fixated on the sensory element of the nose, are fixated on the sensory element of odors, and are fixated on the sensory element of olfactory consciousness; are fixated on the sensory element of the tongue, are fixated on the sensory element of tastes, and are fixated on the sensory element of gustatory consciousness; are fixated on the sensory element of the body, are fixated on the sensory element of tangibles, and are fixated on the sensory element of tactile consciousness; and are fixated on the sensory element of the mental faculty, are fixated on the sensory element of mental phenomena, and are fixated on the sensory element of mental consciousness. They are fixated on desire, hatred, and delusion. They are fixated on opinions. They are fixated on ignorance, are fixated on formative predispositions, are fixated on consciousness, are fixated on name and form, [F.213.a] are fixated on the six sense fields, are fixated on sensory contact, are fixated on sensation, are fixated on craving, are fixated on grasping, are fixated on the rebirth process, are fixated on birth, and are fixated on aging and death. They are fixated on the perfection of generosity, are fixated on the perfection of ethical discipline, are fixated on the perfection of tolerance, are fixated on the perfection of perseverance, are fixated on the perfection of meditative concentration, and are fixated on the perfection of wisdom; are fixated on the emptiness of internal phenomena, are fixated on the emptiness of external phenomena, are fixated on the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, are fixated on the emptiness of emptiness, are fixated on the emptiness of great extent, are fixated on the emptiness of ultimate reality, are fixated on the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, are fixated on the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, are fixated on the emptiness of the unlimited, are fixated on the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, are fixated on the emptiness of nonexclusion, are fixated on the emptiness of inherent nature, are fixated on the emptiness of all phenomena, are fixated on the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, are fixated on the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, are fixated on the emptiness of nonentities, are fixated on the emptiness of essential nature, and are fixated on and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities; are fixated on the applications of mindfulness, [F.213.b] are fixated on the correct exertions, are fixated on the supports for miraculous ability, are fixated on the faculties, are fixated on the powers, are fixated on the branches of enlightenment, and are fixated on the noble eightfold path; are fixated on the truths of the noble ones, are fixated on the meditative concentrations, are fixated on the immeasurable attitudes, are fixated on the four formless absorptions, are fixated on the eight liberations, are fixated on the nine serial steps of meditative absorption, are fixated on the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation, are fixated on the extrasensory powers, are fixated on the meditative stabilities, and are fixated on the dhāraṇī gateways; and are fixated on the ten powers of the tathāgatas, are fixated on the four fearlessnesses, are fixated on the four kinds of exact knowledge, are fixated on great loving kindness, are fixated on great compassion, and are fixated on the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas. They are fixated on the fruit of having entered the stream, are fixated on the fruit of once-returner, are fixated on the fruit of non-returner, are fixated on arhatship, are fixated on individual enlightenment, are fixated on the knowledge of the aspects of the path, are fixated on all-aspect omniscience, and are fixated on unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. This is why [F.214.a] they are called 'foolish.'

6.209       “Blessed Lord, are bodhisattva great beings who train accordingly not training in the perfection of wisdom, and will they not be emancipated in all-aspect omniscience?”

6.210       “Śāradvatīputra,” replied the Blessed One, “bodhisattva great beings who train accordingly do not train in the perfection of wisdom, and they will not be emancipated in all-aspect omniscience.”

6.211 “Blessed Lord, why do those bodhisattvas not train in the perfection of wisdom, and why will they not be emancipated in all-aspect omniscience?”

6.212 The Blessed One replied, “Here, Śāradvatīputra, bodhisattva great beings who are unskillful have conceived of and become fixated on the perfection of wisdom. They have conceived of and become fixated on the perfection of meditative concentration, conceived of and become fixated on the perfection of perseverance, conceived of and become fixated on the perfection of tolerance, conceived of and become fixated on the perfection of ethical discipline, and conceived of and become fixated on the perfection of generosity. They have conceived of and become fixated on the emptiness of internal phenomena, conceived of and become fixated on the emptiness of external phenomena, conceived of and become fixated on the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, conceived of and become fixated on the emptiness of emptiness, conceived of and become fixated on the emptiness of great extent, conceived of and become fixated on the emptiness of ultimate reality, conceived of and become fixated on the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, conceived of and become fixated on the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, conceived of and become fixated on the emptiness of the unlimited, conceived of and become [F.214.b] fixated on the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, conceived of and become fixated on the emptiness of nonexclusion, conceived of and become fixated on the emptiness of inherent nature, conceived of and become fixated on the emptiness of all phenomena, conceived of and become fixated on the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, conceived of and become fixated on the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, conceived of and become fixated on the emptiness of nonentities, conceived of and become fixated on the emptiness of essential nature, and conceived of and become fixated on the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities; conceived of and become fixated on the applications of mindfulness, conceived of and become fixated on the correct exertions, conceived of and become fixated on the supports for miraculous ability, conceived of and become fixated on the faculties, conceived of and become fixated on the powers, conceived of and become fixated on the branches of enlightenment, and conceived of and become fixated on the noble eightfold path; conceived of and become fixated on the truths of the noble ones, conceived of and become fixated on the meditative concentrations, conceived of and become fixated on the immeasurable attitudes, conceived of and become fixated on the four formless absorptions, conceived of and become fixated on the eight liberations, conceived of and become fixated on the nine serial steps of meditative absorption, conceived of and become fixated on the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation, conceived of and become fixated on the extrasensory powers, conceived of and become fixated on the meditative stabilities, and conceived of and become fixated on the dhāraṇī gateways; and conceived of and become fixated on the ten powers of the tathāgatas, conceived of and become fixated on [F.215.a] the four fearlessnesses, conceived of and become fixated on the four kinds of exact knowledge, conceived of and become fixated on great compassion, and conceived of and become fixated on the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas. They have conceived of and become fixated on omniscience, conceived of and become fixated on the knowledge of the aspects of the path, and conceived of and become fixated on all-aspect omniscience.

6.213 “Śāradvatīputra, for these reasons, those bodhisattva great beings do not train in the perfection of wisdom, and they will not be emancipated<sup>340</sup> in all-aspect omniscience.”

6.214 “In that case, then, Blessed Lord, by means of which aspect do bodhisattva great beings train in the perfection of wisdom, and how do they, when they have trained, become emancipated in all-aspect omniscience?”

6.215 “Śāradvatīputra,” replied the Blessed One, “when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom, they do not apprehend and do not observe the perfection of wisdom, and, Śāradvatīputra, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom in that manner, they become emancipated in all-aspect omniscience by way of not apprehending anything. Śāradvatīputra, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of meditative concentration, they do not apprehend and do not observe the perfection of meditative concentration, and, Śāradvatīputra, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom in that manner, they become emancipated in all-aspect omniscience by way of not apprehending anything. Śāradvatīputra, [F.215.b] when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of perseverance, they do not apprehend and do not observe the perfection of perseverance, and, Śāradvatīputra, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom in that manner, they become emancipated in all-aspect omniscience by way of not apprehending anything. Śāradvatīputra, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of tolerance, they do not apprehend and do not observe the perfection of tolerance, and, Śāradvatīputra, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom in that manner, they become emancipated in all-aspect omniscience by way of not apprehending anything. Śāradvatīputra, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of ethical discipline, they do not apprehend and do not observe the perfection of ethical discipline, and, Śāradvatīputra, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom in that manner, they become emancipated in all-aspect omniscience by way of not apprehending anything. Śāradvatīputra, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of generosity, they do not apprehend and do not observe the perfection of generosity, and, Śāradvatīputra, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom in that manner, they become emancipated in all-aspect omniscience by way of not apprehending anything. [F.216.a] [B16]

6.216 “Śāradvatīputra, when bodhisattva great beings practice the emptiness of internal phenomena, they do not apprehend and do not observe the emptiness of internal phenomena, and, Śāradvatīputra, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom in that manner, they become emancipated in all-aspect omniscience by way of not apprehending anything. Śāradvatīputra, when bodhisattva great beings practice the emptiness of external phenomena, they do not apprehend and do not observe the emptiness of external phenomena, and, Śāradvatīputra, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom in that manner, they become emancipated in all-aspect omniscience by way of not apprehending anything. Śāradvatīputra, when bodhisattva great beings practice the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, they do not apprehend and do not observe the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, and, Śāradvatīputra, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom in that manner, they become emancipated in all-aspect omniscience by way of not apprehending anything. Śāradvatīputra, when bodhisattva great beings practice the emptiness of emptiness, they do not apprehend and do not observe the emptiness of emptiness, and, Śāradvatīputra, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom in that manner, they become emancipated in all-aspect omniscience by way of not apprehending anything. Śāradvatīputra, when bodhisattva great beings practice the emptiness of great extent, they do not apprehend and do not observe the emptiness of great extent, [F.216.b] and, Śāradvatīputra, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom in that manner, they become emancipated in all-aspect omniscience by way of not apprehending anything. Śāradvatīputra, when bodhisattva great beings practice the emptiness of ultimate reality, they do not apprehend and do not observe the emptiness of ultimate reality, and, Śāradvatīputra, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom in that manner, they become emancipated in all-aspect omniscience by way of not apprehending anything. Śāradvatīputra, when bodhisattva great beings practice the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, they do not apprehend and do not observe the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, and, Śāradvatīputra, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom in that manner, they become emancipated in all-aspect omniscience by way of not apprehending anything. Śāradvatīputra, when bodhisattva great beings practice the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, they do not apprehend and do not observe the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, and, Śāradvatīputra, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom in that manner, they become emancipated in all-aspect omniscience by way of not apprehending anything. Śāradvatīputra, when bodhisattva great beings practice the emptiness of the unlimited, they do not apprehend and do not observe the emptiness of the unlimited, and, Śāradvatīputra, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom in that manner, they become emancipated in all-aspect omniscience by way of not apprehending anything. Śāradvatīputra, [F.217.a] when bodhisattva great beings practice the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, they do not apprehend and do not observe the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, and, Śāradvatīputra, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom in that manner, they become emancipated in all-aspect omniscience by way of not apprehending anything. Śāradvatīputra, when bodhisattva great beings practice the emptiness of nonexclusion, they do not apprehend and do not observe the emptiness of nonexclusion, and, Śāradvatīputra, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom in that manner, they become emancipated in all-aspect omniscience by way of not apprehending anything. Śāradvatīputra, when bodhisattva great beings practice the emptiness of inherent nature, they do not apprehend and do not observe the emptiness of inherent nature, and, Śāradvatīputra, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom in that manner, they become emancipated in all-aspect omniscience by way of not apprehending anything. Śāradvatīputra, when bodhisattva great beings practice the emptiness of all phenomena, they do not apprehend and do not observe the emptiness of all phenomena, and, Śāradvatīputra, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom in that manner, they become emancipated in all-aspect omniscience by way of not apprehending anything. Śāradvatīputra, when bodhisattva great beings practice the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, they do not apprehend and do not observe the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, [F.217.b] and, Śāradvatīputra, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom in that manner, they become emancipated in all-aspect omniscience by way of not apprehending anything. Śāradvatīputra, when bodhisattva great beings practice the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, they do not apprehend and do not observe the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, and, Śāradvatīputra, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom in that manner, they become emancipated in all-aspect omniscience by way of not apprehending anything. Śāradvatīputra, when bodhisattva great beings practice the emptiness of nonentities, they do not apprehend and do not observe the emptiness of nonentities, and, Śāradvatīputra, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom in that manner, they become emancipated in all-aspect omniscience by way of not apprehending anything. Śāradvatīputra, when bodhisattva great beings practice the emptiness of essential nature, they do not apprehend and do not observe the emptiness of essential nature, and, Śāradvatīputra, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom in that manner, they become emancipated in all-aspect omniscience by way of not apprehending anything. Śāradvatīputra, when bodhisattva great beings practice the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities, they do not apprehend and do not observe the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities, and, Śāradvatīputra, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom in that manner, [F.218.a] they become emancipated in all-aspect omniscience by way of not apprehending anything.

6.217 “Śāradvatīputra, when bodhisattva great beings practice the applications of mindfulness, they do not apprehend and do not observe the applications of mindfulness, and, Śāradvatīputra, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom in that manner, they become emancipated in all-aspect omniscience by way of not apprehending anything. Śāradvatīputra, when bodhisattva great beings practice the correct exertions, they do not apprehend and do not observe the correct exertions, and, Śāradvatīputra, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom in that manner, they become emancipated in all-aspect omniscience by way of not apprehending anything. Śāradvatīputra, when bodhisattva great beings practice the supports for miraculous ability, they do not apprehend and do not observe the supports for miraculous ability, and, Śāradvatīputra, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom in that manner, they become emancipated in all-aspect omniscience by way of not apprehending anything. Śāradvatīputra, when bodhisattva great beings practice the faculties, they do not apprehend and do not observe the faculties, and, Śāradvatīputra, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom in that manner, they become emancipated in all-aspect omniscience by way of not apprehending anything. Śāradvatīputra, when bodhisattva great beings practice the powers, [F.218.b] they do not apprehend and do not observe the powers, and, Śāradvatīputra, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom in that manner, they become emancipated in all-aspect omniscience by way of not apprehending anything. Śāradvatīputra, when bodhisattva great beings practice the branches of enlightenment, they do not apprehend and do not observe the branches of enlightenment, and, Śāradvatīputra, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom in that manner, they become emancipated in all-aspect omniscience by way of not apprehending anything. Śāradvatīputra, when bodhisattva great beings practice the noble eightfold path, they do not apprehend and do not observe the noble eightfold path, and, Śāradvatīputra, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom in that manner, they become emancipated in all-aspect omniscience by way of not apprehending anything.

6.218 “Śāradvatīputra, when bodhisattva great beings practice the truths of the noble ones, they do not apprehend and do not observe the truths of the noble ones, and, Śāradvatīputra, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom in that manner, they become emancipated in all-aspect omniscience by way of not apprehending anything. Śāradvatīputra, when bodhisattva great beings practice the meditative concentrations, they do not apprehend and do not observe the meditative concentrations, and, Śāradvatīputra, when bodhisattva [F.219.a] great beings practice the perfection of wisdom in that manner, they become emancipated in all-aspect omniscience by way of not apprehending anything. Śāradvatīputra, when bodhisattva great beings practice the immeasurable attitudes, they do not apprehend and do not observe the immeasurable attitudes, and, Śāradvatīputra, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom in that manner, they become emancipated in all-aspect omniscience by way of not apprehending anything. Śāradvatīputra, when bodhisattva great beings practice the four formless absorptions, they do not apprehend and do not observe the four formless absorptions, and, Śāradvatīputra, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom in that manner, they become emancipated in all-aspect omniscience by way of not apprehending anything. Śāradvatīputra, when bodhisattva great beings practice the liberations, they do not apprehend and do not observe the liberations, and, Śāradvatīputra, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom in that manner, they become emancipated in all-aspect omniscience by way of not apprehending anything. Śāradvatīputra, when bodhisattva great beings practice the serial steps of meditative absorption, they do not apprehend and do not observe the serial steps of meditative absorption, and, Śāradvatīputra, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom in that manner, they become emancipated in all-aspect omniscience by way of not apprehending anything. [F.219.b] Śāradvatīputra, when bodhisattva great beings practice the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation, they do not apprehend and do not observe the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation, and, Śāradvatīputra, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom in that manner, they become emancipated in all-aspect omniscience by way of not apprehending anything. Śāradvatīputra, when bodhisattva great beings practice the extrasensory powers, they do not apprehend and do not observe the extrasensory powers, and, Śāradvatīputra, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom in that manner, they become emancipated in all-aspect omniscience by way of not apprehending anything. Śāradvatīputra, when bodhisattva great beings practice the meditative stabilities, they do not apprehend and do not observe the meditative stabilities, and, Śāradvatīputra, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom in that manner, they become emancipated in all-aspect omniscience by way of not apprehending anything. Śāradvatīputra, when bodhisattva great beings practice the dhāraṇī gateways, they do not apprehend and do not observe the dhāraṇī gateways, and, Śāradvatīputra, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom in that manner, they become emancipated in all-aspect omniscience by way of not apprehending anything.

6.219 “Śāradvatīputra, when bodhisattva great beings practice the ten powers of the tathāgatas, [F.220.a] they do not apprehend and do not observe the ten powers of the tathāgatas, and, Śāradvatīputra, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom in that manner, they become emancipated in all-aspect omniscience by way of not apprehending anything. Śāradvatīputra, when bodhisattva great beings practice the four fearlessnesses, they do not apprehend and do not observe the four fearlessnesses, and, Śāradvatīputra, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom in that manner, they become emancipated in all-aspect omniscience by way of not apprehending anything. Śāradvatīputra, when bodhisattva great beings practice the four kinds of exact knowledge, they do not apprehend and do not observe the four kinds of exact knowledge, and, Śāradvatīputra, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom in that manner, they become emancipated in all-aspect omniscience by way of not apprehending anything. Śāradvatīputra, when bodhisattva great beings practice great compassion, they do not apprehend and do not observe great compassion, and, Śāradvatīputra, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom in that manner, they become emancipated in all-aspect omniscience by way of not apprehending anything. Śāradvatīputra, when bodhisattva great beings practice the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas, they do not apprehend and do not observe the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas, and, Śāradvatīputra, when bodhisattva great beings practice

[F.220.b] the perfection of wisdom in that manner, they become emancipated in all-aspect omniscience by way of not apprehending anything. Śāradvatīputra, when bodhisattva great beings practice omniscience, they do not apprehend and do not observe omniscience, and, Śāradvatīputra, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom in that manner, they become emancipated in all-aspect omniscience by way of not apprehending anything. Śāradvatīputra, when bodhisattva great beings practice the knowledge of the aspects of the path, they do not apprehend and do not observe the knowledge of the aspects of the path, and, Śāradvatīputra, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom in that manner, they become emancipated in all-aspect omniscience by way of not apprehending anything. Śāradvatīputra, when bodhisattva great beings practice all-aspect omniscience, they do not apprehend and do not observe all-aspect omniscience, and, Śāradvatīputra, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom in that manner, they become emancipated in all-aspect omniscience by way of not apprehending anything.”

6.220 “Blessed Lord, by way of not apprehending what will they be emancipated in all-aspect omniscience?”

The Blessed One replied, “You should know that they will be emancipated in all-aspect omniscience by way of not apprehending [F.221.a] the emptiness of internal phenomena, by way of not apprehending the emptiness of external phenomena, by way of not apprehending the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, by way of not apprehending the emptiness of emptiness, by way of not apprehending the emptiness of great extent, by way of not apprehending the emptiness of ultimate reality, by way of not apprehending the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, by way of not apprehending the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, by way of not apprehending the emptiness of the unlimited, by way of not apprehending the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, by way of not apprehending the emptiness of nonexclusion, by way of not apprehending the emptiness of inherent nature, by way of not apprehending the emptiness of all phenomena, by way of not apprehending the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, by way of not apprehending the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, by way of not apprehending the emptiness of nonentities, by way of not apprehending the emptiness of essential nature, and by way of not apprehending the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities.”

6.221 This completes the sixth chapter from The Perfection of Wisdom in One Hundred Thousand Lines.

7.

CHAPTER 7

- 7.1 Then the venerable Subhūti said to the Blessed One, “Blessed Lord, suppose someone were to ask if this illusory person, after training in the perfection of wisdom, will go forth to all-aspect omniscience or attain all-aspect omniscience. Blessed Lord, how should I respond to that question? Blessed Lord, suppose someone were to ask if this illusory person, after training in the perfection of meditative concentration, [F.221.b] will go forth to all-aspect omniscience or attain all-aspect omniscience. Blessed Lord, how should I respond to that question? Blessed Lord, suppose someone were to ask if this illusory person, after training in the perfection of perseverance, will go forth to all-aspect omniscience or attain all-aspect omniscience. Blessed Lord, how should I respond to that question? Blessed Lord, suppose someone were to ask if this illusory person, after training in the perfection of tolerance, will go forth to all-aspect omniscience or attain all-aspect omniscience. Blessed Lord, how should I respond to that question? Blessed Lord, suppose someone were to ask if this illusory person, after training in the perfection of ethical discipline, will go forth to all-aspect omniscience or attain all-aspect omniscience. Blessed Lord, how should I respond to that question? Blessed Lord, suppose someone were to ask if this illusory person, after training in the perfection of generosity, will go forth to all-aspect omniscience or attain all-aspect omniscience. Blessed Lord, how should I respond to that question?
- 7.2 “Blessed Lord, suppose someone were to ask if this illusory person, after training in the emptiness of internal phenomena, will go forth to all-aspect omniscience or attain all-aspect omniscience. [F.222.a] Blessed Lord, how should I respond to that question? Blessed Lord, suppose someone were to ask if this illusory person, after training in the emptiness of external phenomena, will go forth to all-aspect omniscience or attain all-aspect omniscience. Blessed Lord, how should I respond to that question? Blessed Lord, suppose someone were to ask if this illusory person, after training in the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, will go forth to all-aspect omniscience or attain all-aspect omniscience. Blessed Lord, how should I respond to that question? Blessed Lord, suppose someone were to ask if this illusory person, after training in the emptiness of emptiness, will go forth to all-aspect omniscience or attain all-aspect omniscience. Blessed Lord, how should I respond to that question? Blessed Lord, suppose someone were to ask if this illusory person, after training in the emptiness of great extent, will go forth to all-aspect omniscience or attain all-aspect omniscience. Blessed Lord, how should I respond to that question? Blessed Lord, suppose someone were to ask if this illusory person, after training in the emptiness of ultimate reality, will go forth to all-aspect omniscience or attain all-aspect omniscience. Blessed Lord, how should I respond to that question? Blessed Lord, suppose someone [F.222.b] were to ask if this illusory person, after training in the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, will go forth to all-aspect omniscience or attain all-aspect omniscience. Blessed Lord, how should I respond to that question? Blessed Lord, suppose someone were to ask if this illusory person, after training in the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, will go forth to all-aspect omniscience or attain all-aspect omniscience. Blessed Lord, how should I respond to that question? Blessed Lord, suppose someone were to ask if this illusory person, after training in the emptiness of the unlimited, will go forth to all-aspect omniscience or attain all-aspect omniscience. Blessed Lord, how should I respond to that question? Blessed Lord, suppose someone were to ask if this illusory person, after training in the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, will go forth to all-aspect omniscience or attain all-aspect omniscience. Blessed Lord, how should I respond to that question? Blessed Lord, suppose someone were to ask if this illusory person, after training in the emptiness of nonexclusion, will go forth to all-aspect omniscience or attain all-aspect omniscience. Blessed Lord, how should I respond to that question? Blessed Lord, suppose someone were to ask if this illusory person, after training in the emptiness of inherent nature, will go forth to [F.223.a] all-aspect omniscience or attain all-aspect omniscience. Blessed Lord, how should I respond to that question? Blessed Lord, suppose someone were to ask if this illusory person, after training in the emptiness of all phenomena, will go forth to all-aspect omniscience or attain all-aspect omniscience. Blessed Lord, how should I respond to that question? Blessed Lord, suppose someone were to ask if this illusory person, after training in the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, will go forth to all-aspect omniscience or attain all-aspect omniscience. Blessed Lord, how should I respond to that question? Blessed Lord, suppose someone were to ask if this illusory person, after training in the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, will go forth to all-aspect omniscience or attain all-aspect omniscience. Blessed Lord, how should I respond to that question? Blessed Lord, suppose someone were to ask if this illusory person, after training in the emptiness of nonentities, will go forth to all-aspect omniscience or attain all-aspect omniscience. Blessed Lord, how should I respond to that question? Blessed Lord, suppose someone were to ask if this illusory person, after training in the emptiness of essential nature, will go forth to all-aspect omniscience or attain all-aspect omniscience. Blessed Lord, [F.223.b] how should I respond to that question? Blessed Lord, suppose someone were to ask if this illusory person, after training in the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities, will go forth to all-aspect omniscience or attain all-aspect omniscience. Blessed Lord, how should I respond to that question?

7.3 “Blessed Lord, suppose someone were to ask if this illusory person, after training in the applications of mindfulness, will go forth to all-aspect omniscience or attain all-aspect omniscience. Blessed Lord, how should I respond to that question? Blessed Lord, suppose someone were to ask if this illusory person, after training in the correct exertions, will go forth to all-aspect omniscience or attain all-aspect omniscience. Blessed Lord, how should I respond to that question? Blessed Lord, suppose someone were to ask if this illusory person, after training in the supports for miraculous ability, will go forth to all-aspect omniscience or attain all-aspect omniscience. Blessed Lord, how should I respond to that question? Blessed Lord, suppose someone were to ask if this illusory person, after training in the faculties, will go forth to all-aspect omniscience or attain all-aspect omniscience. Blessed Lord, how should I respond to that question? Blessed Lord, suppose someone were to ask [F.224.a] if this illusory person, after training in the powers, will go forth to all-aspect omniscience or attain all-aspect omniscience. Blessed Lord, how should I respond to that question? Blessed Lord, suppose someone were to ask if this illusory person, after training in the branches of enlightenment, will go forth to all-aspect omniscience or attain all-aspect omniscience. Blessed Lord, how should I respond to that question? Blessed Lord, suppose someone were to ask if this illusory person, after training in the noble eightfold path, will go forth to all-aspect omniscience or attain all-aspect omniscience. Blessed Lord, how should I respond to that question?

7.4 “Blessed Lord, suppose someone were to ask if this illusory person, after training in the truths of the noble ones, will go forth to all-aspect omniscience or attain all-aspect omniscience. Blessed Lord, how should I respond to that question? Blessed Lord, suppose someone were to ask if this illusory person, after training in the meditative concentrations, will go forth to all-aspect omniscience or attain all-aspect omniscience. Blessed Lord, how should I respond to that question? Blessed Lord, suppose someone were to ask if this illusory person, after training in the immeasurable attitudes, [F.224.b] will go forth to all-aspect omniscience or attain all-aspect omniscience. Blessed Lord, how should I respond to that question? Blessed Lord, suppose someone were to ask if this illusory person, after training in the formless absorptions, will go forth to all-aspect omniscience or attain all-aspect omniscience. Blessed Lord, how should I respond to that question? Blessed Lord, suppose someone were to ask if this illusory person, after training in the eight liberations, will go forth to all-aspect omniscience or attain all-aspect omniscience. Blessed Lord, how should I respond to that question? Blessed Lord, suppose someone were to ask if this illusory person, after training in the nine serial steps of meditative absorption, will go forth to all-aspect omniscience or attain all-aspect omniscience. Blessed Lord, how should I respond to that question? Blessed Lord, suppose someone were to ask if this illusory person, after training in the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation, will go forth to all-aspect omniscience or attain all-aspect omniscience. Blessed Lord, how should I respond to that question? Blessed Lord, suppose someone were to ask if this illusory person, after training in the extrasensory powers, will go forth to [F.225.a] all-aspect omniscience or attain all-aspect omniscience. Blessed Lord, how should I respond to that question? Blessed Lord, suppose someone were to ask if this illusory person, after training in the meditative stabilities, will go forth to all-aspect omniscience or attain all-aspect omniscience. Blessed Lord, how should I respond to that question? Blessed Lord, suppose someone were to ask if this illusory person, after training in the dhāraṇī gateways, will go forth to all-aspect omniscience or attain all-aspect omniscience. Blessed Lord, how should I respond to that question? Blessed Lord, suppose someone were to ask if this illusory person, after training in the ten powers of the tathāgatas, will go forth to all-aspect omniscience or attain all-aspect omniscience. Blessed Lord, how should I respond to that question? Blessed Lord, suppose someone were to ask if this illusory person, after training in the fearlessnesses, will go forth to all-aspect omniscience or attain all-aspect omniscience. Blessed Lord, how should I respond to that question? Blessed Lord, suppose someone were to ask if this illusory person, after training in the kinds of exact knowledge, will go forth to all-aspect omniscience or attain all-aspect omniscience. Blessed Lord, how should I respond to that question? Blessed Lord, suppose someone were to ask if this illusory person, after training in great loving kindness, will go forth to all-aspect omniscience or attain all-aspect omniscience. Blessed Lord, how should I respond to that question? Blessed Lord, suppose someone were to ask if this illusory person, after training in great compassion, will go forth to all-aspect omniscience or attain all-aspect omniscience. Blessed Lord, how should I respond to

[F.225.b] that question? Blessed Lord, suppose someone were to ask if this illusory person, after training in the distinct qualities of the buddhas, will go forth to all-aspect omniscience or attain all-aspect omniscience. Blessed Lord, how should I respond to that question?"

7.5 Venerable Subhūti having thus inquired, the Blessed One said to him, "In that case I will ask you about that. You may answer as best you can. Subhūti, do you think that physical forms are one thing, and that illusions are another?"

"No, Blessed Lord," he replied.

7.6 The Blessed One then asked, "Subhūti, do you think that feelings are one thing, and that illusions are another?"

"No, Blessed Lord," he replied.

7.7 The Blessed One then asked, "Subhūti, do you think that perceptions are one thing, and that illusions are another?"

"No, Blessed Lord," he replied.

7.8 The Blessed One then asked, "Subhūti, do you think that formative predispositions are one thing, and that illusions are another?"

"No, Blessed Lord," he replied.

7.9 The Blessed One then asked, "Subhūti, do you think that consciousness [F.226.a] is one thing, and that illusions are another?"

"No, Blessed Lord," he replied.

7.10 The Blessed One then asked, "Subhūti, do you think that the eyes are one thing, and that illusions are another?"

"No, Blessed Lord," he replied.

7.11 The Blessed One then asked, "Subhūti, do you think that the ears are one thing, and that illusions are another?"

"No, Blessed Lord," he replied.

7.12 The Blessed One then asked, "Subhūti, do you think that the nose is one thing, and that illusions are another?"

"No, Blessed Lord," he replied.

7.13 The Blessed One then asked, "Subhūti, do you think that the tongue is one thing, and that illusions are another?"

"No, Blessed Lord," he replied.

7.14 The Blessed One then asked, "Subhūti, do you think that the body is one thing, and that illusions are another?"

"No, Blessed Lord," he replied.

7.15 The Blessed One then asked, "Subhūti, do you think that the mental faculty is one thing, and that illusions are another?"

"No, Blessed Lord," he replied.

7.16 The Blessed One then asked, "Subhūti, do you think that sights are one thing, and that illusions are another?"

- “No, Blessed Lord,” he replied.
- 7.17 The Blessed One then asked, “Subhūti, do you think that sounds are one thing, and that illusions are another?”
- “No, Blessed Lord,” he replied.
- 7.18 The Blessed One [F.226.b] said, “Subhūti, do you think that odors are one thing, and that illusions are another?”
- “No, Blessed Lord,” he replied.
- 7.19 The Blessed One then asked, “Subhūti, do you think that tastes are one thing, and that illusions are another?”
- “No, Blessed Lord,” he replied.
- 7.20 The Blessed One then asked, “Subhūti, do you think that tangibles are one thing, and that illusions are another?”
- “No, Blessed Lord,” he replied.
- 7.21 The Blessed One then asked, “Subhūti, do you think that mental phenomena are one thing, and that illusions are another?”
- “No, Blessed Lord,” he replied.
- 7.22 The Blessed One then asked, “Subhūti, do you think that visual consciousness is one thing, and that illusions are another?”
- “No, Blessed Lord,” he replied.
- 7.23 The Blessed One then asked, “Subhūti, do you think that auditory consciousness is one thing, and that illusions are another?”
- “No, Blessed Lord,” he replied.
- 7.24 The Blessed One then asked, “Subhūti, do you think that olfactory consciousness is one thing, and that illusions are another?”
- “No, Blessed Lord,” he replied.
- 7.25 The Blessed One then asked, “Subhūti, do you think that gustatory consciousness is one thing, and that illusions are another?”
- “No, Blessed Lord,” he replied.
- 7.26 The Blessed One then asked, “Subhūti, do you think that tactile consciousness is one thing, and that illusions are another?” [F.227.a]
- “No, Blessed Lord,” he replied.
- 7.27 The Blessed One then asked, “Subhūti, do you think that mental consciousness is one thing, and that illusions are another?”
- “No, Blessed Lord,” he replied.
- 7.28 The Blessed One then asked, “Subhūti, do you think that visually compounded sensory contact is one thing, and that illusions are another?”
- “No, Blessed Lord,” he replied.
- 7.29 The Blessed One then asked, “Subhūti, do you think that aurally compounded sensory contact is one thing, and that illusions are another?”
- “No, Blessed Lord,” he replied.

- 7.30 The Blessed One then asked, "Subhūti, do you think that nasally compounded sensory contact is one thing, and that illusions are another?"
"No, Blessed Lord," he replied.
- 7.31 The Blessed One then asked, "Subhūti, do you think that lingually compounded sensory contact is one thing, and that illusions are another?"
"No, Blessed Lord," he replied.
- 7.32 The Blessed One then asked, "Subhūti, do you think that corporeally compounded sensory contact is one thing, and that illusions are another?"
"No, Blessed Lord," he replied.
- 7.33 The Blessed One then asked, "Subhūti, do you think that mentally compounded sensory contact is one thing, and that illusions are another?"
"No, Blessed Lord," he replied.
- 7.34 The Blessed One then asked, "Subhūti, do you think that feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact are one thing, and that illusions are [F.227.b] another?"
"No, Blessed Lord," he replied.
- 7.35 The Blessed One then asked, "Subhūti, do you think that feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact are one thing, and that illusions are another?"
"No, Blessed Lord," he replied.
- 7.36 The Blessed One then asked, "Subhūti, do you think that feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact are one thing, and that illusions are another?"
"No, Blessed Lord," he replied.
- 7.37 The Blessed One then asked, "Subhūti, do you think that feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact are one thing, and that illusions are another?"
"No, Blessed Lord," he replied.
- 7.38 The Blessed One then asked, "Subhūti, do you think that feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact are one thing, and that illusions are another?"
"No, Blessed Lord," he replied.
- 7.39 The Blessed One then asked, "Subhūti, do you think that feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact are one thing, and that illusions are another?"
"No, Blessed Lord," he replied.
- 7.40 The Blessed One then asked, "Subhūti, do you think that the earth element is one thing, and that illusions are another?"
"No, Blessed Lord," he replied.
- 7.41 The Blessed One then asked, "Subhūti, do you think that the water element is one thing, and that illusions are another?"

- “No, Blessed Lord,” he replied.
- 7.42 The Blessed One then asked, “Subhūti, [F.228.a] do you think that the fire element is one thing, and that illusions are another?”
- “No, Blessed Lord,” he replied.
- 7.43 The Blessed One then asked, “Subhūti, do you think that the wind element is one thing, and that illusions are another?”
- “No, Blessed Lord,” he replied.
- 7.44 The Blessed One then asked, “Subhūti, do you think that the space element is one thing, and that illusions are another?”
- “No, Blessed Lord,” he replied.
- 7.45 The Blessed One then asked, “Subhūti, do you think that the consciousness element is one thing, and that illusions are another?”
- “No, Blessed Lord,” he replied.
- 7.46 The Blessed One then asked, “Subhūti, do you think that ignorance is one thing, and that illusions are another?”
- “No, Blessed Lord,” he replied.
- 7.47 The Blessed One then asked, “Subhūti, do you think that formative predispositions are one thing, and that illusions are another?”
- “No, Blessed Lord,” he replied.
- 7.48 The Blessed One then asked, “Subhūti, do you think that consciousness is one thing, and that illusions are another?”
- “No, Blessed Lord,” he replied.
- 7.49 The Blessed One then asked, “Subhūti, do you think that name and form are one thing, and that illusions are another?”
- “No, Blessed Lord,” he replied.
- 7.50 The Blessed One then asked, “Subhūti, do [F.228.b] you think that the six sense fields are one thing, and that illusions are another?”
- “No, Blessed Lord,” he replied.
- 7.51 The Blessed One then asked, “Subhūti, do you think that sensory contact is one thing, and that illusions are another?”
- “No, Blessed Lord,” he replied.
- 7.52 The Blessed One then asked, “Subhūti, do you think that sensation is one thing, and that illusions are another?”
- “No, Blessed Lord,” he replied.
- 7.53 The Blessed One then asked, “Subhūti, do you think that craving is one thing, and that illusions are another?”
- “No, Blessed Lord,” he replied.
- 7.54 The Blessed One then asked, “Subhūti, do you think that grasping is one thing, and that illusions are another?”
- “No, Blessed Lord,” he replied.

- 7.55 The Blessed One then asked, "Subhūti, do you think that the rebirth process is one thing, and that illusions are another?"
"No, Blessed Lord," he replied.
- 7.56 The Blessed One then asked, "Subhūti, do you think that birth is one thing, and that illusions are another?"
"No, Blessed Lord," he replied.
- 7.57 The Blessed One then asked, "Subhūti, do you think that aging and death are one thing, and that illusions are another?"
"No, Blessed Lord," he replied.
- 7.58 The Blessed One then asked, "Subhūti, do you think that the perfection of generosity is one thing, [F.229.a] and that illusions are another?"
"No, Blessed Lord," he replied.
- 7.59 The Blessed One then asked, "Subhūti, do you think that the perfection of ethical discipline is one thing, and that illusions are another?"
"No, Blessed Lord," he replied.
- 7.60 The Blessed One then asked, "Subhūti, do you think that the perfection of tolerance is one thing, and that illusions are another?"
"No, Blessed Lord," he replied.
- 7.61 The Blessed One then asked, "Subhūti, do you think that the perfection of perseverance is one thing, and that illusions are another?"
"No, Blessed Lord," he replied.
- 7.62 The Blessed One then asked, "Subhūti, do you think that the perfection of meditative concentration is one thing, and that illusions are another?"
"No, Blessed Lord," he replied.
- 7.63 The Blessed One then asked, "Subhūti, do you think that the perfection of wisdom is one thing, and that illusions are another?"
"No, Blessed Lord," he replied.
- 7.64 The Blessed One then asked, "Subhūti, do you think that the emptiness of internal phenomena is one thing, and that illusions are another?"
"No, Blessed Lord," he replied.
- 7.65 The Blessed One then asked, "Subhūti, do you think that the emptiness of external phenomena is one thing, and that illusions are another?"
"No, Blessed Lord," he replied.
- 7.66 The Blessed One then asked, "Subhūti, do you think that the emptiness of external and internal phenomena is one thing, and that illusions [F.229.b] are another?"
"No, Blessed Lord," he replied.
- 7.67 The Blessed One then asked, "Subhūti, do you think that the emptiness of emptiness is one thing, and that illusions are another?"
"No, Blessed Lord," he replied.

- 7.68 The Blessed One then asked, "Subhūti, do you think that the emptiness of great extent is one thing, and that illusions are another?"
"No, Blessed Lord," he replied.
- 7.69 The Blessed One then asked, "Subhūti, do you think that the emptiness of ultimate reality is one thing, and that illusions are another?"
"No, Blessed Lord," he replied.
- 7.70 The Blessed One then asked, "Subhūti, do you think that the emptiness of conditioned phenomena is one thing, and that illusions are another?"
"No, Blessed Lord," he replied.
- 7.71 The Blessed One then asked, "Subhūti, do you think that the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena is one thing, and that illusions are another?"
"No, Blessed Lord," he replied.
- 7.72 The Blessed One then asked, "Subhūti, do you think that the emptiness of the unlimited is one thing, and that illusions are another?"
"No, Blessed Lord," he replied.
- 7.73 The Blessed One then asked, "Subhūti, do you think that the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end is one thing, and that illusions are another?"
"No, Blessed Lord," he replied.
- 7.74 The Blessed One then asked, "Subhūti, do you think that the emptiness of nonexclusion is one thing, and that illusions are another?" [F.230.a]
"No, Blessed Lord," he replied.
- 7.75 The Blessed One then asked, "Subhūti, do you think that the emptiness of inherent nature is one thing, and that illusions are another?"
"No, Blessed Lord," he replied.
- 7.76 The Blessed One then asked, "Subhūti, do you think that the emptiness of all phenomena is one thing, and that illusions are another?"
"No, Blessed Lord," he replied.
- 7.77 The Blessed One then asked, "Subhūti, do you think that the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics is one thing, and that illusions are another?"
"No, Blessed Lord," he replied.
- 7.78 The Blessed One then asked, "Subhūti, do you think that the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended is one thing, and that illusions are another?"
"No, Blessed Lord," he replied.
- 7.79 The Blessed One then asked, "Subhūti, do you think that the emptiness of nonentities is one thing, and that illusions are another?"
"No, Blessed Lord," he replied.
- 7.80 The Blessed One then asked, "Subhūti, do you think that the emptiness of essential nature is one thing, and that illusions are another?"
"No, Blessed Lord," he replied.

- 7.81 The Blessed One then asked, "Subhūti, do you think that the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities is one thing, and that illusions are another?"
"No, Blessed Lord," he replied.
- 7.82 The Blessed One then asked, "Subhūti, do you think that the applications of mindfulness are one thing, and that illusions [F.230.b] are another?"
"No, Blessed Lord," he replied.
- 7.83 The Blessed One then asked, "Subhūti, do you think that the correct exertions are one thing, and that illusions are another?"
"No, Blessed Lord," he replied.
- 7.84 The Blessed One then asked, "Subhūti, do you think that the supports for miraculous ability are one thing, and that illusions are another?"
"No, Blessed Lord," he replied.
- 7.85 The Blessed One then asked, "Subhūti, do you think that the faculties are one thing, and that illusions are another?"
"No, Blessed Lord," he replied.
- 7.86 The Blessed One then asked, "Subhūti, do you think that the powers are one thing, and that illusions are another?"
"No, Blessed Lord," he replied.
- 7.87 The Blessed One then asked, "Subhūti, do you think that the branches of enlightenment are one thing, and that illusions are another?"
"No, Blessed Lord," he replied.
- 7.88 The Blessed One then asked, "Subhūti, do you think that the noble eightfold path is one thing, and that illusions are another?"
"No, Blessed Lord," he replied.
- 7.89 The Blessed One then asked, "Subhūti, do you think that the truths of the noble ones are one thing, and that illusions are another?"
"No, Blessed Lord," he replied.
- 7.90 The Blessed One then asked, "Subhūti, do you think that the meditative concentrations are one thing, and that illusions [F.231.a] are another?"
"No, Blessed Lord," he replied.
- 7.91 The Blessed One then asked, "Subhūti, do you think that the immeasurable attitudes are one thing, and that illusions are another?"
"No, Blessed Lord," he replied.
- 7.92 The Blessed One then asked, "Subhūti, do you think that the formless absorptions are one thing, and that illusions are another?"
"No, Blessed Lord," he replied.
- 7.93 The Blessed One then asked, "Subhūti, do you think that the eight liberations are one thing, and that illusions are another?"
"No, Blessed Lord," he replied.

- 7.94 The Blessed One then asked, “Subhūti, do you think that the nine serial steps of meditative absorption are one thing, and that illusions are another?”
“No, Blessed Lord,” he replied.
- 7.95 The Blessed One then asked, “Subhūti, do you think that the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation are one thing, and that illusions are another?”
“No, Blessed Lord,” he replied.
- 7.96 The Blessed One then asked, “Subhūti, do you think that the extrasensory powers are one thing, and that illusions are another?”
“No, Blessed Lord,” he replied.
- 7.97 The Blessed One then asked, “Subhūti, do you think that the meditative stabilities are one thing, and that illusions are another?”
“No, Blessed Lord,” he replied.
- 7.98 The Blessed One then asked, “Subhūti, do you think [F.231.b] that the dhāraṇī gateways are one thing, and that illusions are another?”
“No, Blessed Lord,” he replied.
- 7.99 The Blessed One then asked, “Subhūti, do you think that the powers of the tathāgatas are one thing, and that illusions are another?”
“No, Blessed Lord,” he replied.
- 7.100 The Blessed One then asked, “Subhūti, do you think that the fearlessnesses are one thing, and that illusions are another?”
“No, Blessed Lord,” he replied.
- 7.101 The Blessed One then asked, “Subhūti, do you think that the kinds of exact knowledge are one thing, and that illusions are another?”
“No, Blessed Lord,” he replied.
- 7.102 The Blessed One then asked, “Subhūti, do you think that great loving kindness is one thing, and that illusions are another?”
“No, Blessed Lord,” he replied.
- 7.103 The Blessed One then asked, “Subhūti, do you think that great compassion is one thing, and that illusions are another?”
“No, Blessed Lord,” he replied.
- 7.104 The Blessed One then asked, “Subhūti, do you think that the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas are one thing, and that illusions are another?”
“No, Blessed Lord,” he replied.
- 7.105 The Blessed One then asked, “Subhūti, do you think that enlightenment is one thing, and that illusions are another?”
“No, Blessed Lord,” he replied. [B17]
- 7.106 “Blessed Lord, physical forms are not one thing and illusions another. Physical forms are themselves illusion, and illusion itself is physical forms. [F.232.a] Blessed Lord, feelings are not one thing and illusions another.

Feelings are themselves illusion, and illusion itself is feelings. Blessed Lord, perceptions are not one thing and illusions another. Perceptions are themselves illusion, and illusion itself is perceptions. Blessed Lord, formative predispositions are not one thing and illusions another. Formative predispositions are themselves illusion, and illusion itself is formative predispositions. Blessed Lord, consciousness is not one thing and illusions another. Consciousness is itself illusion, and illusion itself is consciousness.

7.107 “Blessed Lord, the eyes are not one thing and illusions another. The eyes are themselves illusion, and illusion itself is the eyes. Blessed Lord, the ears are not one thing and illusions another. The ears are themselves illusion, and illusion itself is the ears. Blessed Lord, the nose is not one thing and illusions another. The nose is itself illusion, and illusion itself is the nose. Blessed Lord, the tongue is not one thing and illusions another. The tongue is itself illusion, and illusion itself is the tongue. Blessed Lord, the body is not one thing and illusions another. The body is itself illusion, and illusion itself is the body. Blessed Lord, the mental faculty is not one thing and illusions another. The mental faculty is itself illusion, and illusion itself is the mental faculty.

7.108 “Blessed Lord, sights are not one thing and illusions another. Sights are themselves illusion, and illusion itself is sights. Blessed Lord, sounds are not one thing and illusions another. Sounds are themselves illusion, and illusion itself is sounds. Blessed Lord, odors are not one thing and illusions another. Odors are themselves illusion, and illusion itself is odors. [F.232.b] Blessed Lord, tastes are not one thing and illusions another. Tastes are themselves illusion, and illusion itself is tastes. Blessed Lord, tangibles are not one thing and illusions another. Tangibles are themselves illusion, and illusion itself is tangibles. Blessed Lord, mental phenomena are not one thing and illusions another. Mental phenomena are themselves illusion, and illusion itself is mental phenomena.

7.109 “Blessed Lord, visual consciousness is not one thing and illusions another. Visual consciousness is itself illusion, and illusion itself is visual consciousness. Blessed Lord, auditory consciousness is not one thing and illusions another. Auditory consciousness is itself illusion, and illusion itself is auditory consciousness. Blessed Lord, olfactory consciousness is not one thing and illusions another. Olfactory consciousness is itself illusion, and illusion itself is olfactory consciousness. Blessed Lord, gustatory consciousness is not one thing and illusions another. Gustatory consciousness is itself illusion, and illusion itself is gustatory consciousness. Blessed Lord, tactile consciousness is not one thing and illusions another. Tactile consciousness is itself illusion, and illusion itself is tactile consciousness. Blessed Lord, mental consciousness is not one thing and illusions another. Mental consciousness is itself illusion, and illusion itself is mental consciousness.

7.110 “Blessed Lord, visually compounded sensory contact is not one thing and illusions another. Visually compounded sensory contact is itself illusion, and illusion itself is visually compounded sensory contact. Blessed Lord, aurally compounded sensory contact is not one thing and [F.233.a] illusions another. Aurally compounded sensory contact is itself illusion, and illusion itself is aurally compounded sensory contact. Blessed Lord, nasally compounded sensory contact is not one thing and illusions another. Nasally compounded sensory contact is itself illusion, and illusion itself is nasally compounded sensory contact. Blessed Lord, lingually compounded sensory contact is not one thing and illusions another. Lingually compounded sensory contact is itself illusion, and illusion itself is lingually compounded sensory contact. Blessed Lord, corporeally compounded sensory contact is not one thing and illusions another. Corporeally compounded sensory contact is itself illusion, and illusion itself is corporeally compounded sensory contact. Blessed Lord, mentally compounded sensory contact is not one thing and illusions another. Mentally compounded sensory contact is itself illusion, and illusion itself is mentally compounded sensory contact.

7.111 “Blessed Lord, feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact are not one thing and illusions another. Feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact are themselves illusion, and illusion itself is feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact. Blessed Lord, feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact are not one thing and illusions another. Feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact are themselves illusion, and illusion itself is feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact. Blessed Lord, feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact are not one thing and illusions another. Feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact are themselves illusion, and illusion itself is feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact. Blessed Lord, feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact are not one thing and illusions another. Feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact are themselves [F.233.b] illusion, and illusion itself is feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact. Blessed Lord, feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact are not one thing and illusions another. Feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact are themselves illusion, and illusion itself is feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact. Blessed Lord, feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact are not one thing and illusions another. Feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact are themselves illusion, and illusion itself is feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact.

7.112 “Blessed Lord, the earth element is not one thing and illusions another. The earth element is itself illusion, and illusion itself is the earth element. Blessed Lord, the water element is not one thing and illusions another. The water element is itself illusion, and illusion itself is the water element. Blessed Lord, the fire element is not one thing and illusions another. The fire element is itself illusion, and illusion itself is the fire element. Blessed Lord, the wind element is not one thing and illusions another. The wind element is itself illusion, and illusion itself is the wind element. Blessed Lord, the space element is not one thing and illusions another. The space element is itself illusion, and illusion itself is the space element. Blessed Lord, the consciousness element is not one thing and illusions another. The consciousness element is itself illusion, and illusion itself is the consciousness element.

7.113 “Blessed Lord, ignorance is not one thing and illusions another. Ignorance is itself illusion, and illusion itself is ignorance. Blessed Lord, [F.234.a] formative predispositions are not one thing and illusions another. Formative predispositions are themselves illusion, and illusion itself is formative predispositions. Blessed Lord, consciousness is not one thing and illusions another. Consciousness is itself illusion, and illusion itself is consciousness. Blessed Lord, name and form are not one thing and illusions another. Name and form are themselves illusion, and illusion itself is name and form. Blessed Lord, the six sense fields are not one thing and illusions another. The six sense fields are themselves illusion, and illusion itself is the six sense fields. Blessed Lord, sensory contact is not one thing and illusions another. Sensory contact is itself illusion, and illusion itself is sensory contact. Blessed Lord, sensation is not one thing and illusions another. Sensation is itself illusion, and illusion itself is sensation. Blessed Lord, craving is not one thing and illusions another. Craving is itself illusion, and illusion itself is craving. Blessed Lord, grasping is not one thing and illusions another. Grasping is itself illusion, and illusion itself is grasping. Blessed Lord, the rebirth process is not one thing and illusions another. The rebirth process is itself illusion, and illusion itself is the rebirth process. Blessed Lord, birth is not one thing and illusions another. Birth is itself illusion, and illusion itself is birth. Blessed Lord, aging and death are not one thing and illusions another. Aging and death are themselves illusion, and illusion itself is aging and death.

7.114 “Blessed Lord, the perfection of generosity is not one thing and illusions another. The perfection of generosity is itself [F.234.b] illusion, and illusion itself is the perfection of generosity. Blessed Lord, the perfection of ethical discipline is not one thing and illusions another. The perfection of ethical discipline is itself illusion, and illusion itself is the perfection of ethical discipline. Blessed Lord, the perfection of tolerance is not one thing and illusions another. The perfection of tolerance is itself illusion, and illusion itself is the perfection of tolerance. Blessed Lord, the perfection of perseverance is not one thing and illusions another. The perfection of perseverance is itself illusion, and illusion itself is the perfection of perseverance. Blessed Lord, the perfection of meditative concentration is not one thing and illusions another. The perfection of meditative concentration is itself illusion, and illusion itself is the perfection of meditative concentration. Blessed Lord, the perfection of wisdom is not one thing and illusions another. The perfection of wisdom is itself illusion, and illusion itself is the perfection of wisdom.

7.115 “Blessed Lord, the emptiness of internal phenomena is not one thing and illusions another. The emptiness of internal phenomena is itself illusion, and illusion itself is the emptiness of internal phenomena. Blessed Lord, the emptiness of external phenomena is not one thing and illusions another. The emptiness of external phenomena is itself illusion, and illusion itself is the emptiness of external phenomena. Blessed Lord, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena is not one thing and illusions another. The emptiness of external and internal phenomena is itself illusion, and illusion itself is the emptiness of external and internal phenomena. Blessed Lord, the emptiness of emptiness is not one thing and illusions another. The emptiness of emptiness is itself illusion, and illusion itself [F.235.a] is the emptiness of emptiness. Blessed Lord, the emptiness of great extent is not one thing and illusions another. The emptiness of great extent is itself illusion, and illusion itself is the emptiness of great extent. Blessed Lord, the emptiness of ultimate reality is not one thing and illusions another. The emptiness of ultimate reality is itself illusion, and illusion itself is the emptiness of ultimate reality. Blessed Lord, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena is not one thing and illusions another. The emptiness of conditioned phenomena is itself illusion, and illusion itself is the emptiness of conditioned phenomena. Blessed Lord, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena is not one thing and illusions another. The emptiness of unconditioned phenomena is itself illusion, and illusion itself is the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena. Blessed Lord, the emptiness of the unlimited is not one thing and illusions another. The emptiness of the unlimited is itself illusion, and illusion itself is the emptiness of the unlimited. Blessed Lord, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end is not one thing and illusions another. The emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end is itself illusion, and illusion itself is the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end. Blessed Lord, the emptiness of nonexclusion is not one thing and illusions another. The emptiness of nonexclusion is itself illusion, and illusion itself is the emptiness of nonexclusion. Blessed Lord, the emptiness of inherent nature is not one thing and illusions another. The emptiness of inherent nature is itself illusion, and illusion itself is the emptiness of inherent nature. Blessed Lord, the emptiness of all phenomena is not one thing and illusions another. The emptiness of all phenomena is itself [F.235.b] illusion, and illusion itself is the emptiness of all phenomena. Blessed Lord, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics is not one thing and illusions another. The emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics is itself illusion, and illusion itself is the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics. Blessed Lord, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended is not one thing and illusions another. The emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended is itself illusion, and illusion itself is the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended. Blessed Lord, the emptiness of nonentities is not one thing and illusions another. The emptiness of nonentities is itself illusion, and illusion itself is the emptiness of nonentities. Blessed Lord, the emptiness of essential nature is not one thing and illusions another. The emptiness of essential nature is itself illusion, and illusion itself is the emptiness of essential nature. Blessed Lord, the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities is not one thing and illusions another. The emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities is itself illusion, and illusion itself is the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities.

7.116 “Blessed Lord, the applications of mindfulness are not one thing and illusions another. The applications of mindfulness are themselves illusion, and illusion itself is the applications of mindfulness. Blessed Lord, the correct exertions are not one thing and illusions another. The correct exertions are themselves illusion, and illusion itself is the correct exertions. Blessed Lord, the supports for miraculous ability are not one thing and illusions another. The supports for miraculous ability are themselves illusion, and illusion itself is the supports for miraculous ability. Blessed Lord, the faculties are not one thing and illusions another. The faculties are themselves illusion, and illusion [F.236.a] itself is the faculties. Blessed Lord, the powers are not one thing and illusions another. The powers are themselves illusion, and illusion itself is the powers. Blessed Lord, the branches of enlightenment are not one thing and illusions another. The branches of enlightenment are themselves illusion, and illusion itself is the branches of enlightenment. Blessed Lord, the noble eightfold path is not one thing and illusions another. The noble eightfold path is itself illusion, and illusion itself is the noble eightfold path.

7.117 “Blessed Lord, the truths of the noble ones are not one thing and illusions another. The truths of the noble ones are themselves illusion, and illusion itself is the truths of the noble ones. Blessed Lord, the meditative concentrations are not one thing and illusions another. The meditative concentrations are themselves illusion, and illusion itself is the meditative concentrations. Blessed Lord, the immeasurable attitudes are not one thing and illusions another. The immeasurable attitudes are themselves illusion, and illusion itself is the immeasurable attitudes. Blessed Lord, the formless absorptions are not one thing and illusions another. The formless absorptions are themselves illusion, and illusion itself is the formless absorptions. Blessed Lord, the eight liberations are not one thing and illusions another. The liberations are themselves illusion, and illusion itself is the liberations. Blessed Lord, the serial steps of meditative absorption are not one thing and illusions [F.236.b] another. The serial steps of meditative absorption are themselves illusion, and illusion itself is the serial steps of meditative absorption. Blessed Lord, the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation are not one thing and illusions another. The emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation are themselves an illusion, and illusion itself is the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation. Blessed Lord, the extrasensory powers are not one thing and illusions another. The extrasensory powers are themselves illusion, and illusion itself is the extrasensory powers. Blessed Lord, the meditative stabilities are not one thing and illusions another. The meditative stabilities are themselves illusion, and illusion itself is the meditative stabilities. Blessed Lord, the dhāraṇī gateways are not one thing and illusions another. The dhāraṇī gateways are themselves illusion, and illusion itself is the dhāraṇī gateways. Blessed Lord, the powers of the tathāgatas are not one thing and illusions another. The powers of the tathāgatas are themselves illusion, and illusion itself is the powers of the tathāgatas. Blessed Lord, the fearlessnesses are not one thing and illusions another. The fearlessnesses are themselves illusion, and illusion itself is the fearlessnesses. Blessed Lord, the kinds of exact knowledge are not one thing and illusions another. The kinds of exact knowledge are themselves illusion, and illusion itself is the kinds of exact knowledge. Blessed Lord, great loving kindness is not one thing and illusions another. Great loving kindness is itself illusion, and illusion itself is great loving kindness. Blessed Lord, great compassion is not one thing and illusions [F.237.a] another. Great compassion is itself illusion, and illusion itself is great compassion. Blessed

Lord, the distinct qualities of the buddhas are not one thing and illusions another. The distinct qualities of the buddhas are themselves illusion, and illusion itself is the distinct qualities of the buddhas.

7.118 “Blessed Lord, the fruit of having entered the stream is not one thing and illusions another. The fruit of having entered the stream is itself illusion, and illusion itself is the fruit of having entered the stream. Blessed Lord, the fruit of once-returner is not one thing and illusions another. The fruit of once-returner is itself illusion, and illusion itself is the fruit of once-returner. Blessed Lord, the fruit of non-returner is not one thing and illusions another. The fruit of non-returner is itself illusion, and illusion itself is the fruit of non-returner. Blessed Lord, arhatship is not one thing and illusions another. Arhatship is itself illusion, and illusion itself is arhatship. Blessed Lord, individual enlightenment is not one thing and illusions another. individual enlightenment is itself illusion, and illusion itself is individual enlightenment. Blessed Lord, knowledge of the aspects of the path is not one thing and illusions another. Knowledge of the aspects of the path is itself illusion, and illusion itself is the knowledge of the aspects of the path. Blessed Lord, all-aspect omniscience is not one thing and illusions another. All-aspect omniscience is itself illusion, and illusion itself is all-aspect omniscience.”

7.119 “Subhūti, do you think that there is [F.237.b] arising or cessation with respect to that illusion?” asked the Blessed One.

“No, Blessed Lord,” he replied.

7.120 “Subhūti, do you think that there is defilement or purification with respect to that illusion?” asked the Blessed One.

“No, Blessed Lord,” he replied.

7.121 “Subhūti, do you think that that which is without arising, cessation, defilement, and purification will train in the perfection of wisdom, or go forth to all-aspect omniscience, or attain all-aspect omniscience?” asked the Blessed One.

“No, Blessed Lord,” he replied.

7.122 “Subhūti, do you think that the notion, symbol, designation, or conventional expression<sup>341</sup> bodhisattva is in these five acquisitive aggregates?” asked the Blessed One.

“No, Blessed Lord,” he replied.

7.123 “Subhūti, do you think that on the basis of a mere notion, symbol, designation, or conventional expression one can apprehend the arising, cessation, defilement, or purification of these five acquisitive aggregates?” asked the Blessed One.

“No, Blessed Lord!” he replied.

- 7.124 “Subhūti, do you think that that of which there is no notion, no symbol, no designation, no conventional expression, no name, no denomination,<sup>342</sup> no body, no physical actions, no speech, no verbal actions, no mind, no mental actions, no arising, no ceasing, [F.238.a] no defilement, and no purification will train in the perfection of wisdom and then go forth to all-aspect omniscience, or attain all-aspect omniscience?” asked the Blessed One.
- “No, Blessed Lord!” he replied.
- 7.125 “Subhūti,” said the Blessed One, “so it is that when bodhisattva great beings have trained in the perfection of wisdom, by way of not apprehending anything, they will go forth to all-aspect omniscience and attain all-aspect omniscience.”
- 7.126 “The way I understand what you, Blessed Lord, have said, is that bodhisattva great beings who train in the perfection of wisdom should train for unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment by training in the manner of an illusory person. If you ask why, Blessed Lord, it is because these five aggregates are just what should be known to be an illusory person.”
- 7.127 “Subhūti, do you think that these five aggregates can train in the perfection of wisdom and go forth to all-aspect omniscience?” asked the Blessed One.
- 7.128 “No, Blessed Lord!” he replied. “And if you ask why, Blessed Lord, it is because the five aggregates are in their essential nature no essence,<sup>343</sup> and you cannot apprehend the essential nature of no essence.”
- 7.129 “Subhūti, do you think that these five dream-like aggregates train in the perfection of wisdom and go forth to all-aspect omniscience?” asked the Blessed One.
- 7.130 “No, Blessed Lord!” he replied. [F.238.b] “And if you ask why, Blessed Lord, it is because dreams are in their essential nature no essence, and you cannot apprehend the essential nature of no essence.”
- 7.131 “Subhūti, do you think that these five aggregates that are like an illusion train in the perfection of wisdom and go forth to all-aspect omniscience?” asked the Blessed One.
- 7.132 “No, Blessed Lord!” he replied. “And if you ask why, Blessed Lord, it is because illusions are in their essential nature no essence, and you cannot apprehend the essential nature of no essence.”
- 7.133 “Subhūti, do you think that these five aggregates that are like an echo train in the perfection of wisdom and go forth to all-aspect omniscience?” asked the Blessed One.
- 7.134 “No, Blessed Lord!” he replied. “And if you ask why, Blessed Lord, it is because echoes are in their essential nature no essence, and you cannot apprehend the essential nature of no essence.”

7.135 “Subhūti, do you think that these five aggregates that are like an optical aberration train in the perfection of wisdom and go forth to all-aspect omniscience?” asked the Blessed One.

7.136 “No, Blessed Lord!” he replied. “And if you ask why, Blessed Lord, it is because optical aberrations are in their essential nature no essence, and you cannot apprehend the essential nature of no essence.”

7.137 “Subhūti, do you think that these five aggregates that are like the moon in water train in the perfection of wisdom and go forth to [F.239.a] all-aspect omniscience?” asked the Blessed One.

7.138 “No, Blessed Lord!” he replied. “And if you ask why, Blessed Lord, it is because moons in water are in their essential nature no essence, and you cannot apprehend the essential nature of no essence.”

7.139 “Subhūti, do you think that these five aggregates that are like a mirage train in the perfection of wisdom and go forth to all-aspect omniscience?” asked the Blessed One.

7.140 “No, Blessed Lord!” he replied. “And if you ask why, Blessed Lord, it is because mirages are in their essential nature no essence, and you cannot apprehend the essential nature of no essence.”

7.141 “Subhūti, do you think that these five aggregates that are like a magical display train in the perfection of wisdom and go forth to all-aspect omniscience?” asked the Blessed One.

7.142 “No, Blessed Lord!” he replied. “And if you ask why, Blessed Lord, it is because magical displays are in their essential nature no essence, and you cannot apprehend the essential nature of no essence.”

7.143 The Blessed One said, “This is because, Subhūti, physical forms are like a dream, feelings are like a dream, perceptions are like a dream, formative predispositions are like a dream, and consciousness is like a dream. What is true of consciousness is true of the six sense faculties, and that is true of the five aggregates. They cannot be apprehended owing to the emptiness of internal phenomena, cannot be apprehended owing to the emptiness of external phenomena, cannot be apprehended owing to the emptiness of both external and internal phenomena, cannot be apprehended owing to the emptiness of emptiness, cannot be apprehended owing to the emptiness of great extent, cannot be apprehended owing to the emptiness of ultimate reality, cannot be apprehended owing to the emptiness of [F.239.b] conditioned phenomena, cannot be apprehended owing to the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, cannot be apprehended owing to the emptiness of the unlimited, cannot be apprehended owing to the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, cannot be apprehended owing to the emptiness of nonexclusion, cannot be apprehended owing to the emptiness of inherent nature, cannot be apprehended owing to the emptiness of all phenomena, cannot be apprehended owing to the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, cannot be apprehended owing to the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, cannot be apprehended owing to the emptiness of nonentities, cannot be apprehended owing to the emptiness of essential nature, and cannot be apprehended owing to the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities.

7.144 “Subhūti, physical forms are like an illusion, feelings are like an illusion, perceptions are like an illusion, formative predispositions are like an illusion, and consciousness is like an illusion. What is true of consciousness is true of the six sense faculties, and that is true of the five aggregates. They cannot be apprehended owing to the emptiness of internal phenomena, cannot be apprehended owing to the emptiness of external phenomena, cannot be apprehended owing to the emptiness of both external and internal phenomena, cannot be apprehended owing to the emptiness of emptiness, cannot be apprehended owing to the emptiness of great extent, cannot be apprehended owing to the emptiness of ultimate reality, cannot be apprehended owing to the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, cannot be apprehended owing to the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, cannot be apprehended owing to the emptiness of the unlimited, cannot be apprehended owing to the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, cannot be apprehended owing to the emptiness of nonexclusion, cannot be apprehended owing to the emptiness of inherent nature, cannot be apprehended owing to the emptiness of all phenomena, cannot be apprehended owing to the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, cannot be apprehended owing to the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, cannot be apprehended owing to the emptiness of nonentities, cannot be apprehended owing to the emptiness of essential nature, and cannot be apprehended owing to the [F.240.a] emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities.

7.145 “Subhūti, physical forms are like an echo, feelings are like an echo, perceptions are like an echo, formative predispositions are like an echo, and consciousness is like an echo. What is true of consciousness is true of the six sense faculties, and that is true of the five aggregates. They cannot be apprehended owing to the emptiness of internal phenomena, cannot be apprehended owing to the emptiness of external phenomena, cannot be apprehended owing to the emptiness of both external and internal phenomena, cannot be apprehended owing to the emptiness of emptiness, cannot be apprehended owing to the emptiness of great extent, cannot be apprehended owing to the emptiness of ultimate reality, cannot be apprehended owing to the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, cannot be apprehended owing to the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, cannot be apprehended owing to the emptiness of the unlimited, cannot be apprehended owing to the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, cannot be apprehended owing to the emptiness of nonexclusion, cannot be apprehended owing to the emptiness of inherent nature, cannot be apprehended owing to the emptiness of all phenomena, cannot be apprehended owing to the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, cannot be apprehended owing to the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, cannot be apprehended owing to the emptiness of nonentities, cannot be apprehended owing to the emptiness of essential nature, and cannot be apprehended owing to the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities.

7.146 “Subhūti, physical forms are like an optical aberration, feelings are like an optical aberration, perceptions are like an optical aberration, formative predispositions are like an optical aberration, and consciousness is like an optical aberration. What is true of consciousness is true of the six sense faculties, and that is true of the five aggregates. They cannot be apprehended owing to the emptiness of internal phenomena, cannot be apprehended owing to the emptiness of external phenomena, cannot be apprehended owing to the emptiness of both external and internal phenomena, cannot be apprehended owing to the emptiness of emptiness, [F.240.b] cannot be apprehended owing to the emptiness of great extent, cannot be apprehended owing to the emptiness of ultimate reality, cannot be apprehended owing to the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, cannot be apprehended owing to the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, cannot be apprehended owing to the emptiness of the unlimited, cannot be apprehended owing to the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, cannot be apprehended owing to the emptiness of nonexclusion, cannot be apprehended owing to the emptiness of inherent nature, cannot be apprehended owing to the emptiness of all phenomena, cannot be apprehended owing to the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, cannot be apprehended owing to the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, cannot be apprehended owing to the emptiness of nonentities, cannot be apprehended owing to the emptiness of essential nature, and cannot be apprehended owing to the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities.

7.147 “Subhūti, physical forms are like the moon in water, feelings are like the moon in water, perceptions are like the moon in water, formative predispositions are like the moon in water, and consciousness is like the moon in water. What is true of consciousness is true of the six sense faculties, and that is true of the five aggregates. They cannot be apprehended owing to the emptiness of internal phenomena, cannot be apprehended owing to the emptiness of external phenomena, cannot be apprehended owing to the emptiness of both external and internal phenomena, cannot be apprehended owing to the emptiness of emptiness, cannot be apprehended owing to the emptiness of great extent, cannot be apprehended owing to the emptiness of ultimate reality, cannot be apprehended owing to the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, cannot be apprehended owing to the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, cannot be apprehended owing to the emptiness of the unlimited, cannot be apprehended owing to the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, cannot be apprehended owing to the emptiness of nonexclusion, cannot be apprehended owing to the emptiness of inherent nature, cannot be apprehended owing to the emptiness of all phenomena, cannot be apprehended [F.241.a] owing to the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, cannot be apprehended owing to the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, cannot be apprehended owing to the emptiness of nonentities, cannot be apprehended owing to the emptiness of essential nature, and cannot be apprehended owing to the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities.

7.148 “Subhūti, physical forms are like a mirage, feelings are like a mirage, perceptions are like a mirage, formative predispositions are like a mirage, and consciousness is like a mirage. What is true of consciousness is true of the six sense faculties, and that is true of the five aggregates. They cannot be apprehended owing to the emptiness of internal phenomena, cannot be apprehended owing to the emptiness of external phenomena, cannot be apprehended owing to the emptiness of both external and internal phenomena, cannot be apprehended owing to the emptiness of emptiness, cannot be apprehended owing to the emptiness of great extent, cannot be apprehended owing to the emptiness of ultimate reality, cannot be apprehended owing to the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, cannot be apprehended owing to the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, cannot be apprehended owing to the emptiness of the unlimited, cannot be apprehended owing to the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, cannot be apprehended owing to the emptiness of nonexclusion, cannot be apprehended owing to the emptiness of inherent nature, cannot be apprehended owing to the emptiness of all phenomena, cannot be apprehended owing to the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, cannot be apprehended owing to the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, cannot be apprehended owing to the emptiness of nonentities, cannot be apprehended owing to the emptiness of essential nature, and cannot be apprehended owing to the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities.

7.149      “Subhūti, physical forms are like a magical display, feelings are like a magical display, perceptions are like a magical display, formative predispositions are like a magical display, and consciousness is like a magical display. What is true of consciousness is true of the six sense faculties, and that is true of the five aggregates. They cannot be apprehended owing to the emptiness of internal phenomena, cannot be apprehended [F.241.b] owing to the emptiness of external phenomena, cannot be apprehended owing to the emptiness of both external and internal phenomena, cannot be apprehended owing to the emptiness of emptiness, cannot be apprehended owing to the emptiness of great extent, cannot be apprehended owing to the emptiness of ultimate reality, cannot be apprehended owing to the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, cannot be apprehended owing to the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, cannot be apprehended owing to the emptiness of the unlimited, cannot be apprehended owing to the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, cannot be apprehended owing to the emptiness of nonexclusion, cannot be apprehended owing to the emptiness of inherent nature, cannot be apprehended owing to the emptiness of all phenomena, cannot be apprehended owing to the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, cannot be apprehended owing to the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, cannot be apprehended owing to the emptiness of nonentities, cannot be apprehended owing to the emptiness of essential nature, and cannot be apprehended owing to the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities.”

7.150      “Blessed Lord, in that case, will bodhisattva great beings who have newly embarked in the Vehicle not be afraid, fearful, and terrified when they hear this teaching?”

7.151      “Subhūti,” replied the Blessed One, “bodhisattva great beings who newly embark in the Vehicle will be afraid, fearful, and terrified if they are unskilled in the perfection of wisdom, and if they are not taken in hand by a spiritual mentor.”

7.152      “Blessed Lord, when bodhisattva great beings hear this teaching, what is the skillful means not to be afraid, not to be fearful, and not to be terrified of the perfection of wisdom?”

7.153      “Subhūti,” replied the Blessed One, “when bodhisattva great beings practice [F.242.a] the perfection of wisdom with an intention connected with all-aspect omniscience, they discern that physical forms are impermanent but do not apprehend that. With an intention connected with all-aspect omniscience they discern that feelings are impermanent but do not apprehend that. With an intention connected with all-aspect omniscience, they discern that perceptions are impermanent but do not apprehend that.

With an intention connected with all-aspect omniscience they discern that formative predispositions are impermanent but do not apprehend that. And with an intention connected with all-aspect omniscience they discern that consciousness is impermanent but do not apprehend that. This, Subhūti, is the skillful means of bodhisattva great beings practicing the perfection of wisdom.

7.154 “Moreover, Subhūti, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom with an intention connected with all-aspect omniscience, they discern that physical forms are suffering but do not apprehend that. With an intention connected with all-aspect omniscience they discern that feelings are suffering but do not apprehend that. With an intention connected with all-aspect omniscience they discern that perceptions are suffering but do not apprehend that. With an intention connected with all-aspect omniscience they discern that formative predispositions are suffering but do not apprehend that. And with an intention connected with all-aspect omniscience they discern that consciousness is suffering but do not apprehend that. This, Subhūti, is the skillful means of bodhisattva great beings practicing the perfection of wisdom.

7.155 “Moreover, Subhūti, when bodhisattva great beings [F.242.b] practice the perfection of wisdom with an intention connected with all-aspect omniscience, they discern that physical forms are not a self but do not apprehend that. With an intention connected with all-aspect omniscience they discern that feelings are not a self but do not apprehend that. With an intention connected with all-aspect omniscience they discern that perceptions are not a self but do not apprehend that. With an intention connected with all-aspect omniscience they discern that formative predispositions are not a self but do not apprehend that. And with an intention connected with all-aspect omniscience they discern that consciousness is not a self but do not apprehend that. This, Subhūti, is the skillful means of bodhisattva great beings practicing the perfection of wisdom.

7.156 “Moreover, Subhūti, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom with an intention connected with all-aspect omniscience, they discern that physical forms are at peace but do not apprehend that. With an intention connected with all-aspect omniscience they discern that feelings are at peace but do not apprehend that. With an intention connected with all-aspect omniscience they discern that perceptions are at peace but do not apprehend that. With an intention connected with all-aspect omniscience they discern that formative predispositions are at peace but do not apprehend that. And with an intention connected with all-aspect omniscience they discern that consciousness is at peace but do not apprehend that. This, Subhūti, is the skillful means of bodhisattva great beings practicing the perfection of wisdom.

7.157 “Moreover, Subhūti, when bodhisattva [F.243.a] great beings practice the perfection of wisdom with an intention connected with all-aspect omniscience, they discern that physical forms are empty but do not apprehend that. With an intention connected with all-aspect omniscience they discern that feelings are empty but do not apprehend that. With an intention connected with all-aspect omniscience they discern that perceptions are empty but do not apprehend that. With an intention connected with all-aspect omniscience they discern that formative predispositions are empty but do not apprehend that. And with an intention connected with all-aspect omniscience they discern that consciousness is empty but do not apprehend that. This, Subhūti, is the skillful means of bodhisattva great beings practicing the perfection of wisdom.

7.158 “Moreover, Subhūti, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom with an intention connected with all-aspect omniscience, they discern that physical forms are signless but do not apprehend that. With an intention connected with all-aspect omniscience they discern that feelings are signless but do not apprehend that. With an intention connected with all-aspect omniscience they discern that perceptions are signless but do not apprehend that. With an intention connected with all-aspect omniscience they discern that formative predispositions are signless but do not apprehend that. And with an intention connected with all-aspect omniscience they discern that consciousness is signless but do not apprehend that. This, Subhūti, is the skillful means of bodhisattva great beings [F.243.b] practicing the perfection of wisdom.

7.159 “Moreover, Subhūti, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom with an intention connected with all-aspect omniscience, they discern that physical forms are wishless but do not apprehend that. With an intention connected with all-aspect omniscience they discern that feelings are wishless but do not apprehend that. With an intention connected with all-aspect omniscience they discern that perceptions are wishless but do not apprehend that. With an intention connected with all-aspect omniscience they discern that formative predispositions are wishless but do not apprehend that. And with an intention connected with all-aspect omniscience they discern that consciousness is wishless but do not apprehend that. This, Subhūti, is the skillful means of bodhisattva great beings practicing the perfection of wisdom.

7.160 “Moreover, Subhūti, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom with an intention connected with all-aspect omniscience, they discern that physical forms are unconditioned but do not apprehend that. With an intention connected with all-aspect omniscience they discern that feelings are unconditioned but do not apprehend that. With an intention connected with all-aspect omniscience they discern that perceptions are unconditioned but do not apprehend that. With an intention connected with all-aspect omniscience they discern that formative predispositions are unconditioned but do not apprehend that. And with an intention connected with all-aspect omniscience they discern that consciousness is [F.244.a] unconditioned but do not apprehend that. This, Subhūti, is the skillful means of bodhisattva great beings practicing the perfection of wisdom.

7.161 “Moreover, Subhūti, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom with an intention connected with all-aspect omniscience, they discern that physical forms are void but do not apprehend that. With an intention connected with all-aspect omniscience they discern that feelings are void but do not apprehend that. With an intention connected with all-aspect omniscience they discern that perceptions are void but do not apprehend that. With an intention connected with all-aspect omniscience they discern that formative predispositions are void but do not apprehend that. And with an intention connected with all-aspect omniscience they discern that consciousness is void but do not apprehend that. This, Subhūti, is the skillful means of bodhisattva great beings practicing the perfection of wisdom.

7.162 “Moreover, Subhūti, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom with their attention turned toward all-aspect omniscience, they discern the impermanent aspect of physical forms but do not apprehend that. With their attention turned toward all-aspect omniscience they discern the impermanent aspect of feelings but do not apprehend that. With their attention turned toward all-aspect omniscience they discern the impermanent aspect of perceptions but do not apprehend that. With their attention turned toward all-aspect omniscience they discern the impermanent aspect of formative predispositions but do not apprehend that. And with their attention turned toward all-aspect [F.244.b] omniscience they discern the impermanent aspect of consciousness but do not apprehend that. This, Subhūti, is the skillful means of bodhisattva great beings practicing the perfection of wisdom.

- 7.163 “Moreover, Subhūti, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom with their attention turned toward all-aspect omniscience, they discern the suffering aspect of physical forms but do not apprehend that. With their attention turned toward all-aspect omniscience they discern the suffering aspect of feelings but do not apprehend that. With their attention turned toward all-aspect omniscience they discern the suffering aspect of perceptions but do not apprehend that. With their attention turned toward all-aspect omniscience they discern the suffering aspect of formative predispositions but do not apprehend that. And with their attention turned toward all-aspect omniscience they discern the suffering aspect of consciousness but do not apprehend that. This, Subhūti, is the skillful means of bodhisattva great beings practicing the perfection of wisdom.
- 7.164 “Moreover, Subhūti, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom with their attention turned toward all-aspect omniscience, they discern the selfless aspect of physical forms but do not apprehend that. With their attention turned toward all-aspect omniscience they discern the selfless aspect of feelings but do not apprehend that. With their attention turned toward all-aspect omniscience they discern the selfless aspect of perceptions but do not apprehend that. With their attention turned toward all-aspect [F.245.a] omniscience they discern the selfless aspect of formative predispositions but do not apprehend that. And with their attention turned toward all-aspect omniscience they discern the selfless aspect of consciousness but do not apprehend that. This, Subhūti, is the skillful means of bodhisattva great beings practicing the perfection of wisdom.
- 7.165 “Moreover, Subhūti, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom with their attention turned toward all-aspect omniscience, they discern the peaceful aspect of physical forms but do not apprehend that. With their attention turned toward all-aspect omniscience they discern the peaceful aspect of feelings but do not apprehend that. With their attention turned toward all-aspect omniscience they discern the peaceful aspect of perceptions but do not apprehend that. With their attention turned toward all-aspect omniscience they discern the peaceful aspect of formative predispositions but do not apprehend that. And with their attention turned toward all-aspect omniscience they discern the peaceful aspect of consciousness but do not apprehend that. This, Subhūti, is the skillful means of bodhisattva great beings practicing the perfection of wisdom.

7.166 “Moreover, Subhūti, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom with their attention turned toward all-aspect omniscience, they discern the empty aspect of physical forms but do not apprehend that. With their attention turned toward all-aspect omniscience they discern the empty aspect of feelings but do not apprehend that. With their attention [F.245.b] turned toward all-aspect omniscience they discern the empty aspect of perceptions but do not apprehend that. With their attention turned toward all-aspect omniscience they discern the empty aspect of formative predispositions but do not apprehend that. And with their attention turned toward all-aspect omniscience they discern the empty aspect of consciousness but do not apprehend that. This, Subhūti, is the skillful means of bodhisattva great beings practicing the perfection of wisdom.

7.167 “Moreover, Subhūti, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom with their attention turned toward all-aspect omniscience, they discern the signless aspect of physical forms but do not apprehend that. With their attention turned toward all-aspect omniscience they discern the signless aspect of feelings but do not apprehend that. With their attention turned toward all-aspect omniscience they discern the signless aspect of perceptions but do not apprehend that. With their attention turned toward all-aspect omniscience they discern the signless aspect of formative predispositions but do not apprehend that. And with their attention turned toward all-aspect omniscience they discern the signless aspect of consciousness but do not apprehend that. This, Subhūti, is the skillful means of bodhisattva great beings practicing the perfection of wisdom.

7.168 “Moreover, Subhūti, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom with their attention turned toward all-aspect omniscience, they discern the wishless aspect of physical forms but do not apprehend that. [F.246.a] With their attention turned toward all-aspect omniscience they discern the wishless aspect of feelings but do not apprehend that. With their attention turned toward all-aspect omniscience they discern the wishless aspect of perceptions but do not apprehend that. With their attention turned toward all-aspect omniscience they discern the wishless aspect of formative predispositions but do not apprehend that. And with their attention turned toward all-aspect omniscience they discern the wishless aspect of consciousness but do not apprehend that. This, Subhūti, is the skillful means of bodhisattva great beings practicing the perfection of wisdom.

7.169 “Moreover, Subhūti, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom with their attention turned toward all-aspect omniscience, they discern the unconditioned aspect of physical forms but do not apprehend that. With their attention turned toward all-aspect omniscience they discern the unconditioned aspect of feelings but do not apprehend that. With their attention turned toward all-aspect omniscience they discern the unconditioned aspect of perceptions but do not apprehend that. With their attention turned toward all-aspect omniscience they discern the unconditioned aspect of formative predispositions but do not apprehend that. And with their attention turned toward all-aspect omniscience they discern the unconditioned aspect of consciousness but do not apprehend that. This, Subhūti, is the skillful means of bodhisattva great beings [F.246.b] practicing the perfection of wisdom.

7.170 “Moreover, Subhūti, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom with their attention turned toward all-aspect omniscience, they discern the void aspect of physical forms but do not apprehend that. With their attention turned toward all-aspect omniscience they discern the void aspect of feelings but do not apprehend that. With their attention turned toward all-aspect omniscience they discern the void aspect of perceptions but do not apprehend that. With their attention turned toward all-aspect omniscience they discern the void aspect of formative predispositions but do not apprehend that. And with their attention turned toward all-aspect omniscience they discern the void aspect of consciousness but do not apprehend that. This, Subhūti, is the skillful means of bodhisattva great beings practicing the perfection of wisdom. [B18]

7.171 “Subhūti, when those bodhisattva great beings discern like that, they think that they will teach all beings the doctrine that physical forms are impermanent by way of not apprehending it, will teach the doctrine that physical forms are suffering by way of not apprehending it, will teach the doctrine that physical forms are not a self by way of not apprehending it, will teach the doctrine that physical forms are at peace by way of not apprehending it, will teach the doctrine that physical forms are empty by way of not apprehending it, will teach the doctrine that physical forms are signless by way of not apprehending it, will teach the doctrine that physical forms [F.247.a] are wishless by way of not apprehending it, will teach the doctrine that physical forms are unconditioned by way of not apprehending it, and will teach the doctrine that physical forms are void by way of not apprehending it; will teach the doctrine that feelings are impermanent by way of not apprehending it, will teach the doctrine that feelings are suffering by way of not apprehending it, will teach the doctrine that feelings are not a self by way of not apprehending it, will teach the doctrine that feelings are at peace by way of not apprehending it, will teach the doctrine that feelings are empty by way of not apprehending it, will teach the doctrine that feelings are signless by way of not apprehending it, will teach the doctrine that feelings are wishless by way of not apprehending it, will teach the doctrine that feelings are unconditioned by way of not apprehending it, and will teach the doctrine that feelings are void by way of not apprehending it; will teach the doctrine that perceptions are impermanent by way of not apprehending it, will teach the doctrine that perceptions are suffering by way of not apprehending it, will teach the doctrine that perceptions are not a self by way of not apprehending it, will teach the doctrine that perceptions are at peace by way of not apprehending it, will teach the doctrine that perceptions are empty by way of not apprehending it, will teach the doctrine that perceptions are signless by way of not apprehending it, will teach the doctrine that perceptions are wishless by way of not apprehending it, will teach the doctrine that perceptions are unconditioned by way of not apprehending it, and will teach the doctrine that perceptions are void by way of not apprehending it; will teach the doctrine that formative predispositions are impermanent by way of not apprehending it, will teach the doctrine [F.247.b] that formative predispositions are suffering by way of not apprehending it, will teach the doctrine that formative predispositions are not a self by way of not apprehending it, will teach the doctrine that formative predispositions are at peace by way of not apprehending it, will teach the doctrine that formative predispositions are empty by way of not apprehending it, will teach the doctrine that formative predispositions are signless by way of not apprehending it, will teach the doctrine that formative predispositions are wishless by way of not apprehending it, will teach the doctrine that formative predispositions are unconditioned by way of not apprehending it, and will teach the doctrine that formative predispositions are void by way of not apprehending it; and will teach the doctrine that consciousness is impermanent by way of not apprehending it, will teach the doctrine that consciousness is suffering by way of not apprehending it, will teach the doctrine that consciousness is not a self by way of not apprehending it, will teach the doctrine that consciousness is at peace by way of not apprehending it, will teach the doctrine that consciousness is empty by way of not apprehending it, will teach the doctrine that consciousness is signless by way of not apprehending it, will teach the doctrine that consciousness is wishless by way of not apprehending it, will teach the doctrine that consciousness is unconditioned by way of not apprehending it, and will teach the doctrine that consciousness is void by way of not apprehending it.

7.172 “Subhūti, this is the perfection of generosity of bodhisattva great beings. By possessing this, those bodhisattva great beings will not be afraid, fearful, or terrified.

7.173 “Moreover, Subhūti, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom, unconnected with what śrāvakas [F.248.a] or pratyekabuddhas pay attention to, they turn their attention to that impermanent aspect of physical forms, paying attention by way of not apprehending it; unconnected with what śrāvakas or pratyekabuddhas pay attention to, they turn their attention to that suffering aspect of physical forms, paying attention by way of not apprehending it; unconnected with what śrāvakas or pratyekabuddhas pay attention to, they turn their attention to that selfless aspect of physical forms, paying attention by way of not apprehending it; unconnected with what śrāvakas or pratyekabuddhas pay attention to, they turn their attention to that peaceful aspect of physical forms, paying attention by way of not apprehending it; unconnected with what śrāvakas or pratyekabuddhas pay attention to, they turn their attention to that empty aspect of physical forms, paying attention by way of not apprehending it; unconnected with what śrāvakas or pratyekabuddhas pay attention to, they turn their attention to that signless aspect of physical forms, paying attention by way of not apprehending it; unconnected with what śrāvakas or pratyekabuddhas pay attention to, they turn their attention to that wishless aspect of physical forms, paying attention by way of not apprehending it; unconnected with what śrāvakas or pratyekabuddhas pay attention to, they turn their attention to that unconditioned aspect of physical forms, paying attention by way of not apprehending it; and unconnected with what śrāvakas or pratyekabuddhas pay attention to, they turn their attention to that void aspect of physical forms, paying attention by way of not apprehending it. Unconnected with what śrāvakas or pratyekabuddhas pay attention to, they turn their attention to that impermanent aspect of feelings, paying attention by way of not apprehending it; unconnected with what śrāvakas or pratyekabuddhas pay attention to, they turn their attention to [F.248.b] that suffering aspect of feelings, paying attention by way of not apprehending it; unconnected with what śrāvakas or pratyekabuddhas pay attention to, they turn their attention to that selfless aspect of feelings, paying attention by way of not apprehending it; unconnected with what śrāvakas or pratyekabuddhas pay attention to, they turn their attention to that peaceful aspect of feelings, paying attention by way of not apprehending it; unconnected with what śrāvakas or pratyekabuddhas pay attention to, they turn their attention to that empty aspect of feelings, paying attention by way of not apprehending it; unconnected with what śrāvakas or pratyekabuddhas pay attention to, they turn their attention to that signless aspect of feelings, paying attention by way of not apprehending it; unconnected with what śrāvakas or pratyekabuddhas pay attention to, they turn their attention to that wishless aspect of feelings, paying attention by way of not apprehending it; unconnected with what śrāvakas or pratyekabuddhas pay attention to, they turn their attention to that unconditioned aspect of feelings, paying attention by way of not apprehending it; and unconnected with what śrāvakas or pratyekabuddhas pay attention to, they turn their attention to that void aspect of feelings, paying attention by way of not apprehending it. Unconnected with what śrāvakas or pratyekabuddhas pay attention to, they turn their attention to that impermanent aspect of perceptions, paying attention by way of not apprehending it; unconnected with what śrāvakas or pratyekabuddhas pay attention to, they turn their attention to that suffering aspect of perceptions, paying attention by way of not apprehending it; unconnected with what śrāvakas or pratyekabuddhas pay attention to, they turn their attention to that selfless aspect of perceptions, paying attention [F.249.a] by way of not apprehending it; unconnected with what śrāvakas or pratyekabuddhas pay attention to, they turn their attention to that peaceful aspect of perceptions, paying attention by way of not apprehending it; unconnected with what śrāvakas or pratyekabuddhas pay attention to, they turn their attention to that empty aspect of perceptions, paying attention by way of not apprehending it; unconnected with what śrāvakas or pratyekabuddhas pay attention to, they turn their attention to that signless aspect of perceptions, paying attention by way of not apprehending it; unconnected with what śrāvakas or pratyekabuddhas pay attention to, they turn their attention to that wishless aspect of perceptions, paying attention by way of not apprehending it; unconnected with what śrāvakas or pratyekabuddhas pay attention to, they turn their attention to that unconditioned aspect of perceptions, paying attention by way of not apprehending it; and unconnected with what śrāvakas or pratyekabuddhas pay attention to, they turn their attention to that void aspect of perceptions, paying attention by way of not apprehending it. Unconnected with what śrāvakas or pratyekabuddhas pay attention to, they turn their attention to that impermanent aspect of formative predispositions, paying attention by way of not apprehending it; unconnected with what śrāvakas or pratyekabuddhas pay attention to, they turn their attention to that suffering aspect of formative predispositions, paying attention by way of not apprehending it; unconnected with what śrāvakas or pratyekabuddhas pay attention to, [F.249.b] they turn their attention to that selfless aspect of formative predispositions, paying attention by way of not apprehending it; unconnected with what śrāvakas or pratyekabuddhas pay attention to, they turn their attention to that peaceful aspect of formative predispositions, paying attention by way of not apprehending it; unconnected with what śrāvakas or pratyekabuddhas pay attention to, they turn their attention to that empty aspect of formative predispositions, paying attention by way of not apprehending it; unconnected with what śrāvakas or pratyekabuddhas pay attention to, they turn their attention to that signless aspect of formative predispositions, paying attention by way of not apprehending it; unconnected with what śrāvakas or pratyekabuddhas pay attention to, they turn their attention to that wishless aspect of formative predispositions, paying attention by way of not apprehending it; unconnected with what śrāvakas or pratyekabuddhas pay attention to, they turn their attention to that unconditioned aspect of formative predispositions, paying attention by way of not apprehending it; and unconnected with what śrāvakas or pratyekabuddhas pay attention to, they turn their attention to that void aspect of formative predispositions, paying attention by way of not apprehending it. And unconnected with what śrāvakas or pratyekabuddhas pay attention to, they turn their attention to that impermanent aspect of consciousness, paying attention by way of not apprehending it; unconnected with what śrāvakas or pratyekabuddhas pay attention to, they turn their attention to that suffering aspect of consciousness, paying attention by way of not apprehending it; unconnected with what śrāvakas or pratyekabuddhas pay attention to, they turn their attention to that selfless aspect of consciousness, paying attention by way of not apprehending it; unconnected with what śrāvakas or pratyekabuddhas pay attention to, they turn their attention to that peaceful aspect of consciousness, paying attention by way of not apprehending it; unconnected with what śrāvakas or pratyekabuddhas pay attention to, they turn their attention to that empty aspect of consciousness, paying attention by way of not apprehending it; unconnected with what śrāvakas or pratyekabuddhas pay attention to, they turn their attention to that signless aspect of consciousness, [F.250.a] paying attention by way of not apprehending it; unconnected with what śrāvakas or pratyekabuddhas pay attention to, they turn their attention to that wishless aspect of consciousness, paying attention by way of not apprehending it; unconnected with what śrāvakas or pratyekabuddhas pay attention to, they turn their attention to that unconditioned aspect of consciousness, paying attention by way of not apprehending it; and unconnected with what śrāvakas or pratyekabuddhas pay attention to, they turn their attention to that void aspect of consciousness, paying attention by way of not apprehending it. This, Subhūti, is the undiminished perfection of ethical discipline of bodhisattva great beings. By possessing this, bodhisattva great beings will not be afraid, fearful, or terrified.

7.174 “Moreover, Subhūti, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom, they discern, tolerate, and find agreeable<sup>344</sup> the impermanent aspect, suffering aspect, selflessness aspect, calm aspect, empty aspect, signless aspect, wishless aspect, unconditioned aspect, and void aspect of those phenomena. This is the perfection of tolerance of bodhisattva great beings. By possessing this, bodhisattva great beings will not be afraid, fearful, or terrified.

7.175 “Moreover, Subhūti, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom with their attention turned toward all-aspect omniscience, they discern that physical forms are impermanent but do not apprehend that. With their attention turned toward all-aspect omniscience [F.250.b] they discern that physical forms are suffering but do not apprehend that. With their attention turned toward all-aspect omniscience they discern that physical forms are not a self but do not apprehend that. With their attention turned toward all-aspect omniscience they discern that physical forms are at peace but do not apprehend that. With their attention turned toward all-aspect omniscience they discern that physical forms are empty but do not apprehend that. With their attention turned toward all-aspect omniscience they discern that physical forms are signless but do not apprehend that. With their attention turned toward all-aspect omniscience they discern that physical forms are wishless but do not apprehend that. With their attention turned toward all-aspect omniscience they discern that physical forms are unconditioned but do not apprehend that. With their attention turned toward all-aspect omniscience they discern that physical forms are void but do not apprehend that.

7.176 “With their attention turned toward all-aspect omniscience, they discern that feelings are impermanent but do not apprehend that. With their attention turned toward all-aspect omniscience they discern that feelings are suffering but do not apprehend that. With their attention turned toward all-aspect omniscience they discern that feelings are not a self but do not apprehend that. With their attention turned toward all-aspect omniscience they discern that feelings are at peace but do not apprehend that. With their attention turned toward all-aspect omniscience they discern that feelings are empty [F.251.a] but do not apprehend that. With their attention turned toward all-aspect omniscience they discern that feelings are signless but do not apprehend that. With their attention turned toward all-aspect omniscience they discern that feelings are wishless but do not apprehend that. With their attention turned toward all-aspect omniscience they discern that feelings are unconditioned but do not apprehend that. With their attention turned toward all-aspect omniscience they discern that feelings are void but do not apprehend that.

7.177 “With their attention turned toward all-aspect omniscience, they discern that perceptions are impermanent but do not apprehend that. With their attention turned toward all-aspect omniscience they discern that perceptions are suffering but do not apprehend that. With their attention turned toward all-aspect omniscience they discern that perceptions are not a self but do not apprehend that. With their attention turned toward all-aspect omniscience they discern that perceptions are at peace but do not apprehend that. With their attention turned toward all-aspect omniscience they discern that perceptions are empty but do not apprehend that. With their attention turned toward all-aspect omniscience they discern that perceptions are signless but do not apprehend that. With their attention turned toward all-aspect omniscience they discern that perceptions are wishless but do not apprehend that. With their attention turned toward all-aspect omniscience they discern that perceptions are unconditioned [F.251.b] but do not apprehend that. With their attention turned toward all-aspect omniscience they discern that perceptions are void but do not apprehend that.

7.178 “With their attention turned toward all-aspect omniscience, they discern that formative predispositions are impermanent but do not apprehend that. With their attention turned toward all-aspect omniscience they discern that formative predispositions are suffering but do not apprehend that. With their attention turned toward all-aspect omniscience they discern that formative predispositions are not a self but do not apprehend that. With their attention turned toward all-aspect omniscience they discern that formative predispositions are at peace but do not apprehend that. With their attention turned toward all-aspect omniscience they discern that formative predispositions are empty but do not apprehend that. With their attention turned toward all-aspect omniscience they discern that formative predispositions are signless but do not apprehend that. With their attention turned toward all-aspect omniscience they discern that formative predispositions are wishless but do not apprehend that. With their attention turned toward all-aspect omniscience they discern that formative predispositions are unconditioned but do not apprehend that. With their attention turned toward all-aspect omniscience they discern that formative predispositions are void but do not apprehend that.

7.179 “With their attention turned toward all-aspect omniscience, they discern that consciousness is impermanent but do not apprehend that. With their attention turned toward all-aspect omniscience they discern that consciousness is suffering but [F.252.a] do not apprehend that. With their attention turned toward all-aspect omniscience they discern that consciousness is not a self but do not apprehend that. With their attention turned toward all-aspect omniscience they discern that consciousness is at peace but do not apprehend that. With their attention turned toward all-aspect omniscience they discern that consciousness is empty but do not apprehend that. With their attention turned toward all-aspect omniscience they discern that consciousness is signless but do not apprehend that. With their attention turned toward all-aspect omniscience they discern that consciousness is wishless but do not apprehend that. With their attention turned toward all-aspect omniscience they discern that consciousness is unconditioned but do not apprehend that. With their attention turned toward all-aspect omniscience they discern that consciousness is void but do not apprehend that. This nonabandonment of them in this manner, on account of their attention being turned toward all-aspect omniscience, and this nonforsaking of perseverance<sup>345</sup> is the perfection of perseverance of bodhisattva great beings. By possessing this, bodhisattva great beings will not be afraid, fearful, or terrified.

7.180 “Moreover, Subhūti, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom with their attention turned toward all-aspect omniscience, they discern that physical forms are impermanent by way of not apprehending it, and deny any opportunity<sup>346</sup> for attention connected with śrāvakas and pratyekabuddhas, [F.252.b] or for other nonvirtuous actions apart from those, to impede the attainment of enlightenment. When bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom with their attention turned toward all-aspect omniscience, they discern that physical forms are suffering by way of not apprehending it, and deny any opportunity for attention connected with śrāvakas and pratyekabuddhas, or for other nonvirtuous actions apart from those, to impede the attainment of enlightenment. When bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom with their attention turned toward all-aspect omniscience, they discern that physical forms are not a self by way of not apprehending it, and deny any opportunity for attention connected with śrāvakas and pratyekabuddhas, or for other nonvirtuous actions apart from those, to impede the attainment of enlightenment. When bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom with their attention turned toward all-aspect omniscience, they discern that physical forms are at peace by way of not apprehending it, and deny any opportunity for attention connected with śrāvakas and pratyekabuddhas, or for other nonvirtuous actions apart from those, to impede the attainment of enlightenment. When bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom with their attention turned toward all-aspect omniscience, they discern that physical forms are empty by way of not apprehending it, and deny any opportunity for attention connected with śrāvakas and pratyekabuddhas, or for other nonvirtuous actions apart from those, to impede the attainment of enlightenment. When bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom with their attention turned toward all-aspect omniscience, they discern [F.253.a] that physical forms are signless by way of not apprehending it, and deny any opportunity for attention connected with śrāvakas and pratyekabuddhas, or for other nonvirtuous actions apart from those, to impede the attainment of enlightenment. When bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom with their attention turned toward all-aspect omniscience, they discern that physical forms are wishless by way of not apprehending it, and deny any opportunity for attention connected with śrāvakas and pratyekabuddhas, or for other nonvirtuous actions apart from those, to impede the attainment of enlightenment. When bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom with their attention turned toward all-aspect omniscience, they discern that physical forms are unconditioned by way of not apprehending it, and deny any opportunity for attention connected with śrāvakas and pratyekabuddhas, or for other nonvirtuous actions apart from those, to impede the attainment of enlightenment. And with their attention turned toward all-aspect omniscience, they discern that physical forms are void by way of not apprehending it, and deny any opportunity for attention connected with śrāvakas and pratyekabuddhas, or for other nonvirtuous actions apart from those, to impede the attainment of enlightenment.

7.181 “Moreover, Subhūti, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom with their attention turned toward all-aspect omniscience, they discern that feelings are impermanent by way of not apprehending it, and deny any opportunity [F.253.b] for attention connected with śrāvakas and pratyekabuddhas, or for other nonvirtuous actions apart from those, to impede the attainment of enlightenment. When bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom with their attention turned toward all-aspect omniscience, they discern that feelings are suffering by way of not apprehending it, and deny any opportunity for attention connected with śrāvakas and pratyekabuddhas, or for other nonvirtuous actions apart from those, to impede the attainment of enlightenment. When bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom with their attention turned toward all-aspect omniscience, they discern that feelings are not a self by way of not apprehending it, and deny any opportunity for attention connected with śrāvakas and pratyekabuddhas, or for other nonvirtuous actions apart from those, to impede the attainment of enlightenment. When bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom with their attention turned toward all-aspect omniscience, they discern that feelings are at peace by way of not apprehending it, and deny any opportunity for attention connected with śrāvakas and pratyekabuddhas, or for other nonvirtuous actions apart from those, to impede the attainment of enlightenment. When bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom with their attention turned toward all-aspect omniscience, they discern that feelings are empty by way of not apprehending it, and deny any opportunity for attention connected with śrāvakas and pratyekabuddhas, or for other nonvirtuous actions apart from those, to impede the attainment of enlightenment. When bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom [F.254.a] with their attention turned toward all-aspect omniscience, they discern that feelings are signless by way of not apprehending it, and deny any opportunity for attention connected with śrāvakas and pratyekabuddhas, or for other nonvirtuous actions apart from those, to impede the attainment of enlightenment. When bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom with their attention turned toward all-aspect omniscience, they discern that feelings are wishless by way of not apprehending it, and deny any opportunity for attention connected with śrāvakas and pratyekabuddhas, or for other nonvirtuous actions apart from those, to impede the attainment of enlightenment. When bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom with their attention turned toward all-aspect omniscience, they discern that feelings are unconditioned by way of not apprehending it, and deny any opportunity for attention connected with śrāvakas and pratyekabuddhas, or for other nonvirtuous actions apart from those, to impede the attainment of enlightenment. And with their attention turned toward all-aspect omniscience, they discern that feelings are void by way of not apprehending it, and deny any opportunity for attention connected with śrāvakas and pratyekabuddhas, or for other nonvirtuous actions apart from those, to impede the attainment of enlightenment.

7.182 “Moreover, Subhūti, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom with their attention turned toward all-aspect omniscience, they discern that perceptions are impermanent by way of not apprehending it, and deny any opportunity for attention connected with śrāvakas and pratyekabuddhas, [F.254.b] or for other nonvirtuous actions apart from those, to impede the attainment of enlightenment. When bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom with their attention turned toward all-aspect omniscience, they discern that perceptions are suffering by way of not apprehending it, and deny any opportunity for attention connected with śrāvakas and pratyekabuddhas, or for other nonvirtuous actions apart from those, to impede the attainment of enlightenment. When bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom with their attention turned toward all-aspect omniscience, they discern that perceptions are not a self by way of not apprehending it, and deny any opportunity for attention connected with śrāvakas and

pratyekabuddhas, or for other nonvirtuous actions apart from those, to impede the attainment of enlightenment. When bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom with their attention turned toward all-aspect omniscience, they discern that perceptions are at peace by way of not apprehending it, and deny any opportunity for attention connected with śrāvakas and pratyekabuddhas, or for other nonvirtuous actions apart from those, to impede the attainment of enlightenment. When bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom with their attention turned toward all-aspect omniscience, they discern that perceptions are empty by way of not apprehending it, and deny any opportunity for attention connected with śrāvakas and pratyekabuddhas, or for other nonvirtuous actions apart from those, to impede the attainment of enlightenment. When bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom with their attention turned toward all-aspect [F.255.a] omniscience, they discern that perceptions are signless by way of not apprehending it, and deny any opportunity for attention connected with śrāvakas and pratyekabuddhas, or for other nonvirtuous actions apart from those, to impede the attainment of enlightenment. When bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom with their attention turned toward all-aspect omniscience, they discern that perceptions are wishless by way of not apprehending it, and deny any opportunity for attention connected with śrāvakas and pratyekabuddhas, or for other nonvirtuous actions apart from those, to impede the attainment of enlightenment. When bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom with their attention turned toward all-aspect omniscience, they discern that perceptions are unconditioned by way of not apprehending it, and deny any opportunity for attention connected with śrāvakas and pratyekabuddhas, or for other nonvirtuous actions apart from those, to impede the attainment of enlightenment. And with their attention turned toward all-aspect omniscience, they discern that perceptions are void by way of not apprehending it, and deny any opportunity for attention connected with śrāvakas and pratyekabuddhas, or for other nonvirtuous actions apart from those, to impede the attainment of enlightenment.

7.183 “Moreover, Subhūti, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom with their attention turned toward all-aspect omniscience, they discern that formative predispositions are impermanent by way of not apprehending it, and deny any opportunity for attention connected with śrāvakas and pratyekabuddhas, [F.255.b] or for other nonvirtuous actions apart from those, to impede the attainment of enlightenment. When bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom with their attention turned toward all-aspect omniscience, they discern that formative predispositions are suffering by way of not apprehending it, and deny any opportunity for attention connected with śrāvakas and pratyekabuddhas, or for other nonvirtuous actions apart from those, to impede the attainment of enlightenment. When bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom with their attention turned toward all-aspect omniscience, they discern that formative predispositions are not a self by way of not apprehending it, and deny any opportunity for attention connected with śrāvakas and pratyekabuddhas, or for other nonvirtuous actions apart from those, to impede the attainment of enlightenment. When bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom with their attention turned toward all-aspect omniscience, they discern that formative predispositions are at peace by way of not apprehending it, and deny any opportunity for attention connected with śrāvakas and pratyekabuddhas, or for other nonvirtuous actions apart from those, to impede the attainment of enlightenment. When bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom with their attention turned toward all-aspect omniscience, they discern that formative predispositions are empty by way of not apprehending it, and deny any opportunity for attention connected with śrāvakas and pratyekabuddhas, or for other nonvirtuous actions apart from those, to impede the attainment of enlightenment. When bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom with their attention turned toward all-aspect [F.256.a] omniscience, they discern that formative predispositions are signless by way of not apprehending it, and deny any opportunity for attention connected with śrāvakas and pratyekabuddhas, or for other nonvirtuous actions apart from those, to impede the attainment of enlightenment. When bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom with their attention turned toward all-aspect omniscience, they discern that formative predispositions are wishless by way of not apprehending it, and deny any opportunity for attention connected with śrāvakas and pratyekabuddhas, or for other nonvirtuous actions apart from those, to impede the attainment of enlightenment. When bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom with their attention turned toward all-aspect omniscience, they discern that formative predispositions are unconditioned by way of not apprehending it, and deny any opportunity for attention connected with śrāvakas and pratyekabuddhas, or for other nonvirtuous actions apart from those, to impede the attainment of enlightenment. And with their attention turned toward all-aspect omniscience, they discern that formative predispositions are void by way of not apprehending it, and deny any opportunity for attention connected with śrāvakas and pratyekabuddhas, or for other nonvirtuous actions apart from those, to impede the attainment of enlightenment.

“Moreover, Subhūti, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom with their attention turned toward all-aspect omniscience, they discern that consciousness is impermanent by way of not apprehending it, and deny any opportunity for attention connected with śrāvakas and pratyekabuddhas, [F.256.b] or for other nonvirtuous actions apart from those, to impede the attainment of enlightenment. When bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom with their attention turned toward all-aspect omniscience, they discern that consciousness is suffering by way of not apprehending it, and deny any opportunity for attention connected with śrāvakas and pratyekabuddhas, or for other nonvirtuous actions apart from those, to impede the attainment of enlightenment. When bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom with their attention turned toward all-aspect omniscience, they discern that consciousness is not a self by way of not apprehending it, and deny any opportunity for attention connected with śrāvakas and pratyekabuddhas, or for other nonvirtuous actions apart from those, to impede the attainment of enlightenment. When bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom with their attention turned toward all-aspect omniscience, they discern that consciousness is at peace by way of not apprehending it, and deny any opportunity for attention connected with śrāvakas and pratyekabuddhas, or for other nonvirtuous actions apart from those, to impede the attainment of enlightenment. When bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom with their attention turned toward all-aspect omniscience, they discern that consciousness is empty by way of not apprehending it, and deny any opportunity for attention connected with śrāvakas and pratyekabuddhas, or for other nonvirtuous actions apart from those, to impede the attainment of enlightenment. When bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom with their attention turned toward [F.257.a] all-aspect omniscience, they discern that consciousness is signless by way of not apprehending it, and deny any opportunity for attention connected with śrāvakas and pratyekabuddhas, or for other nonvirtuous actions apart from those, to impede the attainment of enlightenment. When bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom with their attention turned toward all-aspect omniscience, they discern that consciousness is wishless by way of not apprehending it, and deny any opportunity for attention connected with śrāvakas and pratyekabuddhas, or for other nonvirtuous actions apart from those, to impede the attainment of enlightenment. When bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom with their attention turned toward all-aspect omniscience, they discern that consciousness is unconditioned by way of not apprehending it, and deny any opportunity for attention connected with śrāvakas and

pratyekabuddhas, or for other nonvirtuous actions apart from those, to impede the attainment of enlightenment. And with their attention turned toward all-aspect omniscience, they discern that consciousness is void by way of not apprehending it, and deny any opportunity for attention connected with śrāvakas and pratyekabuddhas, or for other nonvirtuous actions apart from those, to impede the attainment of enlightenment.

7.185 “This is the perfection of meditative concentration of bodhisattva great beings. By possessing this, bodhisattva great beings will not be afraid, fearful, or terrified.

7.186 “Moreover, Subhūti, when bodhisattva great beings practice [F.257.b] the perfection of wisdom with their attention turned toward all-aspect omniscience, they discern in this manner: that physical forms are not empty of the emptiness of physical forms, but that physical forms are emptiness, and that emptiness is indeed physical forms; that feelings are not empty of the emptiness of feelings, but that feelings are emptiness, and that emptiness is indeed feelings; that perceptions are not empty of the emptiness of perceptions, but that perceptions are emptiness, and that emptiness is indeed perceptions; that formative predispositions are not empty of the emptiness of formative predispositions, but that formative predispositions are emptiness, and that emptiness is indeed formative predispositions; that consciousness is not empty of the emptiness of consciousness, but that a consciousness is emptiness, and that emptiness is indeed consciousness; that the eyes are not empty of the emptiness of the eyes, but that eyes are emptiness, and that emptiness is indeed the eyes; that the ears are not empty of the emptiness of the ears, but that ears are emptiness, and that emptiness is indeed the ears; that the nose is not empty of the emptiness of the nose, but that the nose is emptiness, and that emptiness is indeed the nose; that the tongue is not empty of the emptiness of the tongue, but that the tongue is emptiness, and that emptiness is indeed the tongue; that the body is not empty of the emptiness of the body, but that the body is emptiness, and that emptiness is indeed the body; that the mental faculty is not empty of the emptiness of the mental faculty, but that the mental faculty is emptiness, and that emptiness is indeed the mental faculty; that sights are not empty of the emptiness of sights, but that sights are emptiness, and that emptiness is indeed sights; that sounds are not empty of the emptiness of sounds, but that sounds are emptiness, and that emptiness is indeed sounds; that odors are not empty [F.258.a] of the emptiness of odors, but that odors are emptiness, and that emptiness is indeed odors; that tastes are not empty of the emptiness of tastes, but that tastes are emptiness, and that emptiness is indeed tastes; that tangibles are not empty of the emptiness of tangibles, but that tangibles are emptiness, and that emptiness is indeed tangibles; that mental phenomena are not empty of the emptiness of mental phenomena, but that mental phenomena are emptiness, and that emptiness is indeed mental phenomena; that visual consciousness is not empty of the emptiness of visual consciousness, but that visual consciousness is emptiness, and that emptiness is indeed visual consciousness; that auditory consciousness is not empty of the emptiness of auditory consciousness, but that auditory consciousness is emptiness, and that emptiness is indeed auditory consciousness; that olfactory consciousness is not empty of the emptiness of olfactory consciousness, but that olfactory consciousness is emptiness, and that emptiness is indeed olfactory consciousness; that gustatory consciousness is not empty of the emptiness of gustatory consciousness, but that gustatory consciousness is emptiness, and that emptiness is indeed gustatory consciousness; that tactile consciousness is not empty of the emptiness of tactile consciousness, but that tactile consciousness is emptiness, and that emptiness is indeed tactile consciousness; that mental consciousness is not empty of the emptiness of mental consciousness, but that mental consciousness is emptiness, and that emptiness is indeed mental consciousness; that visually compounded sensory contact is not empty of the emptiness of visually compounded sensory contact, but that visually compounded sensory contact is emptiness, and that emptiness is indeed visually compounded sensory contact; that aurally compounded sensory contact is not empty [F.258.b] of the emptiness of aurally compounded sensory contact, but that aurally compounded sensory contact is emptiness, and that emptiness is indeed aurally compounded sensory contact; that nasally compounded sensory contact is not empty of the emptiness of nasally compounded sensory contact, but that nasally compounded sensory contact is emptiness, and that emptiness is indeed nasally compounded sensory contact; that lingually compounded sensory contact is not empty of the emptiness of lingually compounded sensory contact, but that lingually compounded sensory contact is emptiness, and that emptiness is indeed lingually compounded sensory contact; that corporeally compounded sensory contact is not empty of the emptiness of corporeally compounded sensory contact, but that corporeally compounded sensory contact is emptiness, and that emptiness is indeed corporeally compounded sensory contact; that mentally compounded sensory contact is not empty of the emptiness of mentally compounded sensory contact, but that mentally compounded sensory contact is emptiness, and that emptiness is indeed mentally compounded sensory contact; that feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact are not empty of the emptiness of feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact, but that feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact are emptiness, and that emptiness is indeed feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact; that feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact are not empty of the emptiness of feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact, but that feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact is emptiness, and that emptiness is indeed feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact; that feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact are not empty of the emptiness of feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact, but that feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact are emptiness, and that emptiness is indeed feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact; that feelings conditioned by lingually compounded [F.259.a] sensory contact are not empty of the emptiness of feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact, but that feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact are emptiness, and that emptiness is indeed feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact; that feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact are not empty of the emptiness of feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact, but that feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact are emptiness, and that emptiness is indeed feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact; that feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact are not empty of the emptiness of feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact, but that feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact are emptiness, and that emptiness is indeed feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact; that the earth element is not empty of the emptiness of the earth element, but that the earth element is emptiness, and that emptiness is indeed the earth element; that the water element is not empty of the emptiness of the water element, but that the water element is emptiness, and that emptiness is indeed the water element; that the fire element is not empty of the emptiness of the fire element, but that the fire element is emptiness, and that emptiness is indeed the fire element; that the wind element is not empty of the emptiness of the wind element, but that the wind element is emptiness, and that emptiness is indeed the wind element; that the space element is not empty of the emptiness of the space element, but that the space element is emptiness, and that emptiness is indeed the space element; that the consciousness element is not empty of the emptiness of the consciousness element, but that the consciousness element is emptiness, and that emptiness is indeed the consciousness element; that ignorance is not empty of the emptiness [F.259.b] of ignorance, but that ignorance is emptiness, and that emptiness is indeed ignorance; that formative predispositions are not empty of the emptiness of formative predispositions, but that formative predispositions are emptiness, and that emptiness is indeed formative predispositions; that consciousness is not empty of the emptiness of consciousness, but that consciousness is emptiness, and that emptiness is indeed consciousness; that name and form are not empty of the emptiness of name and form, but that name and form are emptiness, and that emptiness is indeed name and form; that the six sense fields are not empty of the emptiness of the six sense fields, but that the six sense fields are emptiness, and that emptiness is indeed six sense fields; that sensory contact is not empty of the emptiness of sensory contact, but that sensory contact is emptiness, and that emptiness is indeed sensory contact; that sensation is not empty of the emptiness of sensation, but that sensation is emptiness, and that emptiness is indeed sensation; that craving is not empty of the emptiness of craving, but that craving is emptiness, and that emptiness is indeed craving; that grasping is not empty of the emptiness of grasping, but that grasping is emptiness, and that emptiness is indeed grasping; that the rebirth process is not empty of the emptiness of the rebirth process, but that the rebirth process is emptiness, and that emptiness is indeed the rebirth process; that birth is not empty of the emptiness of birth, but that birth is emptiness, and that emptiness is indeed birth; that aging and death are not empty of the emptiness of aging and death, but that aging and death are emptiness, and that emptiness is indeed aging and death; that the perfection of generosity is not empty of the emptiness of the perfection of generosity, but that the perfection of generosity is emptiness, and that emptiness is indeed the perfection of generosity; that the perfection of ethical discipline is not empty [F.260.a] of the emptiness of the perfection of ethical discipline, but that the perfection of ethical discipline is emptiness, and that emptiness is indeed the perfection of ethical discipline; that the perfection of tolerance is not empty of the emptiness of the perfection of tolerance, but that the perfection of tolerance is emptiness, and that emptiness is indeed the perfection of tolerance; that the perfection of perseverance is not empty of the emptiness of the perfection of perseverance, but that the perfection of perseverance is emptiness, and that emptiness is indeed the perfection of perseverance; that the perfection of meditative concentration is not empty of the emptiness of the perfection of meditative concentration, but that the perfection of meditative concentration is emptiness, and that emptiness is indeed the perfection of meditative concentration; that the perfection of wisdom is not empty of the emptiness of the perfection of wisdom, but that the perfection of wisdom is emptiness, and that emptiness is indeed the perfection of wisdom; that the emptiness of internal phenomena is not empty of the emptiness of the emptiness of internal phenomena, but that the emptiness of internal phenomena is emptiness, and that emptiness is indeed the emptiness of internal phenomena; that the emptiness of external phenomena is not empty of the emptiness of the emptiness of external phenomena, but that the emptiness of external phenomena is emptiness, and that emptiness is indeed the emptiness of external phenomena; that the emptiness of external and internal phenomena is not empty of the emptiness of the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, but that the emptiness of external and internal phenomena is emptiness, and that emptiness is indeed the emptiness of external and internal phenomena; that the emptiness of emptiness is not empty of the emptiness of the emptiness of emptiness, but that the emptiness of emptiness is emptiness, and that emptiness is indeed the emptiness of emptiness; that the emptiness of great extent is not empty of the emptiness of the emptiness of great extent, [F.260.b] but that the emptiness of great extent is emptiness, and that emptiness is indeed the emptiness of great extent; that the emptiness of ultimate reality is not empty of the emptiness of the emptiness of ultimate reality, but that the emptiness of ultimate reality is emptiness, and that emptiness is indeed the emptiness of ultimate reality; that the emptiness of conditioned phenomena is not empty of the emptiness of the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, but that the emptiness of conditioned phenomena is emptiness, and that emptiness is indeed the emptiness of conditioned phenomena; that the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena is not empty of the emptiness of the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, but that the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena is emptiness, and that emptiness is indeed the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena; that the emptiness of the unlimited is not empty of the emptiness of the emptiness of the unlimited, but that the emptiness of the unlimited is emptiness, and that emptiness is indeed the emptiness of the unlimited; that the emptiness of nonexclusion is not empty of the emptiness of the emptiness of nonexclusion, but that the emptiness of nonexclusion is emptiness, and that emptiness is indeed the emptiness of nonexclusion; that the emptiness of inherent nature is not empty of the emptiness of the emptiness of inherent nature, but that the emptiness of inherent nature is emptiness, and that emptiness is indeed the emptiness of inherent nature; that the emptiness of all phenomena is not empty of the emptiness of the emptiness of all phenomena, but that the emptiness of all phenomena is emptiness, and that emptiness is indeed the emptiness of all phenomena; that the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics is not empty of the emptiness of the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, but that [F.261.a] the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics is emptiness, and that emptiness is indeed the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics; that the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended is not empty of the emptiness of the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, but that the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended is emptiness, and that emptiness is indeed the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended; that the emptiness of nonentities is not empty of the emptiness of the emptiness of nonentities, but that the emptiness of nonentities is emptiness, and that emptiness is indeed the emptiness of nonentities; that the emptiness of essential nature is not empty of the emptiness of the emptiness of essential nature, but that the emptiness of essential nature is emptiness, and that emptiness is indeed the emptiness of essential nature; that the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities is not empty of the emptiness of the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities, but that the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities is emptiness, and that emptiness is indeed the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities; that the applications of mindfulness are not empty of the emptiness of the applications of mindfulness, but that the applications of mindfulness are emptiness, and that emptiness is indeed the applications of mindfulness; that the correct exertions are not empty of the emptiness of the correct exertions, but that the correct exertions are emptiness, and that emptiness is indeed the correct exertions; that the supports for miraculous ability are not empty of the emptiness of the supports for miraculous ability, but that the supports for miraculous ability are emptiness, and that emptiness is indeed the supports for miraculous ability; that the faculties are not empty of the emptiness of the faculties, but that the faculties are emptiness, and that emptiness is indeed the faculties; that the powers are not empty of the emptiness of the powers, but that the powers are emptiness, and that emptiness is indeed the powers; [F.261.b] that the branches of enlightenment are not empty of the emptiness of the branches of enlightenment, but that the branches of enlightenment are emptiness, and that emptiness is indeed the branches of enlightenment; that the noble eightfold path is not empty of the emptiness of the noble eightfold path, but that the noble eightfold path is emptiness, and that emptiness is indeed the noble eightfold path; that the truths of the noble ones are not empty of the emptiness of the truths of the noble ones, but that the truths of the noble ones are emptiness, and that emptiness is indeed the truths of the noble ones; that the meditative concentrations are not empty of the emptiness of the meditative concentrations, but that the meditative concentrations are emptiness, and that emptiness is indeed the meditative concentrations; that the immeasurable attitudes are not empty of the emptiness of the immeasurable attitudes, but that the immeasurable attitudes are emptiness, and that emptiness is indeed the immeasurable attitudes; that the formless

absorptions are not empty of the emptiness of the formless absorptions, but that the formless absorptions are emptiness, and that emptiness is indeed the formless absorptions; that the liberations are not empty of the emptiness of the eight liberations, but that the liberations are emptiness, and that emptiness is indeed the liberations; that the serial steps of meditative absorption are not empty of the emptiness of the nine serial steps of meditative absorption, but that the serial steps of meditative absorption are emptiness, and that emptiness is indeed the serial steps of meditative absorption; that the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation are not empty [F.262.a] of the emptiness of the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation, but that the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation are emptiness, and that emptiness is indeed the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation; that the extrasensory powers are not empty of the emptiness of the extrasensory powers, but that the extrasensory powers are emptiness, and that emptiness is indeed the extrasensory powers; that the meditative stabilities are not empty of the emptiness of the meditative stabilities, but that the meditative stabilities are emptiness, and that emptiness is indeed the meditative stabilities; that the dhāraṇī gateways are not empty of the emptiness of the dhāraṇī gateways, but that the dhāraṇī gateways are emptiness, and that emptiness is indeed the dhāraṇī gateways; that the powers of the tathāgatas are not empty of the emptiness of the powers of the tathāgatas, but that the powers of the tathāgatas are emptiness, and that emptiness is indeed the powers of the tathāgatas; that the fearlessnesses are not empty of the emptiness of the fearlessnesses, but that the fearlessnesses are emptiness, and that emptiness is indeed the fearlessnesses; that the kinds of exact knowledge are not empty of the emptiness of the kinds of exact knowledge, but that the kinds of exact knowledge are emptiness, and that emptiness is indeed the kinds of exact knowledge; that great loving kindness is not empty of the emptiness of great loving kindness, but that great loving kindness is emptiness, and that emptiness is indeed great loving kindness; that great compassion is not empty of the emptiness of great compassion, but that great compassion is emptiness, and that emptiness is indeed great compassion; and that the distinct qualities of the buddhas are not empty of the emptiness of the distinct qualities of the buddhas, but that the distinct qualities of the buddhas are emptiness, and that emptiness is [F.262.b] indeed the distinct qualities of the buddhas.

7.187      “This, Subhūti, is the perfection of wisdom of bodhisattva great beings. This, Subhūti, is the skillful means of bodhisattva great beings who practice perfection of wisdom. Bodhisattva great beings who possess this skillful means will not be afraid, fearful, or terrified on hearing this teaching.” [B19]

7.188 “Blessed Lord, who are those spiritual mentors, the spiritual mentors who have taken hold of<sup>347</sup> bodhisattva great beings so that they will not be afraid, fearful, or terrified on hearing this teaching on the perfection of wisdom?”

7.189 “Subhūti,” replied the Blessed One, “the spiritual mentors of bodhisattva great beings are those who teach them the doctrine that physical forms are impermanent by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that feelings are impermanent by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that perceptions are impermanent by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that formative predispositions are impermanent by way of [F.263.a] not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; and who teach them the doctrine that consciousness is impermanent by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience.

7.190 “Moreover, Subhūti, the spiritual mentors of bodhisattva great beings are those who teach them the doctrine that physical forms are suffering by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that feelings are suffering by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that perceptions are suffering by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that formative predispositions are suffering by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; and who teach them [F.263.b] the doctrine that consciousness is suffering by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience.

7.191 “Moreover, Subhūti, the spiritual mentors of bodhisattva great beings are those who teach them the doctrine that physical forms are not a self by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that feelings are not a self by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that perceptions are not a self by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that formative predispositions are not a self by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; and who teach them the doctrine that consciousness is not a self by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience.

7.192 “Moreover, Subhūti, the spiritual mentors of bodhisattva great beings are those who teach them the doctrine that physical forms are at peace [F.264.a] by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that feelings are at peace by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that perceptions are at peace by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that formative predispositions are at peace by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; and who teach them the doctrine that consciousness is at peace by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience.

7.193 “Moreover, Subhūti, the spiritual mentors of bodhisattva great beings are those who teach them the doctrine that physical forms are empty by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that feelings are empty by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, [F.264.b] or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that perceptions are empty by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that formative predispositions are empty by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; and who teach them the doctrine that consciousness is empty by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience.

7.194 “Moreover, Subhūti, the spiritual mentors of bodhisattva great beings are those who teach them the doctrine that physical forms are signless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that feelings are signless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that perceptions are signless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that formative predispositions are signless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, [F.265.a] or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; and who teach them the doctrine that consciousness is signless

by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience.

7.195 “Moreover, Subhūti, the spiritual mentors of bodhisattva great beings are those who teach them the doctrine that physical forms are wishless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that feelings are wishless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that perceptions are wishless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that formative predispositions are wishless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; and who teach them the doctrine that consciousness is wishless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience.

7.196 “Moreover, [F.265.b] Subhūti, the spiritual mentors of bodhisattva great beings are those who teach them the doctrine that physical forms are unconditioned by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that feelings are unconditioned by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that perceptions are unconditioned by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that formative predispositions are unconditioned by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; and who teach them the doctrine that consciousness is unconditioned by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience.

7.197 “Moreover, Subhūti, the spiritual mentors of bodhisattva great beings are those who teach them the doctrine that physical forms are void by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine [F.266.a] that feelings are void by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that perceptions are void by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that formative predispositions are void by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; and who teach them the doctrine that consciousness is void by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience.

7.198 “Moreover, Subhūti, the spiritual mentors of bodhisattva great beings are those who teach them the doctrine that the eyes are impermanent by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that the ears are impermanent by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that the nose is impermanent by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication [F.266.b] of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that the tongue is impermanent by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that the body is impermanent by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; and who teach them the doctrine that the mental faculty is impermanent by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience.

7.199 “Moreover, Subhūti, the spiritual mentors of bodhisattva great beings are those who teach them the doctrine that the eyes are suffering by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that the ears are suffering by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that the nose is suffering by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that the tongue is suffering by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication [F.267.a] of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that the body is suffering by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; and who teach them the doctrine that the mental faculty is suffering by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience.

7.200 “Moreover, Subhūti, the spiritual mentors of bodhisattva great beings are those who teach them the doctrine that the eyes are not a self by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that the ears are not a self by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that the nose is not a self by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that the tongue is not a self by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that the body is not a self by way of not apprehending it, [F.267.b] and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; and who teach them the doctrine that the mental faculty is not a self by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience.

7.201 “Moreover, Subhūti, the spiritual mentors of bodhisattva great beings are those who teach them the doctrine that the eyes are at peace by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that the ears are at peace by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that the nose is at peace by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that the tongue is at peace by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that the body is at peace by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; and who teach them the doctrine that the mental faculty is at peace [F.268.a] by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience.

7.202 “Moreover, Subhūti, the spiritual mentors of bodhisattva great beings are those who teach them the doctrine that the eyes are empty by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that the ears are empty by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that the nose is empty by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that the tongue is empty by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that the body is empty by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; and who teach them the doctrine that the mental faculty is empty by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience. [F.268.b]

7.203      “Moreover, Subhūti, the spiritual mentors of bodhisattva great beings are those who teach them the doctrine that the eyes are signless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that the ears are signless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that the nose is signless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that the tongue is signless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that the body is signless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; and who teach them the doctrine that the mental faculty is signless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience.

7.204 “Moreover, Subhūti, the spiritual mentors of bodhisattva great beings are those who teach them the doctrine that the eyes are wishless by way of not [F.269.a] apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that the ears are wishless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that the nose is wishless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that the tongue is wishless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that the body is wishless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; and who teach them the doctrine that the mental faculty is wishless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience.

7.205 “Moreover, Subhūti, the spiritual mentors of bodhisattva great beings are those who teach them the doctrine that the eyes are unconditioned by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, [F.269.b] or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that the ears are unconditioned by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that the nose is unconditioned by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that the tongue is unconditioned by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that the body is unconditioned by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; and who teach them the doctrine that the mental faculty is unconditioned by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience.

7.206 “Moreover, Subhūti, the spiritual mentors of bodhisattva great beings are those who teach them the doctrine that the eyes are void by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that the ears are void by way of not apprehending it, [F.270.a] and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that the nose is void by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that the tongue is void by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that the body is void by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; and who teach them the doctrine that the mental faculty is void by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience.

7.207 “Moreover, Subhūti, the spiritual mentors of bodhisattva great beings are those who teach them the doctrine that sights are impermanent by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that sounds are impermanent by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them [F.270.b] the doctrine that odors are impermanent by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that tastes are impermanent by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that tangibles are impermanent by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; and who teach them the doctrine that mental phenomena are impermanent by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience.

7.208 “Moreover, Subhūti, the spiritual mentors of bodhisattva great beings are those who teach them the doctrine that sights are suffering by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that sounds are suffering by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that odors are suffering by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, [F.271.a] or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that tastes are suffering by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that tangibles are suffering by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; and who teach them the doctrine that mental phenomena are suffering by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience.

7.209      “Moreover, Subhūti, the spiritual mentors of bodhisattva great beings are those who teach them the doctrine that sights are not a self by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that sounds are not a self by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that odors are not a self by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that tastes are not a self by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication [F.271.b] of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that tangibles are not a self by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; and who teach them the doctrine that mental phenomena are not a self by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience.

7.210      “Moreover, Subhūti, the spiritual mentors of bodhisattva great beings are those who teach them the doctrine that sights are at peace by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that sounds are at peace by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that odors are at peace by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that tastes are at peace by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that tangibles are at peace by way of [F.272.a] not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; and who teach them the doctrine that mental phenomena are at peace by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience.

7.211 “Moreover, Subhūti, the spiritual mentors of bodhisattva great beings are those who teach them the doctrine that sights are empty by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that sounds are empty by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that odors are empty by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that tastes are empty by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that tangibles are empty by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; and who teach them the doctrine that mental phenomena are empty by way of [F.272.b] not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience.

7.212 “Moreover, Subhūti, the spiritual mentors of bodhisattva great beings are those who teach them the doctrine that sights are signless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that sounds are signless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that odors are signless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that tastes are signless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that tangibles are signless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; and who teach them the doctrine that mental phenomena are signless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience.

7.213 “Moreover, [F.273.a] Subhūti, the spiritual mentors of bodhisattva great beings are those who teach them the doctrine that sights are wishless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that sounds are wishless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that odors are wishless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that tastes are wishless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that tangibles are wishless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; and who teach them the doctrine that mental phenomena are wishless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience.

7.214 “Moreover, Subhūti, the spiritual mentors of bodhisattva great beings are those who teach them the doctrine that sights are unconditioned by way of [F.273.b] not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that sounds are unconditioned by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that odors are unconditioned by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that tastes are unconditioned by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that tangibles are unconditioned by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; and who teach them the doctrine that mental phenomena are unconditioned by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience.

7.215 “Moreover, Subhūti, the spiritual mentors of bodhisattva great beings are those who teach them the doctrine that sights are void by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause [F.274.a] the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that sounds are void by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that odors are void by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that tastes are void by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that tangibles are void by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; and who teach them the doctrine that mental phenomena are void by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience.

7.216 “Moreover, Subhūti, the spiritual mentors of bodhisattva great beings are those who teach them the doctrine that visual consciousness is impermanent by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that auditory consciousness is impermanent by way of not apprehending it, and who [F.274.b] do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that olfactory consciousness is impermanent by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that gustatory consciousness is impermanent by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that tactile consciousness is impermanent by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; and who teach them the doctrine that mental consciousness is impermanent by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience.

7.217 “Moreover, Subhūti, the spiritual mentors of bodhisattva great beings are those who teach them the doctrine that visual consciousness is suffering by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that auditory consciousness is suffering by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, [F.275.a] or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that olfactory consciousness is suffering by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that gustatory consciousness is suffering by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that tactile consciousness is suffering by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; and who teach them the doctrine that mental consciousness is suffering by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience.

7.218 “Moreover, Subhūti, the spiritual mentors of bodhisattva great beings are those who teach them the doctrine that visual consciousness is not a self by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that auditory consciousness is not a self by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that [F.275.b] olfactory consciousness is not a self by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that gustatory consciousness is not a self by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that tactile consciousness is not a self by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; and who teach them the doctrine that mental consciousness is not a self by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience. [B20]

7.219 “Moreover, Subhūti, the spiritual mentors of bodhisattva great beings are those who teach them the doctrine that visual consciousness is at peace by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the

pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that auditory consciousness is at peace by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; [F.276.a] who teach them the doctrine that olfactory consciousness is at peace by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that gustatory consciousness is at peace by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; and who teach them the doctrine that mental consciousness is at peace by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience.

7.220 “Moreover, Subhūti, the spiritual mentors of bodhisattva great beings are those who teach them the doctrine that visual consciousness is empty by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that auditory consciousness is empty by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that olfactory consciousness is empty by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas [F.276.b] or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that gustatory consciousness is empty by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that tactile consciousness is empty by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; and who teach them the doctrine that mental consciousness is empty by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience.

7.221 “Moreover, Subhūti, the spiritual mentors of bodhisattva great beings are those who teach them the doctrine that visual consciousness is signless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that auditory consciousness is signless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that olfactory consciousness is signless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them [F.277.a] the doctrine that gustatory consciousness is signless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that tactile consciousness is signless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; and who teach them the doctrine that mental consciousness is signless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience.

7.222 “Moreover, Subhūti, the spiritual mentors of bodhisattva great beings are those who teach them the doctrine that visual consciousness is wishless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that auditory consciousness is wishless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that olfactory consciousness is wishless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that gustatory consciousness is wishless by way of not apprehending it, [F.277.b] and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that tactile consciousness is wishless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; and who teach them the doctrine that mental consciousness is wishless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience.

7.223      “Moreover, Subhūti, the spiritual mentors of bodhisattva great beings are those who teach them the doctrine that visual consciousness is unconditioned by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that auditory consciousness is unconditioned by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that olfactory consciousness is unconditioned by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that gustatory consciousness is unconditioned by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue [F.278.a] to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that tactile consciousness is unconditioned by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; and who teach them the doctrine that mental consciousness is unconditioned by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience.

7.224 “Moreover, Subhūti, the spiritual mentors of bodhisattva great beings are those who teach them the doctrine that visual consciousness is void by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that auditory consciousness is void by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that olfactory consciousness is void by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that gustatory consciousness is void by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that tactile consciousness is void by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of [F.278.b] the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; and who teach them the doctrine that mental consciousness is void by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience.

7.225 “Moreover, Subhūti, the spiritual mentors of bodhisattva great beings are those who teach them the doctrine that visually compounded sensory contact is impermanent by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that aurally compounded sensory contact is impermanent by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that nasally compounded sensory contact is impermanent by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that lingually compounded sensory contact is impermanent by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, [F.279.a] or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that corporeally compounded sensory contact is impermanent by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; and who teach them the doctrine that mentally compounded sensory contact is impermanent by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience.

7.226 “Moreover, Subhūti, the spiritual mentors of bodhisattva great beings are those who teach them the doctrine that visually compounded sensory contact is suffering by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that aurally compounded sensory contact is suffering by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that nasally compounded sensory contact is suffering by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that lingually compounded sensory contact is suffering by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; [F.279.b] who teach them the doctrine that corporeally compounded sensory contact is suffering by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; and who teach them the doctrine that mentally compounded sensory contact is suffering by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience.

7.227 “Moreover, Subhūti, the spiritual mentors of bodhisattva great beings are those who teach them the doctrine that visually compounded sensory contact is not a self by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that aurally compounded sensory

contact is not a self by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that nasally compounded sensory contact is not a self by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that lingually compounded sensory contact is not a self by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that corporeally compounded sensory contact is not a self by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; and who teach them the doctrine that mentally compounded sensory contact is not a self by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience.

7.228      “Moreover, Subhūti, the spiritual mentors of bodhisattva great beings are those who teach them the doctrine that visually compounded sensory contact is at peace by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that aurally compounded sensory contact is at peace by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that nasally compounded sensory contact is at peace by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that lingually compounded sensory contact is at peace by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that corporeally compounded sensory contact is at peace by way of not apprehending it, and who [F.280.b] do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; and who teach them the doctrine that mentally compounded sensory contact is at peace by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience.

7.229 “Moreover, Subhūti, the spiritual mentors of bodhisattva great beings are those who teach them the doctrine that visually compounded sensory contact is empty by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that aurally compounded sensory contact is empty by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that nasally compounded sensory contact is empty by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that lingually compounded sensory contact is empty by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that corporeally compounded sensory contact is empty by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything [F.281.a] other than all-aspect omniscience; and who teach them the doctrine that mentally compounded sensory contact is empty by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience.

7.230 “Moreover, Subhūti, the spiritual mentors of bodhisattva great beings are those who teach them the doctrine that visually compounded sensory contact is signless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that aurally compounded sensory contact is signless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that nasally compounded sensory

contact is signless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that lingually compounded sensory contact is signless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that corporeally compounded sensory contact is signless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; and who teach them [F.281.b] the doctrine that mentally compounded sensory contact is signless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience.

7.231 “Moreover, Subhūti, the spiritual mentors of bodhisattva great beings are those who teach them the doctrine that visually compounded sensory contact is wishless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that aurally compounded sensory contact is wishless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that nasally compounded sensory contact is wishless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that lingually compounded sensory contact is wishless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that corporeally compounded sensory contact is wishless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; and who teach them the doctrine that mentally compounded sensory contact is wishless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience.

7.232 “Moreover, Subhūti, the spiritual mentors of bodhisattva great beings are those who teach them the doctrine that visually compounded sensory contact is unconditioned by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that aurally compounded sensory contact is unconditioned by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that nasally compounded sensory contact is unconditioned by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that lingually compounded sensory contact is unconditioned by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that corporeally compounded sensory contact is unconditioned by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other [F.282.b] than all-aspect omniscience; and who teach them the doctrine that mentally compounded sensory contact is unconditioned by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience.

7.233 “Moreover, Subhūti, the spiritual mentors of bodhisattva great beings are those who teach them the doctrine that visually compounded sensory contact is void by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that aurally compounded sensory contact is void by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that nasally compounded sensory contact is void by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that lingually compounded sensory contact is void by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that corporeally compounded sensory contact is void by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; and who teach them the doctrine that mentally compounded [F.283.a] sensory contact is void by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience.

7.234      “Moreover, Subhūti, the spiritual mentors of bodhisattva great beings are those who teach them the doctrine that feelings arising from visually compounded sensory contact are impermanent by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that feelings arising from aurally compounded sensory contact are impermanent by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that feelings arising from nasally compounded sensory contact are impermanent by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that feelings arising from lingually compounded sensory contact are impermanent by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that feelings arising from corporeally compounded sensory contact are impermanent by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; and who teach them the doctrine that feelings arising from mentally compounded sensory contact are impermanent [F.283.b] by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience.

7.235 “Moreover, Subhūti, the spiritual mentors of bodhisattva great beings are those who teach them the doctrine that feelings arising from visually compounded sensory contact are suffering by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that feelings arising from aurally compounded sensory contact are suffering by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that feelings arising from nasally compounded sensory contact are suffering by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that feelings arising from lingually compounded sensory contact are suffering by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that feelings arising from corporeally compounded sensory contact are suffering by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; and who teach them the doctrine [F.284.a] that feelings arising from mentally compounded sensory contact are suffering by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience.

7.236 “Moreover, Subhūti, the spiritual mentors of bodhisattva great beings are those who teach them the doctrine that feelings arising from visually compounded sensory contact are not a self by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that feelings arising from aurally compounded sensory contact are not a self by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that feelings arising from nasally compounded sensory contact are not a self by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that feelings arising from lingually compounded sensory contact are not a self by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that feelings arising from corporeally compounded sensory contact are not a self by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, [F.284.b] or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; and who teach them the doctrine that feelings arising from mentally compounded sensory contact are not a self by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience.

7.237 “Moreover, Subhūti, the spiritual mentors of bodhisattva great beings are those who teach them the doctrine that feelings arising from visually compounded sensory contact are at peace by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that feelings arising from aurally compounded sensory contact are at peace by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that feelings arising from nasally compounded sensory contact are at peace by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that feelings arising from lingually compounded sensory contact are at peace by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that feelings arising from corporeally compounded sensory contact are at peace by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to [F.285.a] the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; and who teach them the doctrine that feelings arising from mentally compounded sensory contact are at peace by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience.

7.238 “Moreover, Subhūti, the spiritual mentors of bodhisattva great beings are those who teach them the doctrine that feelings arising from visually compounded sensory contact are empty by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that feelings arising from aurally compounded sensory contact are empty by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that feelings arising from nasally compounded sensory contact are empty by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that feelings arising from lingually compounded sensory contact are empty by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that feelings arising from corporeally compounded sensory contact are empty by way of not apprehending it, [F.285.b] and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; and who teach them the doctrine that feelings arising from mentally compounded sensory contact are empty by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience.

7.239 “Moreover, Subhūti, the spiritual mentors of bodhisattva great beings are those who teach them the doctrine that feelings arising from visually compounded sensory contact are signless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that feelings arising from aurally compounded sensory contact are signless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of

virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that feelings arising from nasally compounded sensory contact are signless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that feelings arising from lingually compounded sensory contact are signless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; [F.286.a] who teach them the doctrine that feelings arising from corporeally compounded sensory contact are signless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; and who teach them the doctrine that feelings arising from mentally compounded sensory contact are signless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience.

7.240 “Moreover, Subhūti, the spiritual mentors of bodhisattva great beings are those who teach them the doctrine that feelings arising from visually compounded sensory contact are wishless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that feelings arising from aurally compounded sensory contact are wishless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that feelings arising from nasally compounded sensory contact are wishless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that feelings arising from lingually compounded sensory contact are wishless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue [F.286.b] to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that feelings arising from corporeally compounded sensory contact are wishless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of

virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; and who teach them the doctrine that feelings arising from mentally compounded sensory contact are wishless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience.

7.241 “Moreover, Subhūti, the spiritual mentors of bodhisattva great beings are those who teach them the doctrine that feelings arising from visually compounded sensory contact are unconditioned by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that feelings arising from aurally compounded sensory contact are unconditioned by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that feelings arising from nasally compounded sensory contact are unconditioned by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine [F.287.a] that feelings arising from lingually compounded sensory contact are unconditioned by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that feelings arising from corporeally compounded sensory contact are unconditioned by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; and who teach them the doctrine that feelings arising from mentally compounded sensory contact are unconditioned by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience.

7.242 “Moreover, Subhūti, the spiritual mentors of bodhisattva great beings are those who teach them the doctrine that feelings arising from visually compounded sensory contact are void by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that feelings arising from aurally compounded sensory contact are void by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that feelings arising from nasally compounded sensory contact are void by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue [F.287.b] to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that feelings arising from lingually compounded sensory contact are void by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that feelings arising from corporeally compounded sensory contact are void by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; and who teach them the doctrine that feelings arising from mentally compounded sensory contact are void by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience.

7.243      “Moreover, Subhūti, the spiritual mentors of bodhisattva great beings are those who teach them the doctrine that the earth element is impermanent by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that the water element is impermanent by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that the fire element is impermanent [F.288.a] by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that the wind element is impermanent by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that the space element is impermanent by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; and who teach them the doctrine that the consciousness element is impermanent by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience. They are those who teach them the doctrine that the earth element is suffering by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that the water element is suffering by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that the fire element is suffering by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that the wind element is suffering by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause [F.288.b] the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that the space element is suffering by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; and who teach them the doctrine that the consciousness element is suffering by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience. They are those who teach them the doctrine that the earth element is not a self by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that the water element is not a self by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that the fire element is not a self by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, [F.289.a] or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that the wind element is not a self by way of not apprehending

it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that the space element is not a self by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; and who teach them the doctrine that the consciousness element is not a self by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience. They are those who teach them the doctrine that the earth element is at peace by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that the water element is at peace by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that the fire element is at peace by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than [F.289.b] all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that the wind element is at peace by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that the space element is at peace by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; and who teach them the doctrine that the consciousness element is at peace by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience. They are those who teach them the doctrine that the earth element is empty by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that the water element is empty by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that the fire element is empty by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that the wind element is empty by way of not [F.290.a] apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that the space element is empty by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; and who teach them the doctrine that the consciousness element is empty by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience. They are those who teach them the doctrine that the earth element is signless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that the water element is signless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that the fire element is signless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that the wind element is signless by way of not apprehending it, and who [F.290.b] do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that the space element is signless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; and who teach them the doctrine that the consciousness element is signless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience. They are those who teach them the doctrine that the earth element is wishless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that the water element is wishless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that the fire element is wishless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that the wind element is wishless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas [F.291.a] or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that the space element is wishless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; and who teach them the doctrine that the consciousness element is wishless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience. They are those who teach them the doctrine that the earth element is unconditioned by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that the water element is unconditioned by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that the fire element is unconditioned by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that the wind element is unconditioned by way of not apprehending it, [F.291.b] and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that the space element is unconditioned by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; and who teach them the doctrine that the consciousness element is unconditioned by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience. They are those who teach them the doctrine that the earth element is void by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that the water element is void by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that the fire element is void by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that the wind element is void by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue [F.292.a] to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; who teach them the doctrine that the space element is void by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; and who teach them the doctrine that the consciousness element is void by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience. [B21]

7.244 “Moreover, Subhūti, the spiritual mentors of bodhisattva great beings are those who teach them the doctrine that dependent origination is impermanent by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that dependent origination is suffering by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that dependent origination is not a self by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect [F.292.b] omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that dependent origination is at peace by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause

the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that dependent origination is empty by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that dependent origination is signless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that dependent origination is wishless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that dependent origination is unconditioned by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; and are those who teach them the doctrine that dependent origination is void by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience.

7.245      “Moreover, Subhūti, the spiritual mentors of bodhisattva great beings [F.293.a] are those who teach them the doctrine that the perfection of generosity is impermanent by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the perfection of ethical discipline is impermanent by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the perfection of tolerance is impermanent by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the perfection of perseverance is impermanent by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the perfection of meditative concentration is impermanent by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; and are those who teach them the doctrine that the perfection of wisdom is impermanent by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience.

7.246 “Moreover, Subhūti, [F.293.b] the spiritual mentors of bodhisattva great beings are those who teach them the doctrine that the perfection of generosity is suffering by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the perfection of ethical discipline is suffering by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the perfection of tolerance is suffering by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the perfection of perseverance is suffering by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the perfection of meditative concentration is suffering by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; and are those who teach them the doctrine that the perfection of wisdom is suffering by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything [F.294.a] other than all-aspect omniscience.

7.247 “Moreover, Subhūti, the spiritual mentors of bodhisattva great beings are those who teach them the doctrine that the perfection of generosity is not a self by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the perfection of ethical discipline is not a self by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the perfection of tolerance is not a self by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the perfection of perseverance is not a self by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the perfection of meditative concentration is not a self by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; and are those who teach them the doctrine that the perfection of wisdom is not a self by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue [F.294.b] to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience.

7.248      “Moreover, Subhūti, the spiritual mentors of bodhisattva great beings are those who teach them the doctrine that the perfection of generosity is at peace by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the perfection of ethical discipline is at peace by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the perfection of tolerance is at peace by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the perfection of perseverance is at peace by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the perfection of meditative concentration is at peace by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; and are those who teach them the doctrine that the perfection of wisdom is at peace by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of [F.295.a] the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience.

7.249 “Moreover, Subhūti, the spiritual mentors of bodhisattva great beings are those who teach them the doctrine that the perfection of generosity is empty by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the perfection of ethical discipline is empty by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the perfection of tolerance is empty by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the perfection of perseverance is empty by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the perfection of meditative concentration is empty by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; and are those who teach them the doctrine that the perfection of wisdom is empty by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any [F.295.b] of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience.

7.250 “Moreover, Subhūti, the spiritual mentors of bodhisattva great beings are those who teach them the doctrine that the perfection of generosity is signless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the perfection of ethical discipline is signless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the perfection of tolerance is signless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause

the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the perfection of perseverance is signless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the perfection of meditative concentration is signless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; and are those who teach them the doctrine that the perfection of wisdom is signless [F.296.a] by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience.

7.251 “Moreover, Subhūti, the spiritual mentors of bodhisattva great beings are those who teach them the doctrine that the perfection of generosity is wishless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the perfection of ethical discipline is wishless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the perfection of tolerance is wishless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the perfection of perseverance is wishless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the perfection of meditative concentration is wishless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; and are those who teach them the doctrine [F.296.b] that the perfection of wisdom is wishless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience.

7.252 “Moreover, Subhūti, the spiritual mentors of bodhisattva great beings are those who teach them the doctrine that the perfection of generosity is unconditioned by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the perfection of ethical discipline is unconditioned by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the perfection of tolerance is unconditioned by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the perfection of perseverance is unconditioned by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the perfection of meditative concentration is unconditioned by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other [F.297.a] than all-aspect omniscience; and are those who teach them the doctrine that the perfection of wisdom is unconditioned by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience.

7.253 “Moreover, Subhūti, the spiritual mentors of bodhisattva great beings are those who teach them the doctrine that the perfection of generosity is void by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the perfection of ethical discipline is void by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the perfection of tolerance is void by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the perfection of perseverance is void by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the perfection of meditative concentration is void by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas [F.297.b] or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; and are those who teach them the doctrine that the perfection of wisdom is void by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience.

7.254      “Moreover, Subhūti, the spiritual mentors of bodhisattva great beings are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of internal phenomena is impermanent by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of external phenomena is impermanent by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of external and internal phenomena is impermanent by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of emptiness is impermanent by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of great extent is impermanent by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, [F.298.a] or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of ultimate reality is impermanent by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of conditioned phenomena is impermanent by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect

omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena is impermanent by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of the unlimited is impermanent by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end is impermanent by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of nonexclusion is impermanent by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of inherent nature is impermanent by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; [F.298.b] are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of all phenomena is impermanent by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics is impermanent by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended is impermanent by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of nonentities is impermanent by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of essential nature is impermanent by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; and are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities is impermanent by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause [F.299.a] the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience.

7.255      “Moreover, Subhūti, the spiritual mentors of bodhisattva great beings are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of internal phenomena is suffering by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of external phenomena is suffering by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of external and internal phenomena is suffering by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of emptiness is suffering by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of great extent is suffering by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of ultimate reality is suffering by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause [F.299.b] the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of conditioned phenomena is suffering by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena is suffering by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other

than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of the unlimited is suffering by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end is suffering by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of nonexclusion is suffering by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of [F.300.a] the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of inherent nature is suffering by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of all phenomena is suffering by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics is suffering by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended is suffering by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of nonentities is suffering by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of essential nature is suffering by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; and are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities is suffering by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience. [F.300.b]

7.256 “Moreover, Subhūti, the spiritual mentors of bodhisattva great beings are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of internal phenomena is not a self by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of external phenomena is not a self by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of external and internal phenomena is not a self by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of emptiness is not a self by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of great extent is not a self by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of ultimate reality is not a self by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; [F.301.a] are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of conditioned phenomena is not a self by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena is not a self by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of the unlimited is not a self by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect

omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end is not a self by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of nonexclusion is not a self by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of inherent nature is not a self by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of all phenomena is not a self by way of not apprehending it, [F.301.b] and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics is not a self by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended is not a self by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of nonentities is not a self by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of essential nature is not a self by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; and are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities is not a self by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience.

7.257      “Moreover, Subhūti, the spiritual mentors of bodhisattva great beings are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of internal phenomena is at peace by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of [F.302.a] any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of external phenomena is at peace by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of external and internal phenomena is at peace by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of emptiness is at peace by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of great extent is at peace by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of ultimate reality is at peace by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of conditioned phenomena is at peace by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine [F.302.b] that the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena is at peace by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of the unlimited is at peace by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end is at peace by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of nonexclusion is at peace by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of inherent nature is at peace by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of all phenomena is at peace by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics is at peace by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication [F.303.a] of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended is at peace by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of nonentities is at peace by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of essential nature is at peace by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; and are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities is at peace by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience.

7.258      “Moreover, Subhūti, the spiritual mentors of bodhisattva great beings are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of internal phenomena is empty by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of external phenomena is empty by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue [F.303.b] to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of external and internal phenomena is empty by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of emptiness is empty by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of great extent is empty by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of ultimate reality is empty by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of conditioned phenomena is empty by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena is empty by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of the unlimited is empty by way of [F.304.a] not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end is empty by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of nonexclusion is empty by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of inherent nature is empty by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of all phenomena is empty by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics is empty by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended is empty by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas [F.304.b] or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of nonentities is empty by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of essential nature is empty by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; and are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities is empty by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience.

7.259      “Moreover, Subhūti, the spiritual mentors of bodhisattva great beings are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of internal phenomena is signless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of external phenomena is signless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of external and internal phenomena is signless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of emptiness [F.305.a] is signless by way of not

apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of great extent is signless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of ultimate reality is signless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of conditioned phenomena is signless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena is signless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of the unlimited is signless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end is signless by way of not apprehending it, [F.305.b] and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of nonexclusion is signless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of inherent nature is signless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of all phenomena is signless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics is signless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended is signless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of nonentities is signless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas [F.306.a] or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of essential nature is signless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; and are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities is signless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience.

7.260      “Moreover, Subhūti, the spiritual mentors of bodhisattva great beings are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of internal phenomena is wishless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of external phenomena is wishless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of external and internal phenomena is wishless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of emptiness is wishless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than [F.306.b] all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of great extent is wishless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of ultimate reality is wishless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of conditioned phenomena is wishless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena is wishless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of the unlimited is wishless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end is wishless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine [F.307.a] that the emptiness of nonexclusion is wishless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of inherent nature is wishless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of all phenomena is wishless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics is wishless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended is wishless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of nonentities is wishless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of essential nature is wishless [F.307.b] by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; and are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities is wishless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience.

7.261 “Moreover, Subhūti, the spiritual mentors of bodhisattva great beings are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of internal phenomena is unconditioned by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of external phenomena is unconditioned by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of external and internal phenomena is unconditioned by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of emptiness is unconditioned by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of great extent [F.308.a] is unconditioned by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of ultimate reality is unconditioned by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect

omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of conditioned phenomena is unconditioned by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena is unconditioned<sup>348</sup> by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of the unlimited is unconditioned by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end is unconditioned by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of nonexclusion [F.308.b] is unconditioned by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of inherent nature is unconditioned by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of all phenomena is unconditioned by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics is unconditioned by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended is unconditioned by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of nonentities is unconditioned by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them [F.309.a] the doctrine that the emptiness of essential nature is unconditioned by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; and are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities is unconditioned by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience.

7.262      “Moreover, Subhūti, the spiritual mentors of bodhisattva great beings are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of internal phenomena is void by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of external phenomena is void by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of external and internal phenomena is void by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of emptiness is void by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that [F.309.b] the emptiness of great extent is void by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of ultimate reality is void by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of conditioned phenomena is void by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the

emptiness of unconditioned phenomena is void by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of the unlimited is void by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end is void by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of nonexclusion is void by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication [F.310.a] of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of inherent nature is void by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of all phenomena is void by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics is void by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended is void by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of nonentities is void by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of essential nature is void by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect [F.310.b] omniscience; and are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities is void by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience.

7.263

“Moreover, Subhūti, the spiritual mentors of bodhisattva great beings are those who teach them the doctrine that the applications of mindfulness are impermanent by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the applications of mindfulness are suffering by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the applications of mindfulness are not a self by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the applications of mindfulness are at peace by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, [F.311.a] or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the applications of mindfulness are empty by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the applications of mindfulness are signless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the applications of mindfulness are wishless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the applications of mindfulness are unconditioned by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; and are those who teach them the doctrine that the applications of mindfulness are void by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience. They are those who teach them the doctrine, in order that the applications of mindfulness might be cultivated,<sup>349</sup> by way of not apprehending them, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience.

7.264 “Moreover, Subhūti, the spiritual mentors of bodhisattva great beings are those who teach them the doctrine that the correct exertions are impermanent by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them [F.311.b] the doctrine that the correct exertions are suffering by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the correct exertions are not a self by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the correct exertions are at peace by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the correct exertions are empty by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the correct exertions are signless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the correct exertions are wishless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the correct exertions [F.312.a] are unconditioned by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; and are those who teach them the doctrine that the correct exertions are void by way of not apprehending it, and who do not

cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience. They are those who teach them the doctrine, in order that the correct exertions might be cultivated, by way of not apprehending them, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience. [B22]

7.265 “Moreover, Subhūti, the spiritual mentors of bodhisattva great beings are those who teach them the doctrine that the supports for miraculous ability are impermanent by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the supports for miraculous ability are suffering by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the supports for miraculous ability are not a self by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, [F.312.b] or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the supports for miraculous ability are at peace by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the supports for miraculous ability are empty by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the supports for miraculous ability are signless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the supports for miraculous ability are wishless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the supports for miraculous ability are unconditioned by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; and are those who teach them the doctrine that the supports for miraculous ability are void by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect [F.313.a] omniscience. They are those who teach them the doctrine, in order that the supports for miraculous ability might be cultivated, by way of not apprehending them, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience.

7.266 “Moreover, Subhūti, the spiritual mentors of bodhisattva great beings are those who teach them the doctrine that the faculties are impermanent by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the faculties are suffering by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the faculties are not a self by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the faculties are at peace by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the faculties are empty by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the faculties are signless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of [F.313.b] any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the faculties are wishless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the faculties are unconditioned by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; and are those who teach them

the doctrine that the faculties are void by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience. They are those who teach them the doctrine, in order that the faculties might be cultivated, by way of not apprehending them, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience.

7.267      “Moreover, Subhūti, the spiritual mentors of bodhisattva great beings are those who teach them the doctrine that the powers are impermanent by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the powers are suffering by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the powers are not a self by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them [F.314.a] the doctrine that the powers are at peace by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the powers are empty by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the powers are signless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the powers are wishless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the powers are unconditioned by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; and are those who teach them the doctrine that the powers are void by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything [F.314.b] other than all-aspect omniscience. They are those who teach them the doctrine, in order that the powers might be cultivated, by way of not apprehending them, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience.

7.268      “Moreover, Subhūti, the spiritual mentors of bodhisattva great beings are those who teach them the doctrine that the branches of enlightenment are impermanent by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the branches of enlightenment are suffering by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the branches of enlightenment are not a self by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the branches of enlightenment are at peace by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the branches of enlightenment are empty by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the branches of enlightenment are signless [F.315.a] by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the branches of enlightenment are wishless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the branches of enlightenment are unconditioned by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; and are those who teach them the doctrine that the branches of enlightenment are void by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience. They are those who teach them the doctrine, in order that the branches of enlightenment might be cultivated, by way of not apprehending them, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience.

7.269 “Moreover, Subhūti, the spiritual mentors of bodhisattva great beings are those who teach them the doctrine that the noble eightfold path is impermanent by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the noble eightfold path is suffering [F.315.b] by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the noble eightfold path is not a self by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the noble eightfold path is at peace by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the noble eightfold path is empty by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the noble eightfold path is signless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the noble eightfold path is wishless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the noble eightfold path is unconditioned by way of not [F.316.a] apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the

śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; and are those who teach them the doctrine that the noble eightfold path is void by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience. They are those who teach them the doctrine, in order that the noble eightfold path might be cultivated, by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience.

7.270 “Moreover, Subhūti, the spiritual mentors of bodhisattva great beings are those who teach them the doctrine that the truths of the noble ones are impermanent by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the truths of the noble ones are suffering by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the truths of the noble ones are not a self by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the truths of the noble ones are at peace [F.316.b] by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the truths of the noble ones are empty by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the truths of the noble ones are signless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the truths of the noble ones are wishless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the truths of the noble ones are unconditioned by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; and are those who teach them the doctrine that the truths of the noble ones are void by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience. They are those who teach them the doctrine, in order that the truths of the noble ones might be cultivated, by way of not apprehending them, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, [F.317.a] or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience.

7.271 “Moreover, Subhūti, the spiritual mentors of bodhisattva great beings are those who teach them the doctrine that the meditative concentrations are impermanent by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the meditative concentrations are suffering by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the meditative concentrations are not a self by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the meditative concentrations are at peace by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the meditative concentrations are empty by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the meditative concentrations are signless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the meditative concentrations [F.317.b] are wishless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the meditative concentrations are unconditioned by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; and are those who teach them the doctrine that the meditative concentrations are void by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience. They are those who teach them the doctrine, in order that the meditative concentrations might be cultivated, by way of not apprehending them, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience.

7.272      “Moreover, Subhūti, the spiritual mentors of bodhisattva great beings are those who teach them the doctrine that the immeasurable attitudes are impermanent by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the immeasurable attitudes are suffering by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas [F.318.a] or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the immeasurable attitudes are not a self by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the immeasurable attitudes are at peace by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the immeasurable attitudes are empty by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the immeasurable attitudes are signless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the immeasurable attitudes are wishless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the immeasurable attitudes are unconditioned by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; and are those who teach them the doctrine that the immeasurable attitudes are void by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience. They are those who teach them the doctrine, in order that the immeasurable attitudes [F.318.b] might be cultivated, by way of not apprehending them, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience.

7.273      “Moreover, Subhūti, the spiritual mentors of bodhisattva great beings are those who teach them the doctrine that the formless absorptions are impermanent by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the formless absorptions are suffering by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the formless absorptions are not a self by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the formless absorptions are at peace by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the formless absorptions are empty by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the formless absorptions are signless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue [F.319.a] to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the formless absorptions are wishless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the

śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the formless absorptions are unconditioned by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; and are those who teach them the doctrine that the formless absorptions are void by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience. They are those who teach them the doctrine, in order that the formless absorptions might be cultivated, by way of not apprehending them, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience.

7.274      “Moreover, Subhūti, the spiritual mentors of bodhisattva great beings are those who teach them the doctrine that the liberations are impermanent by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the liberations are suffering by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything [F.319.b] other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the liberations are not a self by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the liberations are at peace by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the liberations are empty by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the liberations are signless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the liberations are wishless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the liberations are unconditioned by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; and are those who teach them the doctrine that the liberations are void by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas [F.320.a] or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience. They are those who teach them the doctrine, in order that the liberations might be cultivated, by way of not apprehending them, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience.

7.275      “Moreover, Subhūti, the spiritual mentors of bodhisattva great beings are those who teach them the doctrine that the nine serial steps of meditative absorption are impermanent by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the nine serial steps of meditative absorption are suffering by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the nine serial steps of meditative absorption are not a self by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the nine serial steps of meditative absorption are at peace by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the nine serial steps of meditative absorption are empty by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of [F.320.b] the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the nine serial steps of meditative absorption are signless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the nine serial steps of meditative absorption are wishless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the nine serial steps of meditative absorption are unconditioned by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; and are those who teach them the doctrine that the nine serial steps of meditative absorption are void by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience. They are those who teach them the doctrine, in order that the nine serial steps of meditative absorption might be cultivated, by way of not apprehending them, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience.

7.276 “Moreover, Subhūti, the spiritual mentors of bodhisattva great beings are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation are impermanent by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas [F.321.a] or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation are suffering by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation are not a self by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation are at peace by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation are empty by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation are signless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness, [F.321.b] signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation are wishless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation are unconditioned by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; and are those who teach them the doctrine that the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation are void by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience. They are those who teach them the doctrine, in order that the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation might be cultivated, by way of not apprehending them, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience.

7.277 “Moreover, Subhūti, the spiritual mentors of bodhisattva great beings are those who teach them the doctrine that the extrasensory powers are impermanent by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the extrasensory powers are suffering by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the extrasensory powers are not a self [F.322.a] by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the extrasensory powers are at peace by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the

śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the extrasensory powers are empty by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the extrasensory powers are signless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the extrasensory powers are wishless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the extrasensory powers are unconditioned by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; and are those who teach them the doctrine that the extrasensory powers are void by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience. [F.322.b] They are those who teach them the doctrine, in order that the extrasensory powers might be cultivated, by way of not apprehending them, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience.

7.278 “Moreover, Subhūti, the spiritual mentors of bodhisattva great beings are those who teach them the doctrine that the meditative stabilities are impermanent by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the meditative stabilities are suffering by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the meditative stabilities are not a self by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the meditative stabilities are at peace by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause

the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the meditative stabilities are empty by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of [F.323.a] the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the meditative stabilities are signless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the meditative stabilities are wishless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the meditative stabilities are unconditioned by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; and are those who teach them the doctrine that the meditative stabilities are void by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience. They are those who teach them the doctrine, in order that the meditative stabilities might be cultivated, by way of not apprehending them, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience.

7.279 “Moreover, Subhūti, the spiritual mentors of bodhisattva great beings are those who teach them the doctrine that the dhāraṇī gateways are impermanent by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the dhāraṇī gateways are suffering by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the dhāraṇī gateways are not a self by way of [F.323.b] not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the

dhāraṇī gateways are at peace by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the dhāraṇī gateways are empty by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the dhāraṇī gateways are signless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the dhāraṇī gateways are wishless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the dhāraṇī gateways are unconditioned by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; and are those who teach them the doctrine that the dhāraṇī gateways are void by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience. They are those who teach them the doctrine, in order that the dhāraṇī gateways might [F.324.a] be cultivated, by way of not apprehending them, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience.

7.280      “Moreover, Subhūti, the spiritual mentors of bodhisattva great beings are those who teach them the doctrine that the ten powers of the tathāgatas are impermanent by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the ten powers of the tathāgatas are suffering by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the ten powers of the tathāgatas are not a self by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect

omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the ten powers of the tathāgatas are at peace by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the ten powers of the tathāgatas are empty by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the ten powers [F.324.b] of the tathāgatas are signless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the ten powers of the tathāgatas are wishless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the ten powers of the tathāgatas are unconditioned by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; and are those who teach them the doctrine that the ten powers of the tathāgatas are void by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience. They are those who teach them the doctrine, in order that the ten powers of the tathāgatas might be cultivated, by way of not apprehending them, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience.

7.281      “Moreover, Subhūti, the spiritual mentors of bodhisattva great beings are those who teach them the doctrine that the four fearlessnesses are impermanent by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the fearlessnesses are suffering by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level [F.325.a] of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the fearlessnesses are not a self by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the

dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the fearlessnesses are at peace by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the fearlessnesses are empty by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the fearlessnesses are signless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the fearlessnesses are wishless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the fearlessnesses are unconditioned by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; and are those who teach them the doctrine that the fearlessnesses are void [F.325.b] by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience. They are those who teach them the doctrine, in order that the fearlessnesses might be cultivated, by way of not apprehending them, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience.

7.282      “Moreover, Subhūti, the spiritual mentors of bodhisattva great beings are those who teach them the doctrine that the four kinds of exact knowledge are impermanent by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the kinds of exact knowledge are suffering by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the kinds of exact

knowledge are not a self by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the kinds of exact knowledge are at peace by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the kinds of exact knowledge are empty by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the kinds of exact knowledge are signless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the kinds of exact knowledge are wishless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the kinds of exact knowledge are unconditioned by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; and are those who teach them the doctrine that the kinds of exact knowledge are void by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience. They are those who teach them the doctrine, in order that the kinds of exact knowledge might be cultivated, by way of not apprehending them, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience.

7.283      “Moreover, Subhūti, the spiritual mentors of bodhisattva great beings are those who teach them the doctrine that great compassion<sup>350</sup> is impermanent by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; [F.326.b] are those who teach them the doctrine that great compassion is suffering by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that great compassion is not a self by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that great compassion is at peace by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that great compassion is empty by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that great compassion is signless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that great compassion is wishless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that great compassion is unconditioned by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, [F.327.a] or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; and are those who teach them the doctrine that great compassion is void by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience. They are those who teach them the doctrine, in order that great compassion might be cultivated, by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience.

7.284

“Moreover, Subhūti, the spiritual mentors of bodhisattva great beings are those who teach them the doctrine that the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas are impermanent by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the distinct qualities of the buddhas are suffering by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the distinct qualities of the buddhas are not a self by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the distinct qualities of the buddhas are at peace by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the distinct qualities of the buddhas are empty by way of not apprehending it, [F.327.b] and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the distinct qualities of the buddhas are signless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the distinct qualities of the buddhas are wishless by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; are those who teach them the doctrine that the distinct qualities of the buddhas are unconditioned by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience; and are those who teach them the doctrine that the distinct qualities of the buddhas are void by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience. They are those who teach them the doctrine, in order that the distinct qualities of the buddhas might be cultivated, by way of not apprehending them, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience. They are those who teach them the doctrine, in order that all-aspect omniscience might be cultivated, by way of not apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas [F.328.a] or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience, and who teach them the doctrine, in order that enlightenment might be cultivated, by way of not

apprehending it, and who do not cause the dedication of any of the roots of virtue to the level of the śrāvakas or to the level of the pratyekabuddhas, or to anything other than all-aspect omniscience. [B23]

7.285 “One should know that these, Subhūti, are the spiritual mentors of bodhisattva great beings, the spiritual mentors who have taken hold of bodhisattva great beings so that they will not be afraid, fearful, or terrified on hearing this teaching.”

7.286 Subhūti said, “Blessed Lord! How is it that when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom, they become afraid, fearful, and terrified on hearing this teaching on the perfection of wisdom, and, unskilled, fall into the clutches of evil associates and are abandoned by spiritual mentors?”

7.287 “Subhūti,” replied the Blessed One, “when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom, without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience,<sup>351</sup> they cultivate and apprehend that perfection of wisdom, and give rise to conceit on account of that perfection of wisdom. Without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they cultivate and apprehend that perfection of meditative concentration, and give rise to conceit on account of that perfection of meditative concentration. Without having turned their attention toward all-aspect [F.328.b] omniscience, they cultivate and apprehend that perfection of perseverance, and give rise to conceit on account of that perfection of perseverance. Without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they cultivate and apprehend that perfection of tolerance, and give rise to conceit on account of that perfection of tolerance. Without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they cultivate and apprehend that perfection of ethical discipline, and give rise to conceit on account of that perfection of ethical discipline. Without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they cultivate and apprehend that perfection of generosity, and give rise to conceit on account of that perfection of generosity. One should know, Subhūti, that such bodhisattva great beings practicing the perfection of wisdom are unskilled.<sup>352</sup>

7.288 “Moreover, Subhūti, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘physical forms empty of internal phenomena’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of internal phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘physical forms empty of external phenomena’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of external phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of

wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'physical forms empty of external and internal phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of external and internal phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of [F.329.a] that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'physical forms empty of emptiness' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of emptiness and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'physical forms empty of great extent' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of great extent and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'physical forms empty of ultimate reality' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of ultimate reality and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'physical forms empty of conditioned phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of conditioned phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'physical forms empty of unconditioned phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of unconditioned phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'physical forms empty of the unlimited' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of [F.329.b] the unlimited and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'physical forms empty of that which has neither beginning nor end' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'physical forms empty of nonexclusion' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of nonexclusion and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'physical forms empty of an inherent nature' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of inherent nature and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'physical forms empty of all phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of all phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'physical forms empty of intrinsic defining characteristics' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'physical forms empty of that which [F.330.a] cannot be apprehended' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'physical forms empty of nonentities' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of nonentities and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'physical forms empty of essential nature' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of essential nature and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'physical forms empty of an essential nature of nonentities' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness.

7.289      "Moreover, Subhūti, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'feelings empty of internal phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of internal phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'feelings empty of external phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of external phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom, [F.330.b] without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'feelings empty of external and internal phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of external and internal phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'feelings empty of emptiness' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of emptiness and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'feelings empty of great extent' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of great extent and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'feelings empty of ultimate reality' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of ultimate reality and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'feelings empty of conditioned phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of conditioned phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'feelings empty of unconditioned phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of unconditioned phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice [F.331.a] the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'feelings empty of the unlimited' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of the unlimited and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'feelings empty of that which has neither beginning nor end' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'feelings empty of nonexclusion' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of nonexclusion and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘feelings empty of an inherent nature’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of inherent nature and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘feelings empty of all phenomena’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of all phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘feelings empty of intrinsic defining characteristics’ [F.331.b] and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘feelings empty of that which cannot be apprehended’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘feelings empty of nonentities’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of nonentities and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘feelings empty of essential nature’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of essential nature and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘feelings empty of an essential nature of nonentities’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness.

7.290 “Moreover, Subhūti, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘perceptions empty of internal phenomena’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of internal phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the [F.332.a] perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘perceptions empty of external phenomena’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of external phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-

aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'perceptions empty of external and internal phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of external and internal phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'perceptions empty of emptiness' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of emptiness and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'perceptions empty of great extent' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of great extent and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'perceptions empty of ultimate reality' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of ultimate reality and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice [F.332.b] the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'perceptions empty of conditioned phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of conditioned phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'perceptions empty of unconditioned phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of unconditioned phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'perceptions empty of the unlimited' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of the unlimited and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'perceptions empty of that which has neither beginning nor end' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'perceptions empty of nonexclusion' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of nonexclusion and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'perceptions empty of an inherent nature' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of inherent nature and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘perceptions empty of all phenomena’ and, by way of apprehending that, [F.333.a] they apprehend an emptiness of all phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘perceptions empty of intrinsic defining characteristics’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘perceptions empty of that which cannot be apprehended’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘perceptions empty of nonentities’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of nonentities and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘perceptions empty of essential nature’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of essential nature and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘perceptions empty of an essential nature of nonentities’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness.

7.291 “Moreover, Subhūti, when bodhisattva great beings practice [F.333.b] the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘formative predispositions empty of internal phenomena’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of internal phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘formative predispositions empty of external phenomena’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of external phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘formative predispositions empty of external and internal phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of external and internal phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'formative predispositions empty of emptiness' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of emptiness and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'formative predispositions empty of great extent' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of great extent and give rise to conceit [F.334.a] on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'formative predispositions empty of ultimate reality' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of ultimate reality and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'formative predispositions empty of conditioned phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of conditioned phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'formative predispositions empty of unconditioned phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of unconditioned phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'formative predispositions empty of the unlimited' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of the unlimited and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'formative predispositions empty of that which has neither beginning nor end' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'formative predispositions empty of nonexclusion' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of nonexclusion and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘formative predispositions empty of an inherent nature’ [F.334.b] and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of inherent nature and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘formative predispositions empty of all phenomena’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of all phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘formative predispositions empty of intrinsic defining characteristics’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘formative predispositions empty of that which cannot be apprehended’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘formative predispositions empty of nonentities’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of nonentities and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘formative predispositions empty of essential nature’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of essential nature and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom [F.335.a] without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘formative predispositions empty of an essential nature of nonentities’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness.

7.292 “Moreover, Subhūti, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘consciousness empty of internal phenomena’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of internal phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘consciousness empty of external phenomena’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of external phenomena and give rise to

conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'consciousness empty of external and internal phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of external and internal phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'consciousness empty of emptiness' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of emptiness and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'consciousness empty of great extent' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of great extent and give rise to conceit [F.335.b] on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'consciousness empty of ultimate reality' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of ultimate reality and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'consciousness empty of conditioned phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of conditioned phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'consciousness empty of unconditioned phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of unconditioned phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'consciousness empty of the unlimited' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of the unlimited and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'consciousness empty of that which has neither beginning nor end' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'consciousness empty of nonexclusion' [F.336.a] and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of nonexclusion and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'consciousness empty of an inherent nature' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of inherent nature and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'consciousness empty of all phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of all phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'consciousness empty of intrinsic defining characteristics' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'consciousness empty of that which cannot be apprehended' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'consciousness empty of nonentities' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of nonentities and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice [F.336.b] the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'consciousness empty of essential nature' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of essential nature and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'consciousness empty of an essential nature of nonentities' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness.

7.293      "Moreover, Subhūti, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the eyes empty of internal phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of internal phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the eyes empty of external phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of external phenomena and give rise to

conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the eyes empty of external and internal phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of external and internal phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the eyes empty of emptiness' and, by way of apprehending that, [F.337.a] they apprehend an emptiness of emptiness and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the eyes empty of great extent' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of great extent and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the eyes empty of ultimate reality' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of ultimate reality and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the eyes empty of conditioned phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of conditioned phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the eyes empty of unconditioned phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of unconditioned phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the eyes empty of the unlimited' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of the unlimited and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, [F.337.b] they pay attention to 'the eyes empty of that which has neither beginning nor end' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the eyes empty of nonexclusion' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of nonexclusion and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘the eyes empty of an inherent nature’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of inherent nature and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘the eyes empty of all phenomena’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of all phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘the eyes empty of intrinsic defining characteristics’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘the eyes empty of that which cannot be apprehended’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom, [F.338.a] without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘the eyes empty of nonentities’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of nonentities and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘the eyes empty of essential nature’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of essential nature and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘the eyes empty of an essential nature of nonentities’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness.

7.294 “Moreover, Subhūti, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘the ears empty of internal phenomena’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of internal phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘the ears empty of external phenomena’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of external phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of

wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the ears empty of external and internal phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of external and internal phenomena and give rise to conceit [F.338.b] on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the ears empty of emptiness' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of emptiness and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the ears empty of great extent' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of great extent and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the ears empty of ultimate reality' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of ultimate reality and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the ears empty of conditioned phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of conditioned phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the ears empty of unconditioned phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of unconditioned phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the ears empty of the unlimited' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of the unlimited and give rise [F.339.a] to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the ears empty of that which has neither beginning nor end' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the ears empty of nonexclusion' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of nonexclusion and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘the ears empty of an inherent nature’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of inherent nature and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘the ears empty of all phenomena’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of all phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘the ears empty of intrinsic defining characteristics’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘the ears empty of that which cannot be apprehended’ [F.339.b] and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘the ears empty of nonentities’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of nonentities and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘the ears empty of essential nature’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of essential nature and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘the ears empty of an essential nature of nonentities’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness.

7.295 “Moreover, Subhūti, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘the nose empty of internal phenomena’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of internal phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘the nose empty of external phenomena’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of external phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention [F.340.a] toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the nose empty of external and internal phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of external and internal phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the nose empty of emptiness' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of emptiness and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the nose empty of great extent' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of great extent and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the nose empty of ultimate reality' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of ultimate reality and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward [F.340.b] all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the nose empty of conditioned phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of conditioned phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the nose empty of unconditioned phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of unconditioned phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the nose empty of the unlimited' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of the unlimited and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the nose empty of that which has neither beginning nor end' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the nose empty of nonexclusion' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of nonexclusion and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the nose empty of an inherent nature' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of inherent nature and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘the nose empty of all phenomena’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of all phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘the nose empty of intrinsic defining characteristics’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention [F.341.a] toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘the nose empty of that which cannot be apprehended’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘the nose empty of nonentities’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of nonentities and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘the nose empty of essential nature’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of essential nature and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘the nose empty of an essential nature of nonentities’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness.

7.296 “Moreover, Subhūti, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘the tongue empty of internal phenomena’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of internal phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘the tongue empty of external phenomena’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of external phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without [F.341.b] having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘the tongue empty of external and internal phenomena’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of external and internal phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the tongue empty of emptiness' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of emptiness and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the tongue empty of great extent' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of great extent and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the tongue empty of ultimate reality' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of ultimate reality and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the tongue empty of conditioned phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of conditioned phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the tongue empty of unconditioned phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of unconditioned phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward [F.342.a] all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the tongue empty of the unlimited' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of the unlimited and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the tongue empty of that which has neither beginning nor end' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the tongue empty of nonexclusion' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of nonexclusion and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the tongue empty of an inherent nature' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of inherent nature and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘the tongue empty of all phenomena’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of all phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘the tongue empty of intrinsic defining characteristics’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice [F.342.b] the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘the tongue empty of that which cannot be apprehended’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘the tongue empty of nonentities’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of nonentities and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘the tongue empty of essential nature’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of essential nature and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘the tongue empty of an essential nature of nonentities’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness.

7.297 “Moreover, Subhūti, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘the body empty of internal phenomena’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of internal phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘the body empty of external phenomena’ [F.343.a] and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of external phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘the body empty of external and internal phenomena’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of external and internal phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the body empty of emptiness' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of emptiness and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the body empty of great extent' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of great extent and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the body empty of ultimate reality' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of ultimate reality and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the body empty of conditioned phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of conditioned phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the body empty of unconditioned phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, [F.343.b] they apprehend an emptiness of unconditioned phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the body empty of the unlimited' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of the unlimited and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the body empty of that which has neither beginning nor end' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the body empty of nonexclusion' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of nonexclusion and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the body empty of an inherent nature' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of inherent nature and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to

‘the body empty of all phenomena’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of all phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect [F.344.a] omniscience, they pay attention to ‘the body empty of intrinsic defining characteristics’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘the body empty of that which cannot be apprehended’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘the body empty of nonentities’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of nonentities and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘the body empty of essential nature’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of essential nature and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘the body empty of an essential nature of nonentities’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. [B24]

7.298 “Moreover, Subhūti, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to [F.344.b] ‘the mental faculty empty of internal phenomena’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of internal phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘the mental faculty empty of external phenomena’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of external phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘the mental faculty empty of external and internal phenomena’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of external and internal phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of

wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the mental faculty empty of emptiness' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of emptiness and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the mental faculty empty of great extent' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of great extent and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the mental faculty empty of ultimate reality' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of ultimate reality and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the mental faculty [F.345.a] empty of conditioned phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of conditioned phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the mental faculty empty of unconditioned phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of unconditioned phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the mental faculty empty of the unlimited' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of the unlimited and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the mental faculty empty of that which has neither beginning nor end' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the mental faculty empty of nonexclusion' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of nonexclusion and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the mental faculty empty of an inherent nature' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of inherent nature and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without [F.345.b] having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘the mental faculty empty of all phenomena’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of all phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘the mental faculty empty of intrinsic defining characteristics’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘the mental faculty empty of that which cannot be apprehended’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘the mental faculty empty of nonentities’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of nonentities and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘the mental faculty empty of essential nature’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of essential nature and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘the mental faculty empty of an essential nature of nonentities’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities and give rise to conceit [F.346.a] on account of that emptiness.

7.299 “Moreover, Subhūti, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘sights empty of internal phenomena’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of internal phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘sights empty of external phenomena’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of external phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘sights empty of external and internal phenomena’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of external and internal phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'sights empty of emptiness' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of emptiness and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'sights empty of great extent' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of great extent and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'sights empty of ultimate reality' and, by way of apprehending that, [F.346.b] they apprehend an emptiness of ultimate reality and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'sights empty of conditioned phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of conditioned phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'sights empty of unconditioned phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of unconditioned phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'sights empty of the unlimited' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of the unlimited and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'sights empty of that which has neither beginning nor end' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'sights empty of nonexclusion' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of nonexclusion and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'sights empty of an inherent nature' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of inherent nature and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to

'sights empty of all phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of all phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward [F.347.a] all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'sights empty of intrinsic defining characteristics' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'sights empty of that which cannot be apprehended' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'sights empty of nonentities' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of nonentities and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'sights empty of essential nature' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of essential nature and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the [F.347.b] perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'sights empty of an essential nature of nonentities' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness.

7.300 "Moreover, Subhūti, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'sounds empty of internal phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of internal phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'sounds empty of external phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of external phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'sounds empty of external and internal phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of external and internal phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom

without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'sounds empty of emptiness' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of emptiness and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'sounds empty of great extent' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of great extent and give rise to conceit [F.348.a] on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'sounds empty of ultimate reality' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of ultimate reality and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'sounds empty of conditioned phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of conditioned phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'sounds empty of unconditioned phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of unconditioned phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'sounds empty of the unlimited' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of the unlimited and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'sounds empty of that which has neither beginning nor end' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'sounds empty of [F.348.b] nonexclusion' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of nonexclusion and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'sounds empty of an inherent nature' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of inherent nature and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'sounds empty of all phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of all phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘sounds empty of intrinsic defining characteristics’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘sounds empty of that which cannot be apprehended’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘sounds empty of nonentities’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of nonentities and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘sounds empty of essential nature’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of essential nature and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned [F.349.a] their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘sounds empty of an essential nature of nonentities’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness.

7.301 “Moreover, Subhūti, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘odors empty of internal phenomena’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of internal phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘odors empty of external phenomena’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of external phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘odors empty of external and internal phenomena’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of external and internal phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'odors empty of emptiness' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of emptiness and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom, [F.349.b] without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'odors empty of great extent' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of great extent and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'odors empty of ultimate reality' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of ultimate reality and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'odors empty of conditioned phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of conditioned phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'odors empty of unconditioned phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of unconditioned phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'odors empty of the unlimited' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of the unlimited and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'odors empty of that which has neither beginning nor end' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When [F.350.a] they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'odors empty of nonexclusion' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of nonexclusion and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'odors empty of an inherent nature' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of inherent nature and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'odors empty of all phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of all phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'odors empty of intrinsic defining characteristics' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'odors empty of that which cannot be apprehended' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'odors empty of nonentities' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of nonentities and [F.350.b] give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'odors empty of essential nature' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of essential nature and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'odors empty of an essential nature of nonentities' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness.

7.302 "Moreover, Subhūti, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'tastes empty of internal phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of internal phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'tastes empty of external phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of external phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'tastes empty of external and internal phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of external and internal phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'tastes empty of emptiness' and, by way of apprehending

that, they apprehend an emptiness of [F.351.a] emptiness and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'tastes empty of great extent' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of great extent and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'tastes empty of ultimate reality' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of ultimate reality and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'tastes empty of conditioned phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of conditioned phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'tastes empty of unconditioned phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of unconditioned phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'tastes empty of the unlimited' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of the unlimited and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'tastes empty of that which has neither [F.351.b] beginning nor end' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'tastes empty of nonexclusion' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of nonexclusion and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'tastes empty of an inherent nature' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of inherent nature and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'tastes empty of all phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of all phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘tastes empty of intrinsic defining characteristics’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘tastes empty of that which cannot be apprehended’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, [F.352.a] they pay attention to ‘tastes empty of nonentities’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of nonentities and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘tastes empty of essential nature’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of essential nature and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘tastes empty of an essential nature of nonentities’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness.

7.303 “Moreover, Subhūti, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘tangibles empty of internal phenomena’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of internal phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘tangibles empty of external phenomena’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of external phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘tangibles empty of external and internal phenomena’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of external and internal phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom, [F.352.b] without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘tangibles empty of emptiness’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of emptiness and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'tangibles empty of great extent' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of great extent and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'tangibles empty of ultimate reality' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of ultimate reality and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'tangibles empty of conditioned phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of conditioned phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'tangibles empty of unconditioned phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of unconditioned phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'tangibles empty of the unlimited' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of the unlimited and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When [F.353.a] they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'tangibles empty of that which has neither beginning nor end' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'tangibles empty of nonexclusion' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of nonexclusion and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'tangibles empty of an inherent nature' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of inherent nature and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'tangibles empty of all phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of all phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘tangibles empty of intrinsic defining characteristics’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘tangibles empty of that which cannot be apprehended’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness [F.353.b] of that which cannot be apprehended and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘tangibles empty of nonentities’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of nonentities and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘tangibles empty of essential nature’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of essential nature and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘tangibles empty of an essential nature of nonentities’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness.

7.304 “Moreover, Subhūti, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘mental phenomena empty of internal phenomena’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of internal phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘mental phenomena empty of external phenomena’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of external phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘mental phenomena empty of external and internal phenomena’ [F.354.a] and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of external and internal phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘mental phenomena empty of emptiness’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of emptiness and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'mental phenomena empty of great extent' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of great extent and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'mental phenomena empty of ultimate reality' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of ultimate reality and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'mental phenomena empty of conditioned phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of conditioned phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'mental phenomena empty of unconditioned phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of unconditioned phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'mental phenomena [F.354.b] empty of the unlimited' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of the unlimited and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'mental phenomena empty of that which has neither beginning nor end' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'mental phenomena empty of nonexclusion' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of nonexclusion and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'mental phenomena empty of an inherent nature' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of inherent nature and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'mental phenomena empty of all phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of all phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘mental phenomena empty of intrinsic defining characteristics’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention [F.355.a] toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘mental phenomena empty of that which cannot be apprehended’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘mental phenomena empty of nonentities’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of nonentities and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘mental phenomena empty of essential nature’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of essential nature and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘mental phenomena empty of an essential nature of nonentities’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness.

7.305 “Moreover, Subhūti, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘visual consciousness empty of internal phenomena’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of internal phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘visual consciousness empty of external phenomena’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of external [F.355.b] phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘visual consciousness empty of external and internal phenomena’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of external and internal phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘visual consciousness empty of emptiness’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness

of emptiness and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'visual consciousness empty of great extent' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of great extent and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'visual consciousness empty of ultimate reality' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of ultimate reality and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'visual consciousness empty of conditioned phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of conditioned phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without [F.356.a] having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'visual consciousness empty of unconditioned phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of unconditioned phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'visual consciousness empty of the unlimited' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of the unlimited and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'visual consciousness empty of that which has neither beginning nor end' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'visual consciousness empty of nonexclusion' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of nonexclusion and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'visual consciousness empty of an inherent nature' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of inherent nature and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'visual consciousness empty of all phenomena' and, [F.356.b] by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of all phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘visual consciousness empty of intrinsic defining characteristics’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘visual consciousness empty of that which cannot be apprehended’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘visual consciousness empty of nonentities’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of nonentities and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘visual consciousness empty of essential nature’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of essential nature and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘visual consciousness empty of an essential nature of nonentities’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness.

7.306 “Moreover, Subhūti, when bodhisattva [F.357.a] great beings practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘auditory consciousness empty of internal phenomena’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of internal phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘auditory consciousness empty of external phenomena’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of external phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘auditory consciousness empty of external and internal phenomena’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of external and internal phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'auditory consciousness empty of emptiness' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of emptiness and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'auditory consciousness empty of great extent' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of great extent and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'auditory consciousness empty of ultimate reality' [F.357.b] and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of ultimate reality and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'auditory consciousness empty of conditioned phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of conditioned phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'auditory consciousness empty of unconditioned phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of unconditioned phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'auditory consciousness empty of the unlimited' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of the unlimited and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'auditory consciousness empty of that which has neither beginning nor end' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'auditory consciousness empty of nonexclusion' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of nonexclusion and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice [F.358.a] the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'auditory consciousness empty of an inherent nature' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of inherent nature and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'auditory consciousness empty of all phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of all phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'auditory consciousness empty of intrinsic defining characteristics' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'auditory consciousness empty of that which cannot be apprehended' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'auditory consciousness empty of nonentities' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of nonentities and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'auditory consciousness empty of [F.358.b] essential nature' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of essential nature and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'auditory consciousness empty of an essential nature of nonentities' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. [B25]

7.307 "Moreover, Subhūti, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'olfactory consciousness empty of internal phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of internal phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'olfactory consciousness empty of external phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of external phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'olfactory consciousness empty of external and internal phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of external and internal phenomena and give rise

to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'olfactory consciousness empty of emptiness' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend [F.359.a] an emptiness of emptiness and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'olfactory consciousness empty of great extent' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of great extent and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'olfactory consciousness empty of ultimate reality' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of ultimate reality and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'olfactory consciousness empty of conditioned phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of conditioned phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'olfactory consciousness empty of unconditioned phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of unconditioned phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'olfactory consciousness empty of the unlimited' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of the unlimited and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect [F.359.b] omniscience, they pay attention to 'olfactory consciousness empty of that which has neither beginning nor end' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'olfactory consciousness empty of nonexclusion' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of nonexclusion and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'olfactory consciousness empty of an inherent nature' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of inherent nature and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘olfactory consciousness empty of all phenomena’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of all phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘olfactory consciousness empty of intrinsic defining characteristics’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘olfactory consciousness empty of that which cannot be apprehended’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of that which cannot [F.360.a] be apprehended and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘olfactory consciousness empty of nonentities’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of nonentities and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘olfactory consciousness empty of essential nature’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of essential nature and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘olfactory consciousness empty of an essential nature of nonentities’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness.

7.308 “Moreover, Subhūti, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘gustatory consciousness empty of internal phenomena’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of internal phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘gustatory consciousness empty of external phenomena’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of external phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom, [F.360.b] without having turned their attention toward

all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'gustatory consciousness empty of external and internal phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of external and internal phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'gustatory consciousness empty of emptiness' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of emptiness and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'gustatory consciousness empty of great extent' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of great extent and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'gustatory consciousness empty of ultimate reality' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of ultimate reality and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'gustatory consciousness empty of conditioned phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of conditioned phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'gustatory consciousness empty of unconditioned phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of unconditioned phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice [F.361.a] the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'gustatory consciousness empty of the unlimited' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of the unlimited and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'gustatory consciousness empty of that which has neither beginning nor end' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'gustatory consciousness empty of nonexclusion' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of nonexclusion and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘gustatory consciousness empty of an inherent nature’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of inherent nature and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘gustatory consciousness empty of all phenomena’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of all phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘gustatory consciousness empty of intrinsic defining characteristics’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘gustatory consciousness empty of that which cannot be apprehended’ and, by way of [F.361.b] apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘gustatory consciousness empty of nonentities’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of nonentities and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘gustatory consciousness empty of essential nature’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of essential nature and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘gustatory consciousness empty of an essential nature of nonentities’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness.

7.309 “Moreover, Subhūti, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘tactile consciousness empty of internal phenomena’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of internal phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the [F.362.a] perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘tactile consciousness empty of external phenomena’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of external phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'tactile consciousness empty of external and internal phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of external and internal phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'tactile consciousness empty of emptiness' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of emptiness and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'tactile consciousness empty of great extent' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of great extent and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'tactile consciousness empty of ultimate reality' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of ultimate reality and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'tactile consciousness empty of conditioned phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of conditioned phenomena and [F.362.b] give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'tactile consciousness empty of unconditioned phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of unconditioned phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'tactile consciousness empty of the unlimited' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of the unlimited and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'tactile consciousness empty of that which has neither beginning nor end' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'tactile consciousness empty of nonexclusion' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of nonexclusion and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘tactile consciousness empty of an inherent nature’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of inherent nature and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect [F.363.a] omniscience, they pay attention to ‘tactile consciousness empty of all phenomena’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of all phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘tactile consciousness empty of intrinsic defining characteristics’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘tactile consciousness empty of that which cannot be apprehended’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘tactile consciousness empty of nonentities’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of nonentities and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘tactile consciousness empty of essential nature’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of essential nature and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘tactile consciousness empty of an essential nature of nonentities’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of [F.363.b] an essential nature of nonentities and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness.

7.310 “Moreover, Subhūti, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘mental consciousness empty of internal phenomena’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of internal phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to

'mental consciousness empty of external phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of external phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'mental consciousness empty of external and internal phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of external and internal phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'mental consciousness empty of emptiness' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of emptiness and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'mental consciousness empty of great extent' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of great extent and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'mental consciousness empty of ultimate reality' and, [F.364.a] by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of ultimate reality and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'mental consciousness empty of conditioned phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of conditioned phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'mental consciousness empty of unconditioned phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of unconditioned phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'mental consciousness empty of the unlimited' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of the unlimited and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'mental consciousness empty of that which has neither beginning nor end' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘mental consciousness empty of nonexclusion’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of nonexclusion and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. [F.364.b] When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘mental consciousness empty of an inherent nature’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of inherent nature and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘mental consciousness empty of all phenomena’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of all phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘mental consciousness empty of intrinsic defining characteristics’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘mental consciousness empty of that which cannot be apprehended’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘mental consciousness empty of nonentities’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of nonentities and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘mental consciousness empty of essential nature’ and, by way of [F.365.a] apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of essential nature and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘mental consciousness empty of an essential nature of nonentities’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness.

7.311 “Moreover, Subhūti, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘visually compounded sensory contact empty of internal phenomena’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of internal phenomena and give rise to conceit

on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'visually compounded sensory contact empty of external phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of external phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'visually compounded sensory contact empty of external and internal phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of external and internal phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'visually compounded sensory contact empty of emptiness' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of emptiness and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When [F.365.b] they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'visually compounded sensory contact empty of great extent' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of great extent and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'visually compounded sensory contact empty of ultimate reality' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of ultimate reality and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'visually compounded sensory contact empty of conditioned phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of conditioned phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'visually compounded sensory contact empty of unconditioned phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of unconditioned phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'visually compounded sensory contact empty of the unlimited' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of the unlimited and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'visually compounded sensory contact empty of that which has neither beginning nor end' and, by way of [F.366.a] apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'visually compounded sensory contact empty of nonexclusion' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of nonexclusion and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'visually compounded sensory contact empty of an inherent nature' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of inherent nature and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'visually compounded sensory contact empty of all phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of all phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'visually compounded sensory contact empty of intrinsic defining characteristics' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'visually compounded sensory contact empty of that which cannot be apprehended' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice [F.366.b] the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'visually compounded sensory contact empty of nonentities' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of nonentities and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'visually compounded sensory contact empty of essential nature' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of essential nature and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'visually compounded sensory contact empty of an essential nature of nonentities' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness.

7.312 "Moreover, Subhūti, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'aurally compounded sensory contact empty of internal phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of internal phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'aurally compounded sensory contact empty of external phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of external phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect [F.367.a] omniscience, they pay attention to 'aurally compounded sensory contact empty of external and internal phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of external and internal phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'aurally compounded sensory contact empty of emptiness' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of emptiness and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'aurally compounded sensory contact empty of great extent' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of great extent and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'aurally compounded sensory contact empty of ultimate reality' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of ultimate reality and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'aurally compounded sensory contact empty of conditioned phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of conditioned phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'aurally compounded sensory contact empty of unconditioned phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of unconditioned

phenomena and give rise to conceit [F.367.b] on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'aurally compounded sensory contact empty of the unlimited' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of the unlimited and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'aurally compounded sensory contact empty of that which has neither beginning nor end' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'aurally compounded sensory contact empty of nonexclusion' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of nonexclusion and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'aurally compounded sensory contact empty of an inherent nature' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of inherent nature and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'aurally compounded sensory contact empty of all phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of all phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, [F.368.a] they pay attention to 'aurally compounded sensory contact empty of intrinsic defining characteristics' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'aurally compounded sensory contact empty of that which cannot be apprehended' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'aurally compounded sensory contact empty of nonentities' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of nonentities and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘aurally compounded sensory contact empty of essential nature’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of essential nature and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘aurally compounded sensory contact empty of an essential nature of nonentities’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness.

7.313 “Moreover, Subhūti, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to [F.368.b] ‘nasally compounded sensory contact empty of internal phenomena’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of internal phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘nasally compounded sensory contact empty of external phenomena’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of external phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘nasally compounded sensory contact empty of external and internal phenomena’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of external and internal phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘nasally compounded sensory contact empty of emptiness’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of emptiness and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘nasally compounded sensory contact empty of great extent’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of great extent and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘nasally compounded sensory contact empty of ultimate reality’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of ultimate reality and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without [F.369.a] having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘nasally compounded sensory contact empty of conditioned phenomena’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of conditioned phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'nasally compounded sensory contact empty of unconditioned phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of unconditioned phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'nasally compounded sensory contact empty of the unlimited' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of the unlimited and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'nasally compounded sensory contact empty of that which has neither beginning nor end' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'nasally compounded sensory contact empty of nonexclusion' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of nonexclusion and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'nasally compounded sensory contact [F.369.b] empty of an inherent nature' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of inherent nature and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'nasally compounded sensory contact empty of all phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of all phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'nasally compounded sensory contact empty of intrinsic defining characteristics' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'nasally compounded sensory contact empty of that which cannot be apprehended' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘nasally compounded sensory contact empty of nonentities’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of nonentities and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘nasally compounded sensory contact empty of essential nature’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of essential nature and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice [F.370.a] the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘nasally compounded sensory contact empty of an essential nature of nonentities’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness.

7.314 “Moreover, Subhūti, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘lingually compounded sensory contact empty of internal phenomena’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of internal phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘lingually compounded sensory contact empty of external phenomena’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of external phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘lingually compounded sensory contact empty of external and internal phenomena’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of external and internal phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘lingually compounded sensory contact empty of emptiness’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of emptiness and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward [F.370.b] all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘lingually compounded sensory contact empty of great extent’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of great extent and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-

aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'lingually compounded sensory contact empty of ultimate reality' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of ultimate reality and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'lingually compounded sensory contact empty of conditioned phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of conditioned phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'lingually compounded sensory contact empty of unconditioned phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of unconditioned phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'lingually compounded sensory contact empty of the unlimited' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of the unlimited and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'lingually compounded sensory contact empty of that which has neither beginning nor end' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of [F.371.a] that which has neither beginning nor end and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'lingually compounded sensory contact empty of nonexclusion' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of nonexclusion and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'lingually compounded sensory contact empty of an inherent nature' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of inherent nature and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'lingually compounded sensory contact empty of all phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of all phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'lingually compounded sensory contact empty of intrinsic defining characteristics' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘lingually compounded sensory contact empty of that which cannot be apprehended’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended and give rise to conceit [F.371.b] on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘lingually compounded sensory contact empty of nonentities’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of nonentities and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘lingually compounded sensory contact empty of essential nature’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of essential nature and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘lingually compounded sensory contact empty of an essential nature of nonentities’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. [B26]

7.315 “Moreover, Subhūti, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘corporeally compounded sensory contact empty of internal phenomena’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of internal phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘corporeally compounded sensory contact empty of external phenomena’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of external phenomena and [F.372.a] give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘corporeally compounded sensory contact empty of external and internal phenomena’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of external and internal phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘corporeally compounded sensory contact empty of emptiness’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of emptiness and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'corporeally compounded sensory contact empty of great extent' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of great extent and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'corporeally compounded sensory contact empty of ultimate reality' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of ultimate reality and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'corporeally compounded sensory contact empty of conditioned phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of conditioned phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, [F.372.b] they pay attention to 'corporeally compounded sensory contact empty of unconditioned phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of unconditioned phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'corporeally compounded sensory contact empty of the unlimited' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of the unlimited and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'corporeally compounded sensory contact empty of that which has neither beginning nor end' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'corporeally compounded sensory contact empty of nonexclusion' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of nonexclusion and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'corporeally compounded sensory contact empty of an inherent nature' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of inherent nature and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'corporeally compounded sensory contact empty of all phenomena’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness [F.373.a] of all phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘corporeally compounded sensory contact empty of intrinsic defining characteristics’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘corporeally compounded sensory contact empty of that which cannot be apprehended’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘corporeally compounded sensory contact empty of nonentities’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of nonentities and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘corporeally compounded sensory contact empty of essential nature’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of essential nature and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘corporeally compounded sensory contact empty of an essential nature of nonentities’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities and give rise to conceit [F.373.b] on account of that emptiness.

7.316 “Moreover, Subhūti, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘mentally compounded sensory contact empty of internal phenomena’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of internal phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘mentally compounded sensory contact empty of external phenomena’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of external phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘mentally compounded sensory contact empty of external and internal phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of external and internal phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'mentally compounded sensory contact empty of emptiness' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of emptiness and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'mentally compounded sensory contact empty of great extent' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of great extent and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'mentally compounded sensory contact [F.374.a] empty of ultimate reality' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of ultimate reality and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'mentally compounded sensory contact empty of conditioned phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of conditioned phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'mentally compounded sensory contact empty of unconditioned phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of unconditioned phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'mentally compounded sensory contact empty of the unlimited' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of the unlimited and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'mentally compounded sensory contact empty of that which has neither beginning nor end' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'mentally compounded sensory contact empty of nonexclusion' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of nonexclusion and [F.374.b] give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they

practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘mentally compounded sensory contact empty of an inherent nature’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of inherent nature and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘mentally compounded sensory contact empty of all phenomena’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of all phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘mentally compounded sensory contact empty of intrinsic defining characteristics’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘mentally compounded sensory contact empty of that which cannot be apprehended’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘mentally compounded sensory contact empty of nonentities’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of nonentities and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without [F.375.a] having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘mentally compounded sensory contact empty of essential nature’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of essential nature and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘mentally compounded sensory contact empty of an essential nature of nonentities’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness.

7.317 “Moreover, Subhūti, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact empty of internal phenomena’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of internal phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-

aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact empty of external phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of external phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact empty of external and internal phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of external and internal phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom, [F.375.b] without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact empty of emptiness' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of emptiness and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact empty of great extent' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of great extent and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact empty of ultimate reality' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of ultimate reality and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact empty of conditioned phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of conditioned phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact empty of unconditioned phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of unconditioned phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward [F.376.a] all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact empty of the unlimited' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of the unlimited and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to

'feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact empty of that which has neither beginning nor end' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact empty of nonexclusion' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of nonexclusion and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact empty of an inherent nature' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of inherent nature and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact empty of all phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of all phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward [F.376.b] all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact empty of intrinsic defining characteristics' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact empty of that which cannot be apprehended' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact empty of nonentities' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of nonentities and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact empty of essential nature' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of essential nature and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-

aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact empty of an essential nature of nonentities’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness.

7.318 “Moreover, Subhūti, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom, [F.377.a] without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact empty of internal phenomena’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of internal phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact empty of external phenomena’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of external phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact empty of external and internal phenomena’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of external and internal phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact empty of emptiness’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of emptiness and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact empty of great extent’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of great extent and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, [F.377.b] they pay attention to ‘feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact empty of ultimate reality’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of ultimate reality and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact empty of conditioned phenomena’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of conditioned phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they

practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact empty of unconditioned phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of unconditioned phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact empty of the unlimited' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of the unlimited and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact empty of that which has neither beginning nor end' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, [F.378.a] they pay attention to 'feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact empty of nonexclusion' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of nonexclusion and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact empty of an inherent nature' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of inherent nature and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact empty of all phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of all phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact empty of intrinsic defining characteristics' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact empty of that which cannot be apprehended' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended and give rise to conceit

on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to [F.378.b] ‘feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact empty of nonentities’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of nonentities and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact empty of essential nature’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of essential nature and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact empty of an essential nature of nonentities’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness.

7.319 “Moreover, Subhūti, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact empty of internal phenomena’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of internal phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact empty of external phenomena’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of external phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, [F.379.a] they pay attention to ‘feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact empty of external and internal phenomena’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of external and internal phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact empty of emptiness’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of emptiness and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact empty of great extent’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of great extent and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact empty of ultimate reality' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of ultimate reality and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact empty of conditioned phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of conditioned phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact empty of [F.379.b] unconditioned phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of unconditioned phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact empty of the unlimited' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of the unlimited and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact empty of that which has neither beginning nor end' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact empty of nonexclusion' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of nonexclusion and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact empty of an inherent nature' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of inherent nature and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'feelings conditioned by [F.380.a] nasally compounded sensory contact empty of all phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of all phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact empty of intrinsic defining characteristics’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact empty of that which cannot be apprehended’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact empty of nonentities’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of nonentities and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact empty of essential nature’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of essential nature and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact [F.380.b] empty of an essential nature of nonentities’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness.

7.320 “Moreover, Subhūti, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact empty of internal phenomena’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of internal phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact empty of external phenomena’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of external phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘feelings conditioned by lingually

compounded sensory contact empty of external and internal phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of external and internal phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact empty of emptiness' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of emptiness and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, [F.381.a] they pay attention to 'feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact empty of great extent' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of great extent and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact empty of ultimate reality' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of ultimate reality and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact empty of conditioned phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of conditioned phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact empty of unconditioned phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of unconditioned phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact empty of the unlimited' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of the unlimited and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact empty of [F.381.b] that which has neither beginning nor end' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact empty of nonexclusion' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of nonexclusion and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact empty of an inherent nature' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of inherent nature and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact empty of all phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of all phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact empty of intrinsic defining characteristics' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact empty of that which cannot be apprehended' and, by way of [F.382.a] apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact empty of nonentities' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of nonentities and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact empty of essential nature' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of essential nature and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact empty of an essential nature of nonentities' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness.

“Moreover, Subhūti, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact empty of internal phenomena’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of internal phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to [F.382.b] ‘feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact empty of external phenomena’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of external phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact empty of external and internal phenomena’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of external and internal phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact empty of emptiness’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of emptiness and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact empty of great extent’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of great extent and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact empty of ultimate reality’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of ultimate reality and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact empty of conditioned phenomena’ [F.383.a] and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of conditioned phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact empty of unconditioned phenomena’ and, by way of apprehending that, they

apprehend an emptiness of unconditioned phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact empty of the unlimited’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of the unlimited and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact empty of that which has neither beginning nor end’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact empty of nonexclusion’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of nonexclusion and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact empty of an inherent nature’ and, by way of [F.383.b] apprehending an entity,<sup>353</sup> they apprehend an emptiness of inherent nature and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact empty of all phenomena’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of all phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact empty of intrinsic defining characteristics’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact empty of that which cannot be apprehended’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to

'feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact empty of nonentities' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of nonentities and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact empty of essential nature' and, [F.384.a] by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of essential nature and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact empty of an essential nature of nonentities' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness.

7.322 "Moreover, Subhūti, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact empty of internal phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of internal phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact empty of external phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of external phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact empty of external and internal phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of external and internal phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to [F.384.b] 'feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact empty of emptiness' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of emptiness and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact empty of great extent' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of great extent and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact empty of ultimate reality' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of ultimate reality and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact empty of conditioned phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of conditioned phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact empty of unconditioned phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of unconditioned phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'feelings [F.385.a] conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact empty of the unlimited' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of the unlimited and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact empty of that which has neither beginning nor end' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact empty of nonexclusion' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of nonexclusion and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact empty of an inherent nature' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of inherent nature and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact empty of all phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of all phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom, [F.385.b] without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact empty of intrinsic defining characteristics’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact empty of that which cannot be apprehended’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact empty of nonentities’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of nonentities and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact empty of essential nature’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of essential nature and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact empty of an essential nature of nonentities’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. [F.386.a] [B27]

7.323 “Moreover, Subhūti, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘the earth element empty of internal phenomena’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of internal phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘the earth element empty of external phenomena’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of external phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘the earth element empty of external and internal phenomena’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of external and internal phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of

wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the earth element empty of emptiness' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of emptiness and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the earth element empty of great extent' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of great extent and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention [F.386.b] toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the earth element empty of ultimate reality' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of ultimate reality and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the earth element empty of conditioned phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of conditioned phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the earth element empty of unconditioned phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of unconditioned phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the earth element empty of the unlimited' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of the unlimited and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the earth element empty of that which has neither beginning nor end' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the earth element empty of nonexclusion' and, by way of apprehending that, [F.387.a] they apprehend an emptiness of nonexclusion and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the earth element empty of an inherent nature' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of inherent nature and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘the earth element empty of all phenomena’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of all phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘the earth element empty of intrinsic defining characteristics’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘the earth element empty of that which cannot be apprehended’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘the earth element empty of nonentities’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of nonentities and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When [F.387.b] they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘the earth element empty of essential nature’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of essential nature and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘the earth element empty of an essential nature of nonentities’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness.

7.324 “Moreover, Subhūti, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘the water element empty of internal phenomena’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of internal phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘the water element empty of external phenomena’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of external phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘the water element empty of external and internal phenomena’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of external and internal phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention [F.388.a] toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the water element empty of emptiness' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of emptiness and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the water element empty of great extent' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of great extent and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the water element empty of ultimate reality' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of ultimate reality and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the water element empty of conditioned phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of conditioned phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the water element empty of unconditioned phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of unconditioned phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the water element empty of the unlimited' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of the unlimited and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice [F.388.b] the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the water element empty of that which has neither beginning nor end' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the water element empty of nonexclusion' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of nonexclusion and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the water element empty of an inherent nature' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of inherent nature and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘the water element empty of all phenomena’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of all phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘the water element empty of intrinsic defining characteristics’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘the water element empty of that which cannot be apprehended’ and, [F.389.a] by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘the water element empty of nonentities’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of nonentities and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘the water element empty of essential nature’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of essential nature and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘the water element empty of an essential nature of nonentities’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness.

7.325 “Moreover, Subhūti, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘the fire element empty of internal phenomena’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of internal phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘the fire element empty of external phenomena’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of external phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of [F.389.b] an emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘the fire element empty of external and internal phenomena’ and, by way of apprehending that, they

apprehend an emptiness of external and internal phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the fire element empty of emptiness' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of emptiness and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the fire element empty of great extent' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of great extent and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the fire element empty of ultimate reality' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of ultimate reality and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the fire element empty of conditioned phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of conditioned phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the fire element empty of unconditioned phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, [F.390.a] they apprehend an emptiness of unconditioned phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the fire element empty of the unlimited' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of the unlimited and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the fire element empty of that which has neither beginning nor end' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the fire element empty of nonexclusion' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of nonexclusion and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the fire element empty of an inherent nature' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of inherent nature and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘the fire element empty of all phenomena’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of all phenomena and give rise to [F.390.b] conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘the fire element empty of intrinsic defining characteristics’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘the fire element empty of that which cannot be apprehended’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘the fire element empty of nonentities’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of nonentities and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘the fire element empty of essential nature’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of essential nature and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘the fire element empty of an essential nature of nonentities’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness.

7.326 “Moreover, Subhūti, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom [F.391.a] without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘the wind element empty of internal phenomena’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of internal phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘the wind element empty of external phenomena’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of external phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘the wind element empty of external and internal phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of external and internal phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the wind element empty of emptiness' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of emptiness and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the wind element empty of great extent' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of great extent and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the wind element empty of ultimate reality' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of ultimate reality and give rise to conceit [F.391.b] on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the wind element empty of conditioned phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of conditioned phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the wind element empty of unconditioned phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of unconditioned phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the wind element empty of the unlimited' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of the unlimited and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the wind element empty of that which has neither beginning nor end' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the wind element empty of nonexclusion' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of nonexclusion and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention [F.392.a] toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the wind element empty of an inherent nature' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of inherent nature and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the wind element empty of all phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of all phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the wind element empty of intrinsic defining characteristics' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the wind element empty of that which cannot be apprehended' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the wind element empty of nonentities' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of nonentities and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the wind element empty of essential nature' and, by way of apprehending that, [F.392.b] they apprehend an emptiness of essential nature and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the wind element empty of an essential nature of nonentities' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness.

7.327      "Moreover, Subhūti, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the space element empty of internal phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of internal phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the space element empty of external phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of external phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-

aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the space element empty of external and internal phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of external and internal phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the space element empty of emptiness' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of emptiness [F.393.a] and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the space element empty of great extent' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of great extent and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the space element empty of ultimate reality' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of ultimate reality and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the space element empty of conditioned phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of conditioned phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the space element empty of unconditioned phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of unconditioned phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the space element empty of the unlimited' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of the unlimited and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom, [F.393.b] without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the space element empty of that which has neither beginning nor end' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the space element empty of nonexclusion' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of nonexclusion and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘the space element empty of an inherent nature’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of inherent nature and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘the space element empty of all phenomena’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of all phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘the space element empty of intrinsic defining characteristics’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, [F.394.a] they pay attention to ‘the space element empty of that which cannot be apprehended’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘the space element empty of nonentities’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of nonentities and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘the space element empty of essential nature’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of essential nature and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘the space element empty of an essential nature of nonentities’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness.

7.328 “Moreover, Subhūti, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘the consciousness element empty of internal phenomena’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of internal phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to [F.394.b] ‘the consciousness element empty of external phenomena’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of external phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they

practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the consciousness element empty of external and internal phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of external and internal phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the consciousness element empty of emptiness' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of emptiness and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the consciousness element empty of great extent' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of great extent and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the consciousness element empty of ultimate reality' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of ultimate reality and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the consciousness element empty of conditioned phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend [F.395.a] an emptiness of conditioned phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the consciousness element empty of unconditioned phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of unconditioned phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the consciousness element empty of the unlimited' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of the unlimited and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the consciousness element empty of that which has neither beginning nor end' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the consciousness element empty of nonexclusion' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of nonexclusion and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘the consciousness element empty of an inherent nature’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend [F.395.b] an emptiness of inherent nature and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘the consciousness element empty of all phenomena’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of all phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘the consciousness element empty of intrinsic defining characteristics’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘the consciousness element empty of that which cannot be apprehended’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘the consciousness element empty of nonentities’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of nonentities and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘the consciousness element empty of essential nature’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of essential nature and [F.396.a] give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘the consciousness element empty of an essential nature of nonentities’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness.

7.329 “Moreover, Subhūti, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘ignorance empty of internal phenomena’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of internal phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to

'ignorance empty of external phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of external phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'ignorance empty of external and internal phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of external and internal phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'ignorance empty of emptiness' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of emptiness and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice [F.396.b] the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'ignorance empty of great extent' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of great extent and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'ignorance empty of ultimate reality' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of ultimate reality and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'ignorance empty of conditioned phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of conditioned phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'ignorance empty of unconditioned phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of unconditioned phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'ignorance empty of the unlimited' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of the unlimited and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'ignorance empty of that which [F.397.a] has neither beginning nor end' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'ignorance empty of nonexclusion' and,

by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of nonexclusion and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘ignorance empty of an inherent nature’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of inherent nature and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘ignorance empty of all phenomena’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of all phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘ignorance empty of intrinsic defining characteristics’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘ignorance empty of that which cannot be apprehended’ and, by way of [F.397.b] apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘ignorance empty of nonentities’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of nonentities and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘ignorance empty of essential nature’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of essential nature and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘ignorance empty of an essential nature of nonentities’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness.

7.330 “Moreover, Subhūti, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘formative predispositions empty of internal phenomena’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of internal phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘formative predispositions empty of external phenomena’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of external phenomena and [F.398.a] give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'formative predispositions empty of external and internal phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of external and internal phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'formative predispositions empty of emptiness' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of emptiness and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'formative predispositions empty of great extent' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of great extent and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'formative predispositions empty of ultimate reality' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of ultimate reality and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'formative predispositions empty of conditioned phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of conditioned phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'formative predispositions empty of unconditioned phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of [F.398.b] unconditioned phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'formative predispositions empty of the unlimited' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of the unlimited and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'formative predispositions empty of that which has neither beginning nor end' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘formative predispositions empty of nonexclusion’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of nonexclusion and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘formative predispositions empty of an inherent nature’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of inherent nature and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘formative predispositions empty of all phenomena’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of all phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘formative predispositions empty of intrinsic defining characteristics’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend [F.399.a] an emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘formative predispositions empty of that which cannot be apprehended’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘formative predispositions empty of nonentities’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of nonentities and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘formative predispositions empty of essential nature’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of essential nature and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘formative predispositions empty of an essential nature of nonentities’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness.

7.331 “Moreover, Subhūti, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘consciousness empty of internal phenomena’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of internal phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that

emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without [F.399.b] having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'consciousness empty of external phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of external phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'consciousness empty of external and internal phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of external and internal phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'consciousness empty of emptiness' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of emptiness and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'consciousness empty of great extent' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of great extent and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'consciousness empty of ultimate reality' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of ultimate reality and give rise to conceit [F.400.a] on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'consciousness empty of conditioned phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of conditioned phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'consciousness empty of unconditioned phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of unconditioned phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'consciousness empty of the unlimited' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of the unlimited and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'consciousness empty of that which has neither beginning nor end' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they

practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘consciousness empty of nonexclusion’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of nonexclusion and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘consciousness empty of an inherent nature’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of inherent nature and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘consciousness empty of all phenomena’ and, by way of [F.400.b] apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of all phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘consciousness empty of intrinsic defining characteristics’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘consciousness empty of that which cannot be apprehended’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘consciousness empty of nonentities’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of nonentities and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘consciousness empty of essential nature’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of essential nature and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘consciousness empty of an essential nature of nonentities’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness.

7.332 “Moreover, Subhūti, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, [F.401.a] they pay attention to ‘name and form empty of internal phenomena’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of internal phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'name and form empty of external phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of external phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'name and form empty of external and internal phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of external and internal phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'name and form empty of emptiness' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of emptiness and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'name and form empty of great extent' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of great extent and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'name and form empty of ultimate reality' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of ultimate reality and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'name and form empty of conditioned phenomena' [F.401.b] and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of conditioned phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'name and form empty of unconditioned phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of unconditioned phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'name and form empty of the unlimited' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of the unlimited and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'name and form empty of that which has neither beginning nor end' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they

practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘name and form empty of nonexclusion’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of nonexclusion and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘name and form empty of an inherent nature’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of inherent nature and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay [F.402.a] attention to ‘name and form empty of all phenomena’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of all phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘name and form empty of intrinsic defining characteristics’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘name and form empty of that which cannot be apprehended’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘name and form empty of nonentities’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of nonentities and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘name and form empty of essential nature’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of essential nature and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘name and form empty of an essential nature of nonentities’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. [V16] [F.1.b] [B1]

7.333 “Moreover, Subhūti, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘the six sense fields empty of internal phenomena’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an

emptiness of internal phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the six sense fields empty of external phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of external phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the six sense fields empty of external and internal phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of external and internal phenomena and [F.2.a] give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the six sense fields empty of emptiness' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of emptiness and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the six sense fields empty of great extent' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of great extent and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the six sense fields empty of ultimate reality' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of ultimate reality and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the six sense fields empty of conditioned phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of conditioned phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the six sense fields empty of unconditioned phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of [F.2.b] unconditioned phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the six sense fields empty of the unlimited' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of the unlimited and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the six sense fields empty of that which has neither beginning nor end' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘the six sense fields empty of nonexclusion’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of nonexclusion and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘the six sense fields empty of an inherent nature’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of inherent nature and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘the six sense fields empty of all phenomena’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of all phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘the six sense fields empty of intrinsic defining characteristics’ and, by way of apprehending that, [F3.a] they apprehend an emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘the six sense fields empty of that which cannot be apprehended’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘the six sense fields empty of nonentities’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of nonentities and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘the six sense fields empty of essential nature’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of essential nature and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘the six sense fields empty of an essential nature of nonentities’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness.

7.334 “Moreover, Subhūti, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘sensory contact empty of internal

phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of internal phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to [F.3.b] 'sensory contact empty of external phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of external phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'sensory contact empty of external and internal phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of external and internal phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'sensory contact empty of emptiness' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of emptiness and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'sensory contact empty of great extent' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of great extent and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'sensory contact empty of ultimate reality' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of ultimate reality and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'sensory contact empty of conditioned phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of conditioned phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'sensory contact empty of unconditioned phenomena' and, by way of apprehending [F.4.a] that, they apprehend an emptiness of unconditioned phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'sensory contact empty of the unlimited' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of the unlimited and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'sensory contact empty of that which has neither beginning nor end' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'sensory contact empty of nonexclusion' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of nonexclusion and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'sensory contact empty of an inherent nature' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of inherent nature and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'sensory contact empty of all phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of all phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'sensory contact empty of intrinsic defining characteristics' and, by way of [F.4.b] apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'sensory contact empty of that which cannot be apprehended' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'sensory contact empty of nonentities' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of nonentities and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'sensory contact empty of essential nature' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of essential nature and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'sensory contact empty of an essential nature of nonentities' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness.

7.335

“Moreover, Subhūti, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'sensation empty of internal

phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of internal phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'sensation empty of external phenomena' [F.5.a] and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of external phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'sensation empty of external and internal phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of external and internal phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'sensation empty of emptiness' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of emptiness and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'sensation empty of great extent' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of great extent and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'sensation empty of ultimate reality' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of ultimate reality and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'sensation empty of conditioned phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of conditioned phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'sensation empty of unconditioned phenomena' and, by way of [F.5.b] apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of unconditioned phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'sensation empty of the unlimited' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of the unlimited and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'sensation empty of that which has neither beginning nor end' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘sensation empty of nonexclusion’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of nonexclusion and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘sensation empty of an inherent nature’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of inherent nature and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘sensation empty of all phenomena’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of all phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect [F.6.a] omniscience, they pay attention to ‘sensation empty of intrinsic defining characteristics’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘sensation empty of that which cannot be apprehended’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘sensation empty of nonentities’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of nonentities and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘sensation empty of essential nature’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of essential nature and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘sensation empty of an essential nature of nonentities’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness.

7.336 “Moreover, Subhūti, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘craving empty of internal phenomena’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of internal phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that

emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned [F.6.b] their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'craving empty of external phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of external phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'craving empty of external and internal phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of external and internal phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'craving empty of emptiness' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of emptiness and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'craving empty of great extent' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of great extent and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'craving empty of ultimate reality' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of ultimate reality and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'craving empty of conditioned phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of conditioned phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'craving [F.7.a] empty of unconditioned phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of unconditioned phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'craving empty of the unlimited' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of the unlimited and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'craving empty of that which has neither beginning nor end' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘craving empty of nonexclusion’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of nonexclusion and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘craving empty of an inherent nature’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of inherent nature and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘craving empty of all phenomena’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of all phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘craving empty of intrinsic defining characteristics’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics and [F.7.b] give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘craving empty of that which cannot be apprehended’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘craving empty of nonentities’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of nonentities and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘craving empty of essential nature’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of essential nature and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘craving empty of an essential nature of nonentities’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness.

7.337 “Moreover, Subhūti, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘grasping empty of internal phenomena’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of internal phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to

'grasping empty of external phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of external phenomena and give rise [F.8.a] to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'grasping empty of external and internal phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of external and internal phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'grasping empty of emptiness' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of emptiness and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'grasping empty of great extent' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of great extent and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'grasping empty of ultimate reality' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of ultimate reality and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'grasping empty of conditioned phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of conditioned phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'grasping empty of unconditioned phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of unconditioned phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom [F.8.b] without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'grasping empty of the unlimited' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of the unlimited and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'grasping empty of that which has neither beginning nor end' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'grasping empty of nonexclusion' and, by way of apprehending that, they

apprehend an emptiness of nonexclusion and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘grasping empty of an inherent nature’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of inherent nature and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘grasping empty of all phenomena’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of all phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘grasping empty of intrinsic defining characteristics’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention [F.9.a] to ‘grasping empty of that which cannot be apprehended’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘grasping empty of nonentities’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of nonentities and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘grasping empty of essential nature’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of essential nature and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘grasping empty of an essential nature of nonentities’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness.

7.338 “Moreover, Subhūti, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘the rebirth process empty of internal phenomena’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of internal phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘the rebirth process empty of external phenomena’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of external phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the rebirth process empty of external and internal phenomena' and, by way of [F.9.b] apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of external and internal phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the rebirth process empty of emptiness' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of emptiness and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the rebirth process empty of great extent' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of great extent and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the rebirth process empty of ultimate reality' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of ultimate reality and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the rebirth process empty of conditioned phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of conditioned phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the rebirth process empty of unconditioned phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of unconditioned phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the rebirth process empty of the unlimited' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of the unlimited and [F.10.a] give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the rebirth process empty of that which has neither beginning nor end' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'the rebirth process empty of nonexclusion' and, by way of apprehending that, they

apprehend an emptiness of nonexclusion and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘the rebirth process empty of an inherent nature’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of inherent nature and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘the rebirth process empty of all phenomena’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of all phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘the rebirth process empty of intrinsic defining characteristics’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘the rebirth process empty of that which cannot be apprehended’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of that which [F.10.b] cannot be apprehended and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘the rebirth process empty of nonentities’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of nonentities and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘the rebirth process empty of essential nature’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of essential nature and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘the rebirth process empty of an essential nature of nonentities’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness.

7.339 “Moreover, Subhūti, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘birth empty of internal phenomena’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of internal phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to

'birth empty of external phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of external phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'birth empty of external and internal phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of external and internal phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'birth empty of emptiness' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of emptiness and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. [F.11.a] When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'birth empty of great extent' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of great extent and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'birth empty of ultimate reality' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of ultimate reality and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'birth empty of conditioned phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of conditioned phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'birth empty of unconditioned phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of unconditioned phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'birth empty of the unlimited' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of the unlimited and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without [F.11.b] having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'birth empty of that which has neither beginning nor end' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'birth empty of nonexclusion' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of nonexclusion

and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'birth empty of an inherent nature' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of inherent nature and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'birth empty of all phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of all phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'birth empty of intrinsic defining characteristics' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'birth empty of that which cannot be apprehended' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward [F.12.a] all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'birth empty of nonentities' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of nonentities and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'birth empty of essential nature' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of essential nature and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'birth empty of an essential nature of nonentities' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness.

7.340      "Moreover, Subhūti, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'aging and death empty of internal phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of internal phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'aging and death empty of external phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of external phenomena

and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'aging and death empty of external and internal phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of external and internal phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom [F.12.b] without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'aging and death empty of emptiness' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of emptiness and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'aging and death empty of great extent' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of great extent and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'aging and death empty of ultimate reality' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of ultimate reality and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'aging and death empty of conditioned phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of conditioned phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'aging and death empty of unconditioned phenomena' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of unconditioned phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'aging and death empty of the unlimited' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of the unlimited and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'aging and death empty of that which has neither beginning [F.13.a] nor end' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to 'aging and death empty of nonexclusion' and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of nonexclusion and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘aging and death empty of an inherent nature’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of inherent nature and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘aging and death empty of all phenomena’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of all phenomena and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘aging and death empty of intrinsic defining characteristics’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘aging and death empty of that which cannot be apprehended’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘aging and death empty of [F.13.b] nonentities’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of nonentities and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘aging and death empty of essential nature’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of essential nature and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they pay attention to ‘aging and death empty of an essential nature of nonentities’ and, by way of apprehending that, they apprehend an emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities and give rise to conceit on account of that emptiness.

7.341 “Moreover, Subhūti, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they cultivate the applications of mindfulness and, by way of apprehending something, they apprehend those applications of mindfulness and give rise to conceit on account of those applications of mindfulness. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they cultivate the correct exertions and, by way of apprehending something, they apprehend

those correct exertions and give rise to conceit on account of those correct exertions. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they cultivate the supports for miraculous ability and, by way of apprehending something, they apprehend those supports for miraculous ability and give rise to conceit on account of those supports for miraculous ability. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, [F.14.a] they cultivate the faculties and, by way of apprehending something, they apprehend those faculties and give rise to conceit on account of those faculties. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they cultivate the powers and, by way of apprehending something, they apprehend those powers and give rise to conceit on account of those powers. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they cultivate the branches of enlightenment and, by way of apprehending something, they apprehend those branches of enlightenment and give rise to conceit on account of those branches of enlightenment. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they cultivate the noble eightfold path and, by way of apprehending something, they apprehend that noble eightfold path and give rise to conceit on account of that noble eightfold path. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they cultivate the truths of the noble ones and, by way of apprehending something, they apprehend those truths of the noble ones and give rise to conceit on account of those truths of the noble ones. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they cultivate the meditative concentrations and, by way of apprehending something, they apprehend those meditative concentrations and give rise to conceit on account of those meditative concentrations. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they cultivate [F.14.b] the immeasurable attitudes and, by way of apprehending something, they apprehend those immeasurable attitudes and give rise to conceit on account of those immeasurable attitudes. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they cultivate the formless absorptions and, by way of apprehending something, they apprehend those formless absorptions and give rise to conceit on account of those formless absorptions. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they cultivate the liberations and, by way of apprehending something, they apprehend those liberations and give rise to conceit on account of those liberations. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they cultivate the serial steps of meditative absorption and, by way of apprehending something, they apprehend those serial steps of meditative absorption and give rise to conceit on account of those serial steps of meditative absorption. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they cultivate the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation and, by way of apprehending something, they apprehend those emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation and give rise to conceit on account of those emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they cultivate the extrasensory powers and, by way of apprehending something, they apprehend those extrasensory powers and give rise to conceit on account of those extrasensory powers. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they cultivate the meditative stabilities and, by way of apprehending something, they apprehend those meditative stabilities and give rise to conceit [F.15.a] on account of those meditative stabilities. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they cultivate the dhāraṇī gateways and, by way of apprehending something, they apprehend those dhāraṇī gateways and give rise to conceit on account of those dhāraṇī gateways. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they cultivate the powers of the tathāgatas and, by way of apprehending something, they apprehend those powers of the tathāgatas and give rise to conceit on account of those powers of the tathāgatas. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they cultivate the fearlessnesses and, by way of apprehending something, they apprehend those fearlessnesses and give rise to conceit on account of those fearlessnesses. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they cultivate the kinds of exact knowledge and, by way of apprehending something, they apprehend those kinds of exact knowledge and give rise to conceit on account of those kinds of exact knowledge. When they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they cultivate great compassion and, by way of apprehending something, they apprehend that great compassion and give rise to conceit on account of that great compassion. When [F.15.b] they practice the perfection of wisdom without having turned their attention toward all-aspect omniscience, they cultivate the distinct qualities of the buddhas and, by way of apprehending something, they apprehend those distinct qualities of the buddhas and give rise to conceit on account of those distinct qualities of the buddhas. [B2]

7.342 “Subhūti, when bodhisattva great beings with a lack of such skillful means practice the perfection of wisdom, they become afraid, fearful, and terrified on hearing this teaching on the perfection of wisdom.”

7.343 “Blessed Lord, how is it that bodhisattva great beings are taken hold of by evil associates and become afraid, fearful, and terrified on hearing this teaching on the perfection of wisdom? How do they fall into the clutches of evil associates?”

7.344 “Subhūti,” replied the Blessed One, “here the evil associates of bodhisattva great beings are those who dissuade them and turn<sup>354</sup> them back from practicing the perfection of wisdom. They dissuade them and turn them back from practicing the perfection of meditative concentration. They dissuade them and turn them back from practicing the perfection of perseverance. They dissuade them and turn them back from practicing the perfection of tolerance. They dissuade them and turn them back from practicing the perfection of ethical discipline. And they dissuade them and turn them back from practicing the perfection of generosity, saying, ‘This has not been said by the Tathāgata. This is not the Dharma, this is not the Vinaya, so you should not train in [F.16.a] this. These sūtras are forgeries.<sup>355</sup> You should not listen to them, should not take them up, should not retain them, should not recite them, should not comprehend them, should not be properly attentive to them, and you should not teach them to others.’ Subhūti, you should know such persons to be the evil associates of bodhisattva great beings.

7.345 “Moreover, Subhūti, the evil associates of bodhisattva great beings do not reveal the activities of māras and do not explain the defects of māras,<sup>356</sup> that ‘malign māras disguised as buddhas approach bodhisattva great beings, turning them back and dissuading them from the six perfections, saying, “Child of a good family, what will you achieve by cultivating this perfection of wisdom? What will you achieve by cultivating the perfection of meditative concentration? What will you achieve by cultivating the perfection of perseverance? What will you achieve by cultivating the perfection of tolerance? What will you achieve by cultivating the perfection of ethical discipline? What will you achieve by cultivating the perfection of generosity?” ’ These, Subhūti, you should know to be the evil associates of bodhisattva great beings.

- 7.346 “Moreover, Subhūti, you should know that those who do not mention and reveal these sorts of aspects of the activities of māras—that ‘malign māras disguised as buddhas approach bodhisattva great beings and teach, comment on, analyze, elucidate, and completely disclose the discourses, the sayings in prose and verse, the prophetic declarations, the verses, the statements made for a purpose, the introductions, the accounts, the tales of past lives, the most extensive teachings, the marvelous events, the narratives, and [F.16.b] the established instructions connected with śrāvakas’—are the evil associates of bodhisattva great beings.
- 7.347 “Moreover, Subhūti, you should know those who do not mention and reveal these sorts of activities of māras—that malign māras disguised as buddhas approach bodhisattva great beings saying, ‘Child of a good family, you do not have the slightest [setting of] the mind on enlightenment, you are also not irreversible, and you are incapable of fully awakening to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment’—are the evil associates of bodhisattva great beings.
- 7.348 “Moreover, Subhūti, malign māras disguised as buddhas approach bodhisattva great beings, saying, ‘Child of a good family, physical forms are empty of “I” and “mine,” feelings are empty of “I” and “mine,” perceptions are empty of “I” and “mine,” formative predispositions are empty of “I” and “mine,” and consciousness is empty of “I” and “mine.”<sup>357</sup>
- 7.349 “ ‘The eyes are empty of “I” and “mine,” the ears are empty of “I” and “mine,” the nose is empty of “I” and “mine,” the tongue is empty of “I” and “mine,” the body is empty of “I” and “mine,” and the mental faculty is empty of “I” and “mine.” Sights are empty of “I” and “mine,” sounds are empty of “I” and “mine,” odors are empty of “I” and “mine,” tastes are empty of “I” and “mine,” tangibles are empty of “I” and “mine,” and mental phenomena are empty of “I” and “mine.” Visual consciousness is empty of “I” and “mine.” Auditory consciousness is empty of “I” and “mine.” Olfactory consciousness is empty of “I” and “mine.” Gustatory consciousness [F.17.a] is empty of “I” and “mine.” Tactile consciousness is empty of “I” and “mine.” Mental consciousness is empty of “I” and “mine.”
- 7.350 “ ‘Visually compounded sensory contact is empty of “I” and “mine.” Aurally compounded sensory contact is empty of “I” and “mine.” Nasally compounded sensory contact is empty of “I” and “mine.” Lingually compounded sensory contact is empty of “I” and “mine.” Corporeally compounded sensory contact is empty of “I” and “mine.” Mentally compounded sensory contact is empty of “I” and “mine.” Feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact are empty of “I” and “mine.” Feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact are empty of “I” and “mine.” Feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact are empty of "I" and "mine." Feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact are empty of "I" and "mine." Feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact are empty of "I" and "mine." Feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact are empty of "I" and "mine."

7.351 "The earth element is empty of "I" and "mine." The water element is empty of "I" and "mine." The fire element is empty of "I" and "mine." The wind element is empty of "I" and "mine." The space element is empty of "I" and "mine." The consciousness element is empty of "I" and "mine."

7.352 "Ignorance is empty of "I" and "mine." Formative predispositions are empty of "I" and "mine." Consciousness is empty of "I" and "mine." Name and form are empty of "I" and "mine." The six sense fields are empty of "I" and "mine." Sensory contact is empty of "I" and "mine." Sensation is empty of "I" and "mine." Craving is empty of "I" and "mine." Grasping is empty of "I" and "mine." The rebirth process is empty of [F.17.b] "I" and "mine." Birth is empty of "I" and "mine." Aging and death are empty of "I" and "mine."

7.353 "The perfection of generosity is empty of "I" and "mine." The perfection of ethical discipline is empty of "I" and "mine." The perfection of tolerance is empty of "I" and "mine." The perfection of perseverance is empty of "I" and "mine." The perfection of meditative concentration is empty of "I" and "mine." The perfection of wisdom is empty of "I" and "mine."

7.354 "The emptiness of internal phenomena is empty of "I" and "mine." The emptiness of external phenomena is empty of "I" and "mine." The emptiness of external and internal phenomena is empty of "I" and "mine." The emptiness of emptiness is empty of "I" and "mine." The emptiness of great extent is empty of "I" and "mine." The emptiness of ultimate reality is empty of "I" and "mine." The emptiness of conditioned phenomena is empty of "I" and "mine." The emptiness of unconditioned phenomena is empty of "I" and "mine." The emptiness of the unlimited is empty of "I" and "mine." The emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end is empty of "I" and "mine." The emptiness of nonexclusion is empty of "I" and "mine." The emptiness of inherent nature is empty of "I" and "mine." The emptiness of all phenomena is empty of "I" and "mine." The emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics is empty of "I" and "mine." The emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended is empty of "I" and "mine." The emptiness of nonentities is empty of "I" and "mine." The emptiness of essential nature is empty of "I" and "mine." The emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities is empty of "I" and "mine."

7.355 "The applications of mindfulness are empty of "I" and "mine." The correct exertions are empty of "I" and "mine." The supports [F.18.a] for miraculous ability are empty of "I" and "mine." The faculties are empty of

“I” and “mine.” The powers are empty of “I” and “mine.” The branches of enlightenment are empty of “I” and “mine.” The noble eightfold path is empty of “I” and “mine.”

7.356 “The truths of the noble ones are empty of “I” and “mine.” The meditative concentrations are empty of “I” and “mine.” The immeasurable attitudes are empty of “I” and “mine.” The formless absorptions are empty of “I” and “mine.” The liberations are empty of “I” and “mine.” The nine serial steps of meditative absorption are empty of “I” and “mine.” The emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation are empty of “I” and “mine.” The extrasensory powers are empty of “I” and “mine.” The meditative stabilities are empty of “I” and “mine.” The dhāraṇī gateways are empty of “I” and “mine.” the powers of the tathāgatas are empty of “I” and “mine.” The fearlessnesses are empty of “I” and “mine.” The kinds of exact knowledge are empty of “I” and “mine.” Great compassion is empty of “I” and “mine.” The distinct qualities of the buddhas are empty of “I” and “mine.” And if they are thus empty of “I” and “mine,” what use will fully awakening to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment be to you? You should know that those who do not mention and reveal these sorts of activities of māras are the evil associates of bodhisattva great beings.

7.357 “Moreover, Subhūti, you should know that those who do not mention and reveal these sorts of activities of māras—that [F.18.b] malign māras disguised as buddhas approach bodhisattva great beings saying, ‘Child of a good family, the eastern direction is empty of lord buddhas, bodhisattvas, and śrāvakas. In it there is no buddha, there is no bodhisattva, and there is no śrāvaka. Similarly, the southern direction, western direction, northern direction, northeastern direction, southeastern direction, southwestern direction, and northwestern direction, the nadir and the zenith—all ten directions—are also empty of lord buddhas, bodhisattvas, and śrāvakas. In them there is no buddha, there is no bodhisattva, and there is no śrāvaka—are the evil associates of bodhisattva great beings.

7.358 “Moreover, Subhūti, you should know that those who do not mention and reveal these sorts of demonic activities—that malign māras disguised as śrāvakas, having approached bodhisattva great beings, turn them back from directing their attention to all-aspect omniscience, and advise<sup>358</sup> and instruct them in the attentions connected with śrāvakas and pratyekabuddhas—are the evil associates of bodhisattva great beings.

7.359 “Moreover, Subhūti, malign māras, disguised as monastic preceptors or authentic masters, having approached bodhisattva great beings, turn them back from the conduct of the bodhisattvas, and turn them back from directing their attention toward all-aspect omniscience. They cause them to engage with the applications of mindfulness, cause them to engage with the correct exertions, cause them to engage with the supports for miraculous ability, cause them to engage with the faculties, cause them to engage with the powers, cause them to engage with the branches of enlightenment, and cause them to engage with the noble [F.19.a] eightfold path, and cause them to engage with the truths of the noble ones, cause them to engage with the meditative concentrations, cause them to engage with the immeasurable attitudes, cause them to engage with the formless absorptions, cause them to engage with the liberation, cause them to engage with the serial steps of meditative absorption, and cause them to engage with the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation, saying, 'Child of a good family, you should cultivate these sort of attributes and actualize the level of the śrāvakas. What use will unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment be to you?' You should know that those who do not mention and reveal these sorts of demonic activities are the evil associates of bodhisattva great beings.

7.360 "Moreover, Subhūti, malign māras, disguised as a mother or father, approach bodhisattva great beings, saying, 'What use is fully awakening to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment to you? For the sake of that you roam in saṃsāra, for inestimable countless eons, afflicted by countless amputations of the hands and feet, and decapitations. You should persevere for the fruit of entering the stream that is there to be actualized, the fruit of once-returner that is there to be actualized, the fruit of non-returner that is there to be actualized, and the fruit of arhat that is there to be actualized.' You should know those who do not mention or reveal these sorts of demonic activities to be the evil associates of bodhisattva great beings.

7.361 "Moreover, Subhūti, malign māras disguised as monks, having approached bodhisattva great beings, teach that physical forms are impermanent, [F.19.b] and that physical forms are suffering, are not a self, are at peace, are empty, are signless, are wishless, are unconditioned, and are void, by way of apprehending something. They teach that feelings are impermanent, and that feelings are suffering, are not a self, are at peace, are empty, are signless, are wishless, are unconditioned, and are void, by way of apprehending something. They teach that perceptions are impermanent, and that perceptions are suffering, are not a self, are at peace, are empty, are signless, are wishless, are unconditioned, and are void, by way of apprehending something. They teach that formative predispositions are impermanent, and that formative predispositions are suffering, are not a self, are at peace, are empty, are signless, are wishless, are unconditioned, and are void, by way of apprehending something. And they teach that consciousness is impermanent, and that consciousness is suffering, is not a self, is at peace, is empty, is signless, is wishless, is unconditioned, and is void, by way of apprehending something.

7.362 “They teach that the eyes are impermanent, are suffering, are not a self, are at peace, are empty, are signless, are [F.20.a] wishless, are unconditioned, and are void, by way of apprehending something. They teach that the ears are impermanent, are suffering, are not a self, are at peace, are empty, are signless, are wishless, are unconditioned, and are void, by way of apprehending something. They teach that the nose is impermanent, is suffering, is not a self, is at peace, is empty, is signless, is wishless, is unconditioned, and is void, by way of apprehending something. They teach that the tongue is impermanent, is suffering, is not a self, is at peace, is empty, is signless, is wishless, is unconditioned, and is void, by way of apprehending something. They teach that the body is impermanent, is suffering, is not a self, is at peace, is empty, is signless, is wishless, is unconditioned, and is void, by way of apprehending something. And they teach that the mental faculty is impermanent, is suffering, is not a self, is at peace, is empty, is signless, is wishless, is unconditioned, and is void, by way of apprehending something.

7.363 “They teach that sights are impermanent, are suffering, are not a self, are at peace, are empty, are signless, are wishless, are unconditioned, [F.20.b] and are void, by way of apprehending something. They teach that sounds are impermanent, are suffering, are not a self, are at peace, are empty, are signless, are wishless, are unconditioned, and are void, by way of apprehending something. They teach that odors are impermanent, are suffering, are not a self, are at peace, are empty, are signless, are wishless, are unconditioned, and are void, by way of apprehending something. They teach that tastes are impermanent, are suffering, are not a self, are at peace, are empty, are signless, are wishless, are unconditioned, and are void, by way of apprehending something. They teach that tangibles are impermanent, are suffering, are not a self, are at peace, are empty, are signless, are wishless, are unconditioned, and are void, by way of apprehending something. And they teach that mental phenomena are impermanent, are suffering, are not a self, are at peace, are empty, are signless, are wishless, are unconditioned, and are void, by way of apprehending something.

7.364 “They teach that visual consciousness is impermanent, is suffering, is not a self, is at peace, is empty, is signless, is wishless, is unconditioned, and is void, [F.21.a] by way of apprehending something. They teach that auditory consciousness is impermanent, is suffering, is not a self, is at peace, is empty, is signless, is wishless, is unconditioned, and is void, by way of apprehending something. They teach that olfactory consciousness is impermanent, is suffering, is not a self, is at peace, is empty, is signless, is wishless, is unconditioned, and is void, by way of apprehending something. They teach that gustatory consciousness is impermanent, is suffering, is not a self, is at peace, is empty, is signless, is wishless, is unconditioned, and is void, by way of apprehending something. They teach that tactile consciousness is impermanent, is suffering, is not a self, is at peace, is empty, is signless, is wishless, is unconditioned, and is void, by way of apprehending something. They teach that mental consciousness is impermanent, is suffering, is not a self, is at peace, is empty, is signless, is wishless, is unconditioned, and is void, by way of apprehending something.

7.365      “They teach that visually compounded sensory contact is impermanent, is suffering, is not a self, is at peace, is empty, [F.21.b] is signless, is wishless, is unconditioned, and is void, by way of apprehending something. They teach that aurally compounded sensory contact is impermanent, is suffering, is not a self, is at peace, is empty, is signless, is wishless, is unconditioned, and is void, by way of apprehending something. They teach that nasally compounded sensory contact is impermanent, is suffering, is not a self, is at peace, is empty, is signless, is wishless, is unconditioned, and is void, by way of apprehending something. They teach that lingually compounded sensory contact is impermanent, is suffering, is not a self, is at peace, is empty, is signless, is wishless, is unconditioned, and is void, by way of apprehending something. They teach that corporeally compounded sensory contact is impermanent, is suffering, is not a self, is at peace, is empty, is signless, is wishless, is unconditioned, and is void, by way of apprehending something. They teach that mentally compounded sensory contact is impermanent, is suffering, is not a self, is at peace, is empty, is signless, is wishless, is unconditioned, and is void, by way of apprehending something.

7.366      “They teach that feelings conditioned by visually compounded [F.22.a] sensory contact are impermanent, are suffering, are not a self, are at peace, are empty, are signless, are wishless, are unconditioned, and are void, by way of apprehending something. They teach that feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact are impermanent, are suffering, are not a self, are at peace, are empty, are signless, are wishless, are unconditioned, and are void, by way of apprehending something. They teach that feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact are impermanent, are suffering, are not a self, are at peace, are empty, are signless, are wishless, are unconditioned, and are void, by way of apprehending something. They teach that feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact are impermanent, are suffering, are not a self, are at peace, are empty, are signless, are wishless, are unconditioned, and are void, by way of apprehending something. They teach that feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact are impermanent, are suffering, are not a self, are at peace, are empty, are signless, are wishless, are unconditioned, and are void, by way of apprehending something. And they teach that feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact are impermanent, are suffering, are not a self, are at peace, are empty, [F.22.b] are signless, are wishless, are unconditioned, and are void, by way of apprehending something.

7.367      “They teach that the earth element is impermanent, is suffering, is not a self, is at peace, is empty, is signless, is wishless, is unconditioned, and is void, by way of apprehending something. They teach that the water element is impermanent, is suffering, is not a self, is at peace, is empty, is signless, is wishless, is unconditioned, and is void, by way of apprehending something. They teach that the fire element is impermanent, is suffering, is not a self, is at peace, is empty, is signless, is wishless, is unconditioned, and is void, by way of apprehending something. They teach that the wind element is impermanent, is suffering, is not a self, is at peace, is empty, is signless, is wishless, is unconditioned, and is void, by way of apprehending something. They teach that the space element is impermanent, is suffering, is not a self, is at peace, is empty, is signless, is wishless, is unconditioned, and is void, by way of apprehending something. They teach that the consciousness element is impermanent, is suffering, is not a self, is at peace, is empty, [F.23.a] is signless, is wishless, is unconditioned, and is void, by way of apprehending something.

7.368      “They teach that ignorance is impermanent, is suffering, is not a self, is at peace, is empty, is signless, is wishless, is unconditioned, and is void, by way of apprehending something. They teach formative predispositions are impermanent, are suffering, are not a self, are at peace, are empty, are signless, are wishless, are unconditioned, and are void, by way of apprehending something. They teach that consciousness is impermanent, is suffering, is not a self, is at peace, is empty, is signless, is wishless, is unconditioned, and is void, by way of apprehending something. They teach name and form are impermanent, are suffering, are not a self, are at peace, are empty, are signless, are wishless, are unconditioned, and are void, by way of apprehending something. They teach that the six sense fields are impermanent, are suffering, are not a self, are at peace, are empty, are signless, are wishless, are unconditioned, and are void, by way of apprehending something. They teach that sensory contact is impermanent, is suffering, is not a self, is at peace, [F.23.b] is empty, is signless, is wishless, is unconditioned, and is void, by way of apprehending something. They teach that sensation is impermanent, is suffering, is not a self, is at peace, is empty, is signless, is wishless, is unconditioned, and is void, by way of apprehending something. They teach that craving is impermanent, is suffering, is not a self, is at peace, is empty, is signless, is wishless, is unconditioned, and is void, by way of apprehending something. They teach that grasping is impermanent, is suffering, is not a self, is at peace, is empty, is signless, is wishless, is unconditioned, and is void, by way of apprehending something. They teach that the rebirth process is impermanent, is suffering, is not a self, is at peace, is empty, is signless, is wishless, is unconditioned, and is void, by way of apprehending something. They teach that birth is impermanent, is suffering, is not a self, is at peace, is empty, is signless, is wishless, is unconditioned, and is void, by way of apprehending something. And they teach that aging and death are impermanent, are suffering, are not a self, are at peace, are empty, are signless, are wishless, are [F.24.a] unconditioned, and are void, by way of apprehending something.

7.369      “They teach that the perfection of generosity is impermanent, is suffering, is not a self, is at peace, is empty, is signless, is wishless, is unconditioned, and is void, by way of apprehending something. They teach that the perfection of ethical discipline is impermanent, is suffering, is not a self, is at peace, is empty, is signless, is wishless, is unconditioned, and is void, by way of apprehending something. They teach that the perfection of tolerance is impermanent, is suffering, is not a self, is at peace, is empty, is signless, is wishless, is unconditioned, and is void, by way of apprehending something. They teach that the perfection of perseverance is impermanent, is suffering, is not a self, is at peace, is empty, is signless, is wishless, is unconditioned, and is void, by way of apprehending something. They teach that the perfection of meditative concentration is impermanent, is suffering, is not a self, is at peace, is empty, is signless, is wishless, is unconditioned, and is void, by way of apprehending something. And they teach that the perfection of wisdom is impermanent, is suffering, is not [F.24.b] a self, is at peace, is empty, is signless, is wishless, is unconditioned, and is void, by way of apprehending something.

7.370      “They teach that the emptiness of internal phenomena is impermanent, is suffering, is not a self, is at peace, is empty, is signless, is wishless, is unconditioned, and is void, by way of apprehending something. They teach that the emptiness of external phenomena is impermanent, is suffering, is not a self, is at peace, is empty, is signless, is wishless, is unconditioned, and is void, by way of apprehending something. They teach that the emptiness of external and internal phenomena is impermanent, is suffering, is not a self, is at peace, is empty, is signless, is wishless, is unconditioned, and is void, by way of apprehending something. They teach that the emptiness of emptiness is impermanent, is suffering, is not a self, is at peace, is empty, is signless, is wishless, is unconditioned, and is void, by way of apprehending something. They teach that the emptiness of great extent is impermanent, is suffering, is not a self, is at peace, is empty, is signless, is wishless, is unconditioned, and is void, by way of apprehending something. They teach that the emptiness of ultimate reality is impermanent, is suffering, is not a self, is at peace, is empty, [F.25.a] is signless, is wishless, is unconditioned, and is void, by way of apprehending something. They teach that the emptiness of conditioned phenomena is impermanent, is suffering, is not a self, is at peace, is empty, is signless, is wishless, is unconditioned, and is void, by way of apprehending something. They teach that the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena is impermanent, is suffering, is not a self, is at peace, is empty, is signless, is wishless, is unconditioned, and is void, by way of apprehending something. They teach that the emptiness of the unlimited is impermanent, is suffering, is not a self, is at peace, is empty, is signless, is wishless, is unconditioned, and is void, by way of apprehending something. They teach that the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end is impermanent, is suffering, is not a self, is at peace, is empty, is signless, is wishless, is unconditioned, and is void, by way of apprehending something. They teach that the emptiness of nonexclusion is impermanent, is suffering, is not a self, is at peace, is empty, is signless, is wishless, is unconditioned, and is void, by way of apprehending something. They teach that the emptiness of inherent nature is impermanent, is suffering, is not a self, [F.25.b] is at peace, is empty, is signless, is wishless, is unconditioned, and is void, by way of apprehending something. They teach that the emptiness of all phenomena is impermanent, is suffering, is not a self, is at peace, is empty, is signless, is wishless, is unconditioned, and is void, by way of apprehending something. They teach that the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics is impermanent, is suffering, is not a self, is at peace, is empty, is signless, is wishless, is unconditioned, and is void, by way of apprehending something. They teach that the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended is impermanent, is suffering, is not a self, is at peace, is empty, is signless, is wishless, is unconditioned, and is void, by way of apprehending something. They teach that the emptiness of nonentities is impermanent, is suffering, is not a self, is at peace, is empty, is signless, is wishless, is unconditioned, and is void, by way of apprehending something. They teach that the emptiness of essential nature is impermanent, is suffering, is not a self, is at peace, is empty, is signless, is wishless, is unconditioned, and is void, by way of apprehending something. And they teach that the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities

[F.26.a] is impermanent, is suffering, is not a self, is at peace, is empty, is signless, is wishless, is unconditioned, and is void, by way of apprehending something.

7.371 “They teach that the applications of mindfulness are impermanent, are suffering, are not a self, are at peace, are empty, are signless, are wishless, are unconditioned, and are void, by way of apprehending something. They teach that the correct exertions are impermanent, are suffering, are not a self, are at peace, are empty, are signless, are wishless, are unconditioned, and are void, by way of apprehending something. They teach that the supports for miraculous ability are impermanent, are suffering, are not a self, are at peace, are empty, are signless, are wishless, are unconditioned, and are void, by way of apprehending something. They teach that the faculties are impermanent, are suffering, are not a self, are at peace, are empty, are signless, are wishless, are unconditioned, and are void, by way of apprehending something. They teach that the powers are impermanent, are suffering, are not a self, are at peace, are empty, are signless, are wishless, are unconditioned, and are void, by way of apprehending something. They teach that the branches of enlightenment are [F.26.b] impermanent, are suffering, are not a self, are at peace, are empty, are signless, are wishless, are unconditioned, and are void, by way of apprehending something. And they teach that the noble eightfold path is impermanent, is suffering, is not a self, is at peace, is empty, is signless, is wishless, is unconditioned, and is void, by way of apprehending something.

7.372 “They teach that the truths of the noble ones are impermanent, are suffering, are not a self, are at peace, are empty, are signless, are wishless, are unconditioned, and are void, by way of apprehending something. They teach that the meditative concentrations are impermanent, are suffering, are not a self, are at peace, are empty, are signless, are wishless, are unconditioned, and are void, by way of apprehending something. They teach that the immeasurable attitudes are impermanent, are suffering, are not a self, are at peace, are empty, are signless, are wishless, are unconditioned, and are void, by way of apprehending something. They teach that the formless absorptions are impermanent, are suffering, are not a self, are at peace, are empty, are signless, are wishless, are unconditioned, and are void, by way of apprehending something. [F.27.a] They teach that the liberations are impermanent, are suffering, are not a self, are at peace, are empty, are signless, are wishless, are unconditioned, and are void, by way of apprehending something. They teach that the serial steps of meditative absorption are impermanent, are suffering, are not a self, are at peace, are empty, are signless, are wishless, are unconditioned, and are void, by way of apprehending something. They teach that the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation are impermanent, are suffering, are not a self, are at peace, are empty, are signless, are wishless, are unconditioned, and are void, by way of apprehending something. They teach that the extrasensory powers are impermanent, are suffering, are not a self, are at peace, are empty, are signless, are wishless, are unconditioned, and are void, by way of apprehending something. They teach that the meditative stabilities are impermanent, are suffering, are not a self, are at peace, are empty, are signless, are wishless, are unconditioned, and are void, by way of apprehending something. They teach that the dhāraṇī gateways are impermanent, are suffering, are not a self, are at peace, are empty, are signless, are [F.27.b] wishless, are unconditioned, and are void, by way of apprehending something. They teach that the powers of the tathāgatas are impermanent, are suffering, are not a self, are at peace, are empty, are signless, are wishless, are unconditioned, and are void, by way of apprehending something. They teach that the fearlessnesses are impermanent, are suffering, are not a self, are at peace, are empty, are signless, are wishless, are unconditioned, and are void, by way of apprehending something. They teach that the kinds of exact knowledge are impermanent, are suffering, are not a self, are at peace, are empty, are signless, are wishless, are unconditioned, and are void, by way of apprehending something. They teach that great loving kindness is impermanent, is suffering, is not a self, is at peace, [F.28.a] is empty, is signless, is wishless, is unconditioned, and is void, by way of apprehending something. They teach that great compassion is impermanent, is suffering, is not a self, is at peace, is empty, is signless, is wishless, is unconditioned, and is void, by way of apprehending something. And they teach that the distinct qualities of the buddhas are impermanent, are suffering, are not a self, are at peace, are empty, are signless, are wishless, are unconditioned, and are void, by way of apprehending something. You should know that those who do not mention and reveal the aspects of these sorts of demonic activities are the evil associates of bodhisattva great beings. So it is that bodhisattva great beings should know these evil associates. Having understood them in that manner, they should abandon them.”

7.373 This completes the seventh chapter from The Perfection of Wisdom in One Hundred Thousand Lines. [B3]

8.

CHAPTER 8

8.1 Then the venerable Subhūti asked the Blessed One, “Blessed Lord, when you say ‘bodhisattva,’ what is the actual entity denoted by this word bodhisattva?”

8.2 The Blessed One replied to the venerable Subhūti as follows: “Subhūti, the actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva is not an actual entity denoted by a word. If you ask why, it is because bodhi (enlightenment) does not arise nor does sattva (a being) arise. Subhūti, in enlightenment there is no word, and in a being there is no word. Therefore, the actual entity that is the word bodhisattva is not an actual entity that is a word.

8.3 “Subhūti, to illustrate, just as in the sky there are no tracks left by birds, in the same way, Subhūti, there is not actual entity denoted by a word bodhisattva. Subhūti, just as a dream is without any basis,<sup>359</sup> in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva. Subhūti, just as an illusion is without any basis, in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva.

8.4 “Subhūti, just as the moon [F.28.b] in water is without any basis, in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva. Subhūti, just as an echo is without any basis, in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva. Subhūti, just as an optical aberration is without any basis, in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva. Subhūti, just as a reflection is without any basis, in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva. Subhūti, just as a magical display of the tathāgata is without any basis, in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva.

8.5 “Subhūti, just as the real nature is without any basis, in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva. Subhūti, just as the unmistakable real nature is without any basis, in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva. Subhūti, just as the one and only real nature is without any basis, in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva. Subhūti, just as the reality of phenomena is without any basis, in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva. Subhūti, just as the realm of phenomena is without any basis, in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva. Subhūti, just as the abiding nature of phenomena is without any basis, in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva. Subhūti, just as the maturity of phenomena is without any basis, in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva. Subhūti, just as the truth itself is without any basis, in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva.

8.6 “Subhūti, just as the physical form of an illusory person is without any basis, [F.29.a] the feelings are without any basis, the perceptions are without any basis, the formative predispositions are without any basis, and the consciousness is without any basis, in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection.

8.7 “Subhūti, just as the eyes of an illusory person are without any basis, the ears are without any basis, the nose is without any basis, the tongue is without any basis, the body is without any basis, and the mental faculty is without any basis, in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection.

8.8 “Subhūti, just as the sights of an illusory person are without any basis, the sounds are without any basis, the odors are without any basis, the tastes are without any basis, the tangibles are without any basis, and the mental phenomena are without any basis, in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection.

8.9 “Subhūti, just as the visual consciousness of an illusory person is without any basis, the auditory consciousness is without any basis, the olfactory consciousness is without any basis, the gustatory consciousness is without any basis, the tactile consciousness is without any basis, and the mental consciousness is without any basis, in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection.

8.10 “Subhūti, just as the visually compounded sensory contact of an illusory person is without any basis, the aurally compounded sensory contact is without any basis, the nasally compounded sensory contact is without any basis, the lingually compounded sensory contact is without any basis, the corporeally compounded sensory contact is without any basis, and the mentally compounded sensory contact is without any basis, [F.29.b] in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection.

8.11 “Subhūti, just as feelings conditioned by the visually compounded sensory contact of an illusory person are without any basis, feelings conditioned by the aurally compounded sensory contact are without any basis, feelings conditioned by the nasally compounded sensory contact are without any basis, feelings conditioned by the lingually compounded sensory contact are without any basis, feelings conditioned by the corporeally compounded sensory contact are without any basis, and feelings conditioned by the mentally compounded sensory contact are without any basis, in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection.

8.12 “Subhūti, just as the earth element of an illusory person is without any basis, the water element is without any basis, the fire element is without any basis, the wind element is without any basis, the space element is without any basis, and the consciousness element is without any basis, in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection.<sup>360</sup>

8.13 “Subhūti, just as the ignorance of an illusory person is without any basis, the formative predispositions are without any basis, the consciousness is without any basis, the name and form are without any basis, the six sense fields are without any basis, the sensory contact is without any basis, the sensation is without any basis, the craving is without any basis, the grasping is without any basis, the rebirth process is without any basis, the birth is without any basis, and the aging and death are without any basis, in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection.

8.14 “Subhūti, just as there is [F.30.a] no actual entity denoted by the words for an illusory person practicing the perfection of generosity; Subhūti, just as there is no actual entity denoted by the words for an illusory person practicing the perfection of ethical discipline; Subhūti, just as there is no actual entity denoted by the words for an illusory person practicing the perfection of tolerance; Subhūti, just as there is no actual entity denoted by the words for an illusory person practicing the perfection of perseverance; Subhūti, just as there is no actual entity denoted by the words for an illusory person practicing the perfection of meditative concentration; and Subhūti, just as there is no actual entity denoted by the words for an illusory person practicing the perfection of wisdom, in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection.

8.15 “Subhūti, just as there is no actual entity denoted by the words for an illusory person practicing the emptiness of internal phenomena; Subhūti, just as there is no actual entity denoted by the words for an illusory person practicing the emptiness of external phenomena; Subhūti, just as there is no actual entity denoted by the words for an illusory person practicing the emptiness of external and internal phenomena; Subhūti, just as there is no actual entity denoted by the words for an illusory person practicing the emptiness of emptiness; Subhūti, just as there is no actual entity denoted by the words for an illusory person practicing the emptiness of great extent; Subhūti, just as there is no actual entity denoted by the words for an illusory person practicing the emptiness of ultimate reality; Subhūti, just as there is no actual entity denoted by the words for an illusory person practicing the emptiness of conditioned phenomena; Subhūti, just as there is no actual entity denoted by the words for an illusory person practicing the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena; Subhūti, just as there is no actual entity denoted by the words for an illusory person practicing the emptiness of the unlimited; Subhūti, just as there is no actual entity denoted by the words for an illusory person practicing the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end; Subhūti, just as there is [F.30.b] no actual entity denoted by the words for an illusory person practicing the emptiness of nonexclusion; Subhūti, just as there is no actual entity denoted by the words for an illusory person practicing the emptiness of inherent nature; Subhūti, just as there is no actual entity denoted by the words for an illusory person practicing the emptiness of all phenomena; Subhūti, just as there is no actual entity denoted by the words for an illusory person practicing the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics; Subhūti, just as there is no actual entity denoted by the words for an illusory person practicing the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended; Subhūti, just as there is no actual entity denoted by the words for an illusory person practicing the emptiness of nonentities; Subhūti, just as there is no actual entity denoted by the words for an illusory person practicing the emptiness of essential nature; and, Subhūti, just as there is no actual entity denoted by the words for an illusory person practicing the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities, in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection.

8.16 “Subhūti, just as there is no actual entity denoted by the words for an illusory person practicing the applications of mindfulness; Subhūti, just as there is no actual entity denoted by the words for an illusory person practicing the correct exertions; Subhūti, just as there is no actual entity denoted by the words for an illusory person practicing the supports for miraculous ability; Subhūti, just as there is no actual entity denoted by the words for an illusory person practicing the faculties; Subhūti, just as there is no actual entity denoted by the words for an illusory person practicing the powers; Subhūti, just as there is no actual entity denoted by the words for an illusory person practicing the branches of enlightenment; and, Subhūti, just as there is no actual entity denoted by the words for an illusory person practicing the noble eightfold path, in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, [F.31.a] in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection.

8.17 “Subhūti, just as there is no actual entity denoted by the words for an illusory person practicing the truths of the noble ones; Subhūti, just as there is no actual entity denoted by the words for an illusory person practicing the meditative concentrations; Subhūti, just as there is no actual entity denoted by the words for an illusory person practicing the immeasurable attitudes; Subhūti, just as there is no actual entity denoted by the words for an illusory person practicing the formless absorptions; Subhūti, just as there is no actual entity denoted by the words for an illusory person practicing the eight liberations; Subhūti, just as there is no actual entity denoted by the words for an illusory person practicing the nine serial steps of meditative absorption; Subhūti, just as there is no actual entity denoted by the words for an illusory person practicing the emptiness, the signlessness, and the wishlessness gateways to liberation; Subhūti, just as there is no actual entity denoted by the words for an illusory person practicing the extrasensory powers; Subhūti, just as there is no actual entity denoted by the words for an illusory person practicing the meditative stabilities; and Subhūti, just as there is no actual entity denoted by the words for an illusory person practicing the dhāraṇī gateways, in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection.

8.18 “Subhūti, just as there is no actual entity denoted by the words for an illusory person practicing the powers of the tathāgatas; Subhūti, just as there is no actual entity denoted by the words for an illusory person practicing the fearlessnesses; Subhūti, just as there is no actual entity denoted by the words for an illusory person practicing the kinds of exact knowledge; Subhūti, just as there is no actual entity denoted by the words for an illusory person practicing great loving kindness; Subhūti, [F.31.b] just as there is no actual entity denoted by the words for an illusory person practicing great compassion; and, Subhūti, just as there is no actual entity denoted by the words for an illusory person practicing the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas, in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection.

8.19 “Subhūti, just as the physical form of a tathāgata, arhat, perfectly complete buddha is without any basis (if you ask why, it is because that physical form is nonexistent), in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva,<sup>361</sup> in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom. Subhūti, just as the feelings of a tathāgata, arhat, perfectly complete buddha are without any basis (if you ask why, it is because those feelings are nonexistent), in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom. Subhūti, just as the perceptions of a tathāgata, arhat, perfectly complete buddha are without any basis (if you ask why, it is because those perceptions are nonexistent), in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom. Subhūti, just as the formative predispositions of a tathāgata, arhat, perfectly complete buddha are without any basis (if you ask why, it is because those formative predispositions are nonexistent), in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom. Subhūti, just as the consciousness of a tathāgata, arhat, perfectly complete buddha is [F.32.a] without any basis (if you ask why, it is because that consciousness is nonexistent), in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom.

8.20 “Subhūti, just as the eyes of a tathāgata, arhat, perfectly complete buddha are without any basis (if you ask why, it is because those eyes are nonexistent), in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom. Subhūti, just as the ears of a tathāgata, arhat, perfectly complete buddha are without any basis (if you ask why, it is because those ears are nonexistent), in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom. Subhūti, just as the nose of a tathāgata, arhat, perfectly complete buddha is without any basis (if you ask why, it is because that nose is nonexistent), in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom. Subhūti, just as the tongue of a tathāgata, arhat, perfectly complete buddha is without any basis (if you ask why, it is because that tongue is nonexistent), in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom. Subhūti, just as the body of a tathāgata, arhat, perfectly complete buddha is without any basis (if you ask why, it is because that body is nonexistent), in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, [F.32.b] in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom. Subhūti, just as the mental faculty of a tathāgata, arhat, perfectly complete buddha is without any basis (if you ask why, it is because that mental faculty is nonexistent), in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom.

8.21 “Subhūti, just as the sights of a tathāgata, arhat, perfectly complete buddha are without any basis (if you ask why, it is because those sights are nonexistent), in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom. Subhūti, just as the sounds of a tathāgata, arhat, perfectly complete buddha are without any basis (if you ask why, it is because those sounds are nonexistent), in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom. Subhūti, just as the odors of a tathāgata, arhat, perfectly complete buddha are without any basis (if you ask why, it is because those odors are nonexistent), in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom. Subhūti, just as the tastes of a tathāgata, arhat, perfectly complete buddha are without any basis (if you ask why, it is because those tastes are nonexistent), in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom. Subhūti, just as the tangibles of a tathāgata, arhat, perfectly complete buddha are [F.33.a] without any basis (if you ask why, it is because those tangibles are nonexistent), in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom. Subhūti, just as the mental phenomena of a tathāgata, arhat, perfectly complete buddha are without any basis (if you ask why, it is because those mental phenomena are nonexistent), in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom.

8.22 “Subhūti, just as the visual consciousness of a tathāgata, arhat, perfectly complete buddha is without any basis (if you ask why, it is because that visual consciousness is nonexistent), in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom. Subhūti, just as the auditory consciousness of a tathāgata, arhat, perfectly complete buddha is without any basis (if you ask why, it is because that auditory consciousness is nonexistent), in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom. Subhūti, just as the olfactory consciousness of a tathāgata, arhat, perfectly complete buddha is without any basis (if you ask why, it is because that olfactory consciousness is nonexistent), in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom. Subhūti, just as the gustatory consciousness of a tathāgata, arhat, perfectly complete buddha is without any basis [F.33.b] (if you ask why, it is because that gustatory consciousness is nonexistent), in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom. Subhūti, just as the tactile consciousness of a tathāgata, arhat, perfectly complete buddha is without any basis (if you ask why, it is because that tactile consciousness is nonexistent), in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom. Subhūti, just as the mental consciousness of a tathāgata, arhat, perfectly complete buddha is without any basis (if you ask why, it is because that mental consciousness is nonexistent), in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom.

8.23      “Subhūti, just as the visually compounded sensory contact of a tathāgata, arhat, perfectly complete buddha is without any basis (if you ask why, it is because that visually compounded sensory contact is nonexistent), in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom. Subhūti, just as the aurally compounded sensory contact of a tathāgata, arhat, perfectly complete buddha is without any basis (if you ask why, it is because that aurally compounded sensory contact is nonexistent), in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom. Subhūti, just as the nasally compounded sensory contact of a tathāgata, arhat, perfectly complete buddha is without any basis (if you ask why, it is because [F.34.a] that nasally compounded sensory contact is nonexistent), in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom. Subhūti, just as the lingually compounded sensory contact of a tathāgata, arhat, perfectly complete buddha is without any basis (if you ask why, it is because that lingually compounded sensory contact is nonexistent), in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom. Subhūti, just as the corporeally compounded sensory contact of a tathāgata, arhat, perfectly complete buddha is without any basis (if you ask why, it is because that corporeally compounded sensory contact is nonexistent), in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom. Subhūti, just as the mentally compounded sensory contact of a tathāgata, arhat, perfectly complete buddha is without any basis (if you ask why, it is because that mentally compounded sensory contact is nonexistent), in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom.

8.24 “Subhūti, just as the feelings conditioned by the visually compounded sensory contact of a tathāgata, arhat, perfectly complete buddha are without any basis (if you ask why, it is because those feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact are nonexistent), in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom. Subhūti, just as the feelings conditioned by the aurally compounded sensory contact of a tathāgata, arhat, perfectly complete buddha [F.34.b] are without any basis (if you ask why, it is because those feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact are nonexistent), in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom. Subhūti, just as the feelings conditioned by the nasally compounded sensory contact of a tathāgata, arhat, perfectly complete buddha are without any basis (if you ask why, it is because those feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact are nonexistent), in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom. Subhūti, just as the feelings conditioned by the lingually compounded sensory contact of a tathāgata, arhat, perfectly complete buddha are without any basis (if you ask why, it is because those feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact are nonexistent), in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom. Subhūti, just as the feelings conditioned by the corporeally compounded sensory contact of a tathāgata, arhat, perfectly complete buddha are without any basis (if you ask why, it is because those feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact are nonexistent), in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom. Subhūti, just as the feelings conditioned by the mentally compounded sensory contact of a tathāgata, arhat, perfectly complete buddha are without any basis (if you ask why, it is because those feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact are nonexistent), in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, [F.35.a] in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom.

8.25 “Subhūti, just as the earth element of a tathāgata, arhat, perfectly complete buddha is without any basis (if you ask why, it is because that earth element is nonexistent), in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom. Subhūti, just as the water element of a tathāgata, arhat, perfectly complete buddha is without any basis (if you ask why, it is because that water element is nonexistent), in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom. Subhūti, just as the fire element of a tathāgata, arhat, perfectly complete buddha is without any basis (if you ask why, it is because that fire element is nonexistent), in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom. Subhūti, just as the wind element of a tathāgata, arhat, perfectly complete buddha is without any basis (if you ask why, it is because that wind element is nonexistent), in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom. Subhūti, just as the space element of a tathāgata, arhat, perfectly complete buddha is without any basis (if you ask why, it is because that space element is nonexistent), in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing [F.35.b] the perfection of wisdom. Subhūti, just as the consciousness element of a tathāgata, arhat, perfectly complete buddha is without any basis (if you ask why, it is because that consciousness element is nonexistent), in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom.

8.26 “Subhūti, just as the ignorance of a tathāgata, arhat, perfectly complete buddha is without any basis (if you ask why, it is because that ignorance is nonexistent), in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom. Subhūti, just as the formative predispositions of a tathāgata, arhat, perfectly complete buddha are without any basis (if you ask why, it is because those formative predispositions are nonexistent), in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom. Subhūti, just as the consciousness of a tathāgata, arhat, perfectly complete buddha is without any basis (if you ask why, it is because that consciousness is nonexistent), in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom. Subhūti, just as the name and form of a tathāgata, arhat, perfectly complete buddha are without any basis (if you ask why, it is because those name and form are nonexistent), in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing [F.36.a] the perfection of wisdom. Subhūti, just as the six sense fields of a tathāgata, arhat, perfectly complete buddha are without any basis (if you ask why, it is because those six sense fields are nonexistent), in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom. Subhūti, just as the sensory contact of a tathāgata, arhat, perfectly complete buddha is without any basis (if you ask why, it is because that sensory contact is nonexistent), in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom. Subhūti, just as the sensation of a tathāgata, arhat, perfectly complete buddha is without any basis (if you ask why, it is because that sensation is nonexistent), in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom. Subhūti, just as the craving of a tathāgata, arhat, perfectly complete buddha is without any basis (if you ask why, it is because that craving is nonexistent), in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom. Subhūti, just as the grasping of a tathāgata, arhat, perfectly complete buddha is without any basis (if you ask why, it is because that grasping is nonexistent), in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom. Subhūti, just as the rebirth process of a tathāgata, arhat, perfectly complete buddha [F.36.b] is without any basis (if you ask why, it is because that rebirth process is nonexistent), in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom. Subhūti, just as the birth of a tathāgata, arhat, perfectly complete buddha is without any basis (if you ask why, it is because that birth is nonexistent), in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom. Subhūti, just as the aging and death of a tathāgata, arhat, perfectly complete buddha are without any basis (if you ask why, it is because that aging and death is nonexistent), in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom.

8.27 “Subhūti, just as the perfection of generosity of a tathāgata, arhat, perfectly complete buddha is without any basis (if you ask why, it is because that perfection of generosity is nonexistent), in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom. Subhūti, just as the perfection of ethical discipline of a tathāgata, arhat, perfectly complete buddha is without any basis (if you ask why, it is because that perfection of ethical discipline is nonexistent), in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom. Subhūti, just as the perfection of tolerance [F.37.a] of a tathāgata, arhat, perfectly complete buddha is without any basis (if you ask why, it is because that perfection of tolerance is nonexistent), in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom. Subhūti, just as the perfection of perseverance of a tathāgata, arhat, perfectly complete buddha is without any basis (if you ask why, it is because that perfection of perseverance is nonexistent), in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom. Subhūti, just as the perfection of meditative concentration of a tathāgata, arhat, perfectly complete buddha is without any basis (if you ask why, it is because that perfection of meditative concentration is nonexistent), in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom. Subhūti, just as the perfection of wisdom of a tathāgata, arhat, perfectly complete buddha is without any basis (if you ask why, it is because that perfection of wisdom is nonexistent), in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom.

8.28 “Subhūti, just as the emptiness of internal phenomena of a tathāgata, arhat, perfectly complete buddha is without any basis (if you ask why, it is because that emptiness of internal phenomena is nonexistent), in the same way, Subhūti, there is [F.37.b] no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom. Subhūti, just as the emptiness of external phenomena of a tathāgata, arhat, perfectly complete buddha is without any basis (if you ask why, it is because that emptiness of external phenomena is nonexistent), in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom. Subhūti, just as the emptiness of external and internal phenomena of a tathāgata, arhat, perfectly complete buddha is without any basis (if you ask why, it is because that emptiness of external and internal phenomena is nonexistent), in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom. Subhūti, just as the emptiness of emptiness of a tathāgata, arhat, perfectly complete buddha is without any basis (if you ask why, it is because that emptiness of emptiness is nonexistent), in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom. Subhūti, just as the emptiness of great extent of a tathāgata, arhat, perfectly complete buddha is without any basis (if you ask why, it is because that emptiness of great extent is nonexistent), in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom. Subhūti, just as the emptiness of ultimate reality of a tathāgata, arhat, perfectly complete buddha is without any basis (if you ask why, it is because that emptiness of ultimate reality is nonexistent), in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, [F.38.a] in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom. Subhūti, just as the emptiness of conditioned phenomena of a tathāgata, arhat, perfectly complete buddha is without any basis (if you ask why, it is because that emptiness of conditioned phenomena is nonexistent), in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom. Subhūti, just as the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena of a tathāgata, arhat, perfectly complete buddha is without any basis (if you ask why, it is because that emptiness of unconditioned phenomena is nonexistent), in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom. Subhūti, just as the emptiness of the unlimited of a tathāgata, arhat, perfectly complete buddha is without any basis (if you ask why, it is because that emptiness of the unlimited is nonexistent), in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom. Subhūti, just as the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end of a tathāgata, arhat, perfectly complete buddha is without any basis (if you ask why, it is because that emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end is nonexistent), in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom. Subhūti, just as the emptiness of nonexclusion of a tathāgata, arhat, perfectly complete buddha is without any basis (if you ask why, it is because that emptiness of nonexclusion is nonexistent), in the same way, Subhūti, there is [F.38.b] no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom. Subhūti, just as the emptiness of inherent nature of a tathāgata, arhat, perfectly complete buddha is without any basis (if you ask why, it is because that emptiness of inherent nature is nonexistent), in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom. Subhūti, just as the emptiness of all phenomena of a tathāgata, arhat, perfectly complete buddha is without any basis (if you ask why, it is because that emptiness of all phenomena is nonexistent), in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom. Subhūti, just as the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics of a tathāgata, arhat, perfectly complete buddha is without any basis (if you ask why, it is because that emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics is nonexistent), in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom. Subhūti, just as the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended of a tathāgata, arhat, perfectly complete buddha is without any basis (if you ask why, it is because that emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended is nonexistent), in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom. Subhūti, just as the emptiness of nonentities of a tathāgata, arhat, perfectly complete buddha is without any basis (if you ask why, it is because that emptiness of nonentities [F.39.a] is nonexistent), in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom. Subhūti, just as the emptiness of essential nature of a tathāgata, arhat, perfectly complete buddha is without any basis (if you ask why, it is because that emptiness of essential nature is nonexistent), in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom. Subhūti, just as the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities of a tathāgata, arhat, perfectly complete buddha is without any basis (if you ask why, it is because that emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities is nonexistent), in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom.

8.29 “Subhūti, just as the applications of mindfulness of a tathāgata, arhat, perfectly complete buddha are without any basis (if you ask why, it is because those applications of mindfulness are nonexistent), in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom. Subhūti, just as the correct exertions of a tathāgata, arhat, perfectly complete buddha are without any basis (if you ask why, it is because those correct exertions are nonexistent), in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom. Subhūti, just as the supports for miraculous ability of a tathāgata, arhat, perfectly complete buddha [F.39.b] are without any basis (if you ask why, it is because those supports for miraculous ability are nonexistent), in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom. Subhūti, just as the faculties of a tathāgata, arhat, perfectly complete buddha are without any basis (if you ask why, it is because those faculties are nonexistent), in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom. Subhūti, just as the powers of a tathāgata, arhat, perfectly complete buddha are without any basis (if you ask why, it is because those powers are nonexistent), in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom. Subhūti, just as the branches of enlightenment of a tathāgata, arhat, perfectly complete buddha are without any basis (if you ask why, it is because those branches of enlightenment are nonexistent), in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom. Subhūti, just as the path of a tathāgata, arhat, perfectly complete buddha is without any basis (if you ask why, it is because that path is nonexistent), in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom.

8.30 “Subhūti, just as the truths of the noble ones of a tathāgata, arhat, perfectly complete buddha are without any basis (if you ask why, [F.40.a] it is because those truths of the noble ones are nonexistent), in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom. Subhūti, just as the meditative concentrations of a tathāgata, arhat, perfectly complete buddha are without any basis (if you ask why, it is because those meditative concentrations are nonexistent), in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom. Subhūti, just as the immeasurable attitudes of a tathāgata, arhat, perfectly complete buddha are without any basis (if you ask why, it is because those immeasurable attitudes are nonexistent), in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom. Subhūti, just as the formless absorptions of a tathāgata, arhat, perfectly complete buddha are without any basis (if you ask why, it is because those formless absorptions are nonexistent), in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom. Subhūti, just as the liberations of a tathāgata, arhat, perfectly complete buddha are without any basis (if you ask why, it is because those liberations are nonexistent), in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom. Subhūti, just as the serial steps of meditative absorption of a tathāgata, arhat, perfectly complete buddha [F.40.b] are without any basis (if you ask why, it is because those serial steps of meditative absorption are nonexistent), in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom. Subhūti, just as the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation of a tathāgata, arhat, perfectly complete buddha are without any basis (if you ask why, it is because those emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation are nonexistent), in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom. Subhūti, just as the extrasensory powers of a tathāgata, arhat, perfectly complete buddha are without any basis (if you ask why, it is because those extrasensory powers are nonexistent), in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom. Subhūti, just as the meditative stabilities of a tathāgata, arhat, perfectly complete buddha are without any basis (if you ask why, it is because those meditative stabilities are nonexistent), in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom. Subhūti, just as the dhāraṇī gateways of a tathāgata, arhat, perfectly complete buddha are without any basis (if you ask why, it is because those dhāraṇī gateways are nonexistent), in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom. [F.41.a]

8.31 “Subhūti, just as the ten powers of the tathāgatas of a tathāgata, arhat, perfectly complete buddha are without any basis (if you ask why, it is because those powers of the tathāgatas are nonexistent), in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom. Subhūti, just as the fearlessnesses of a tathāgata, arhat, perfectly complete buddha are without any basis (if you ask why, it is because those fearlessnesses are nonexistent), in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom. Subhūti, just as the kinds of exact knowledge of a tathāgata, arhat, perfectly complete buddha are without any basis (if you ask why, it is because those kinds of exact knowledge are nonexistent), in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom. Subhūti, just as the great compassion of a tathāgata, arhat, perfectly complete buddha is without any basis (if you ask why, it is because that great compassion is nonexistent), in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom. Subhūti, just as the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas of a tathāgata, arhat, perfectly complete buddha are without any basis (if you ask why, it is because those distinct qualities of the buddhas are nonexistent), [F.41.b] in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom. [B4]

8.32 “Subhūti, just as the conditioned element is without any basis in the unconditioned element, and the unconditioned element is without any basis in the conditioned element, in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom.

8.33 “Subhūti, just as nonarising is without any basis, in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom. Subhūti, just as nonceasing is without any basis, in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom. Subhūti, just as nondefilement is without any basis, in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom. Subhūti, just as nonpurification is without any basis, in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom. Subhūti, just as nonconditioning is without any basis, in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom. Subhūti, just as nonorigination is without any basis, in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom. Subhūti, just as [F.42.a] nonapprehensibility is without any basis, in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom.”

8.34 Subhūti then asked, “Blessed Lord, the nonarising of what is without any basis? The nonceasing of what is without any basis? The nondefilement and the nonpurification of what is without any basis? The nonconditioning of what is without any basis? The nonorigination of what is without any basis? The nonapprehensibility of what is without any basis?”

8.35 “Subhūti,” replied the Blessed One, “the nonarising of physical forms is without any basis. The nonceasing of physical forms is without any basis. The nondefilement and the nonpurification of physical forms are without any basis. The nonconditioning of physical forms is without any basis. The nonorigination of physical forms is without any basis. The nonapprehensibility of physical forms is without any basis.

8.36 “Subhūti, the nonarising of feelings is without any basis. The nonceasing of feelings is without any basis. The nondefilement and the nonpurification of feelings are without any basis. The nonconditioning of feelings is without any basis. The nonorigination of feelings is without any basis. The nonapprehensibility of feelings is without any basis. Subhūti, the nonarising of perceptions is without any basis. The nonceasing of perceptions is without any basis. The nondefilement and the nonpurification of perceptions are without any basis. The nonconditioning of perceptions is without any basis. The nonorigination of perceptions is without any basis. The nonapprehensibility of perceptions is without any basis. Subhūti, the nonarising of formative predispositions is without any basis. The nonceasing of formative predispositions is without any basis. The nondefilement [F.42.b] and the nonpurification of formative predispositions are without any basis. The nonconditioning of formative predispositions is without any basis. The nonorigination of formative predispositions is without any basis. The nonapprehensibility of formative predispositions is without any basis. Subhūti, the nonarising of consciousness is without any basis. The nonceasing of consciousness is without any basis. The nondefilement and the nonpurification of consciousness are without any basis. The nonconditioning of consciousness is without any basis. The nonorigination of consciousness is without any basis. The nonapprehensibility of consciousness is without any basis.

8.37 “Subhūti, the nonarising of the eyes is without any basis. The nonceasing of the eyes is without any basis. The nondefilement and the nonpurification of the eyes are without any basis. The nonconditioning of the eyes is without any basis. The nonorigination of the eyes is without any basis. The nonapprehensibility of the eyes is without any basis. Subhūti, the nonarising of the ears is without any basis. The nonceasing of the ears is without any basis. The nondefilement and the nonpurification of the ears are without any basis. The nonconditioning of the ears is without any basis. The nonorigination of the ears is without any basis. The nonapprehensibility of the ears is without any basis. Subhūti, the nonarising of the nose is without any basis. The nonceasing of the nose is without any basis. The nondefilement and the nonpurification of the nose are without any basis. The nonconditioning of the nose is without any basis. The nonorigination of the nose is without any basis. The nonapprehensibility of the nose is without any basis. Subhūti, the nonarising of the tongue is without any basis. The nonceasing of the tongue is without any basis. The nondefilement and the nonpurification of the tongue are without any basis. The nonconditioning [F.43.a] of the tongue is without any basis. The nonorigination of the tongue is without any basis. The nonapprehensibility of the tongue is without any basis. Subhūti, the nonarising of the body is without any basis. The nonceasing of the body is without any basis. The nondefilement and the nonpurification of the body are without any basis. The nonconditioning of the body is without any basis. The nonorigination of the body is without any basis. The nonapprehensibility of the body is without any basis. Subhūti, the nonarising of the mental faculty is without any basis. The nonceasing of the mental faculty is without any basis. The nondefilement and the nonpurification of the mental faculty are without any basis. The nonconditioning of the mental faculty is without any basis. The nonorigination of the mental faculty is without any basis. The nonapprehensibility of the mental faculty is without any basis.

8.38 “Subhūti, the nonarising of sights is without any basis. The nonceasing of sights is without any basis. The nondefilement and the nonpurification of sights are without any basis. The nonconditioning of sights is without any basis. The nonorigination of sights is without any basis. The nonapprehensibility of sights is without any basis. Subhūti, the nonarising of sounds is without any basis. The nonceasing of sounds is without any basis.

The nondefilement and the nonpurification of sounds are without any basis. The nonconditioning of sounds is without any basis. The nonorigination of sounds is without any basis. The nonapprehensibility of sounds is without any basis. Subhūti, the nonarising of odors is without any basis. The nonceasing of odors is without any basis. The nondefilement and the nonpurification of odors are without any basis. The nonconditioning of odors is without any basis. The nonorigination of odors is without any basis. The nonapprehensibility of odors is without any basis. Subhūti, the nonarising of tastes is without any basis. The nonceasing of tastes is without any basis. The nondefilement and the nonpurification of tastes are without any basis. [F.43.b] The nonconditioning of tastes is without any basis. The nonorigination of tastes is without any basis. The nonapprehensibility of tastes is without any basis. Subhūti, the nonarising of tangibles is without any basis. The nonceasing of tangibles is without any basis. The nondefilement and the nonpurification of tangibles are without any basis. The nonconditioning of tangibles is without any basis. The nonorigination of tangibles is without any basis. The nonapprehensibility of tangibles is without any basis. Subhūti, the nonarising of mental phenomena is without any basis. The nonceasing of mental phenomena is without any basis. The nondefilement and the nonpurification of mental phenomena are without any basis. The nonconditioning of mental phenomena is without any basis. The nonorigination of mental phenomena is without any basis. The nonapprehensibility of mental phenomena is without any basis.

8.39 “Subhūti, the nonarising of visual consciousness is without any basis. The nonceasing of visual consciousness is without any basis. The nondefilement and the nonpurification of visual consciousness are without any basis. The nonconditioning of visual consciousness is without any basis. The nonorigination of visual consciousness is without any basis. The nonapprehensibility of visual consciousness is without any basis. Subhūti, the nonarising of auditory consciousness is without any basis. The nonceasing of auditory consciousness is without any basis. The nondefilement and the nonpurification of auditory consciousness are without any basis. The nonconditioning of auditory consciousness is without any basis. The nonorigination of auditory consciousness is without any basis. The nonapprehensibility of auditory consciousness is without any basis. Subhūti, the nonarising of olfactory consciousness is without any basis. The nonceasing of olfactory consciousness is without any basis. The nondefilement and the nonpurification [F.44.a] of olfactory consciousness are without any basis. The nonconditioning of olfactory consciousness is without any basis. The nonorigination of olfactory consciousness is without any basis. The nonapprehensibility of olfactory consciousness is without any basis. Subhūti, the nonarising of gustatory consciousness is without any basis. The nonceasing of gustatory consciousness is without any basis. The nondefilement and the nonpurification of gustatory consciousness are without any basis. The nonconditioning of gustatory consciousness is without any basis. The nonorigination of gustatory consciousness is without any basis. The nonapprehensibility of gustatory consciousness is without any basis. Subhūti, the nonarising of tactile consciousness is without any basis. The nonceasing of tactile consciousness is without any basis. The nondefilement and the nonpurification of tactile consciousness are without any basis. The nonconditioning of tactile consciousness is without any basis. The nonorigination of tactile consciousness is without any basis. The nonapprehensibility of tactile consciousness is without any basis. Subhūti, the nonarising of mental consciousness is without any basis. The nonceasing of mental consciousness is without any basis. The nondefilement and the nonpurification of mental consciousness are without any basis. The nonconditioning of mental consciousness is without any basis. The nonorigination of mental consciousness is without any basis. The nonapprehensibility of mental consciousness is without any basis.

8.40 “Subhūti, the nonarising of visually compounded sensory contact is without any basis. The nonceasing of visually compounded sensory contact is without any basis. The nondefilement and the nonpurification [F.44.b] of visually compounded sensory contact are without any basis. The nonconditioning of visually compounded sensory contact is without any basis. The nonorigination of visually compounded sensory contact is without any basis. The nonapprehensibility of visually compounded sensory contact is without any basis. Subhūti, the nonarising of aurally compounded sensory contact is without any basis. The nonceasing of aurally compounded sensory contact is without any basis. The nondefilement and the nonpurification of aurally compounded sensory contact are without any basis. The nonconditioning of aurally compounded sensory contact is without any basis. The nonorigination of aurally compounded sensory contact is without any basis. The nonapprehensibility of aurally compounded sensory contact is without any basis. Subhūti, the nonarising of nasally compounded sensory contact is without any basis. The nonceasing of nasally compounded sensory contact is without any basis. The nondefilement and the nonpurification of nasally compounded sensory contact are without any basis. The nonconditioning of nasally compounded sensory contact is without any basis. The nonorigination of nasally compounded sensory contact is without any basis. The nonapprehensibility of nasally compounded sensory contact is without any basis. Subhūti, the nonarising of lingually compounded sensory contact is without any basis.

The nonceasing of lingually compounded sensory contact is without any basis. The nondefilement and the nonpurification of lingually compounded sensory contact are without any basis. The nonconditioning of lingually compounded sensory contact is without any basis. The nonorigination of lingually compounded sensory contact is without any basis. The nonapprehensibility of lingually compounded sensory contact is without any basis. Subhūti, the nonarising of corporeally compounded sensory contact is without any basis. The nonceasing of corporeally compounded sensory contact is without any basis. The nondefilement and the nonpurification of corporeally [F.45.a] compounded sensory contact are without any basis. The nonconditioning of corporeally compounded sensory contact is without any basis. The nonorigination of corporeally compounded sensory contact is without any basis. The nonapprehensibility of corporeally compounded sensory contact is without any basis. Subhūti, the nonarising of mentally compounded sensory contact is without any basis. The nonceasing of mentally compounded sensory contact is without any basis. The nondefilement and the nonpurification of mentally compounded sensory contact are without any basis. The nonconditioning of mentally compounded sensory contact is without any basis. The nonorigination of mentally compounded sensory contact is without any basis. The nonapprehensibility of mentally compounded sensory contact is without any basis.

8.41 “Subhūti, the nonarising of the feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact is without any basis. The nonceasing of the feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact is without any basis. The nondefilement and the nonpurification of the feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact are without any basis. The nonconditioning of the feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact is without any basis. The nonorigination of the feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact is without any basis. The nonapprehensibility of the feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact is without any basis. Subhūti, the nonarising of the feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact is without any basis. The nonceasing of the feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact is without any basis. The nondefilement and the nonpurification of the feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact are without any basis. The nonconditioning of the feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact is without any basis. The nonorigination of the feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact is without any basis. The nonapprehensibility of the feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact is without any basis. Subhūti, the nonarising [F.45.b] of the feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact is without any basis. The nonceasing of the feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact is without any basis. The nondefilement and the nonpurification of the feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact are without any basis. The nonconditioning of the feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact is without any basis. The nonorigination of the feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact is without any basis. The nonapprehensibility of the feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact is without any basis. Subhūti, the nonarising of the feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact is without any basis. The nonceasing of the feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact is without any basis. The nondefilement and the nonpurification of the feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact are without any basis. The nonconditioning of the feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact is without any basis. The nonorigination of the feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact is without any basis. The nonapprehensibility of the feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact is without any basis. Subhūti, the nonarising of the feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact is without any basis. The nonceasing of the feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact is without any basis. The nondefilement and the nonpurification of the feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact are without any basis. The nonconditioning of the feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact is without any basis. The nonorigination of the feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact is without any basis. The nonapprehensibility of the feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact is without any basis. Subhūti, the nonarising of the feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact is without any basis. The nonceasing of the feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact is without any basis. The nondefilement and the nonpurification of the feelings conditioned by [F.46.a] mentally compounded sensory contact are without any basis. The nonconditioning of the feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact is without any basis. The nonorigination of the feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact is without any basis. The nonapprehensibility of the feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact is without any basis.

8.42      “Subhūti, the nonarising of the earth element is without any basis. The nonceasing of the earth element is without any basis. The nondefilement and the nonpurification of earth element are without any basis. The nonconditioning of the earth element is without any basis. The nonorigination of the earth element is without any basis. The nonapprehensibility of the earth element is without any basis. Subhūti, the nonarising of the water element is without any basis. The nonceasing of the water element is without any basis. The nondefilement and the nonpurification of water element are without any basis. The nonconditioning of the water element is without any basis. The nonorigination of the water element is without any basis. The nonapprehensibility of the water element is without any basis. Subhūti, the nonarising of the fire element is without any basis. The nonceasing of the fire element is without any basis. The nondefilement and the nonpurification of fire element are without any basis. The nonconditioning of the fire element is without any basis. The nonorigination of the fire element is without any basis. The nonapprehensibility of the fire element is without any basis. Subhūti, the nonarising of the wind element is without any basis. The nonceasing of the wind element is without any basis. The nondefilement and the nonpurification of wind element are without any basis. The nonconditioning of the wind element is without any basis. The nonorigination of the wind element is without any basis. The nonapprehensibility of the wind element is without any basis. Subhūti, [F.46.b] the nonarising of the space element is without any basis. The nonceasing of the space element is without any basis. The nondefilement and the nonpurification of space element are without any basis. The nonconditioning of the space element is without any basis. The nonorigination of the space element is without any basis. The nonapprehensibility of the space element is without any basis. Subhūti, the nonarising of the earth element is without any basis. The nonceasing of the earth element is without any basis. The nondefilement and the nonpurification of earth element are without any basis. The nonconditioning of the earth element is without any basis. The nonorigination of the earth element is without any basis. The nonapprehensibility of the earth element is without any basis.

8.43 “Subhūti, the nonarising of ignorance is without any basis. The nonceasing of ignorance is without any basis. The nondefilement and the nonpurification of ignorance are without any basis. The nonconditioning of ignorance is without any basis. The nonorigination of ignorance is without any basis. The nonapprehensibility of ignorance is without any basis. Subhūti, the nonarising of formative predispositions is without any basis. The nonceasing of formative predispositions is without any basis. The nondefilement and the nonpurification of formative predispositions are without any basis. The nonconditioning of formative predispositions is without any basis. The nonorigination of formative predispositions is without any basis. The nonapprehensibility of formative predispositions is without any basis. Subhūti, the nonarising of consciousness is without any basis. The nonceasing of consciousness is without any basis. The nondefilement and the nonpurification of consciousness are without any basis. The nonconditioning of consciousness is without any basis. The nonorigination [F.47.a] of consciousness is without any basis. The nonapprehensibility of consciousness is without any basis. Subhūti, the nonarising of name and form is without any basis. The nonceasing of name and form is without any basis. The nondefilement and the nonpurification of name and form are without any basis. The nonconditioning of name and form is without any basis. The nonorigination of name and form is without any basis. The nonapprehensibility of name and form is without any basis. Subhūti, the nonarising of the six sense fields is without any basis. The nonceasing of the six sense fields is without any basis. The nondefilement and the nonpurification of the six sense fields are without any basis. The nonconditioning of the six sense fields is without any basis. The nonorigination of the six sense fields is without any basis. The nonapprehensibility of the six sense fields is without any basis. Subhūti, the nonarising of sensory contact is without any basis. The nonceasing of sensory contact is without any basis. The nondefilement and the nonpurification of sensory contact are without any basis. The nonconditioning of sensory contact is without any basis. The nonorigination of sensory contact is without any basis. The nonapprehensibility of sensory contact is without any basis. Subhūti, the nonarising of sensation is without any basis. The nonceasing of sensation is without any basis. The nondefilement and the nonpurification of sensation are without any basis. The nonconditioning of sensation is without any basis. The nonorigination of sensation is without any basis. The nonapprehensibility of sensation is without any basis. Subhūti, the nonarising of craving is without any basis. The nonceasing of craving is without any basis. The nondefilement and the nonpurification of craving are without any basis. The nonconditioning of craving is without any basis. The nonorigination [F.47.b] of craving is without any basis. The nonapprehensibility of craving is without any basis. Subhūti, the nonarising of grasping is without any basis. The nonceasing of grasping is without any basis. The nondefilement and the nonpurification of grasping are without any basis. The nonconditioning of grasping is without any basis. The nonorigination of grasping is without any basis. The nonapprehensibility of grasping is without any basis. Subhūti, the nonarising of the rebirth process is without any basis. The nonceasing of the rebirth process is without any basis. The nondefilement and the nonpurification of the rebirth process are without any basis. The nonconditioning of the rebirth process is without any basis. The nonorigination of the rebirth process is without any basis. The nonapprehensibility of the rebirth process is without any basis. Subhūti, the nonarising of birth is without any basis. The nonceasing of birth is without any basis. The nondefilement and the nonpurification of birth are without any basis. The nonconditioning of birth is without any basis. The nonorigination of birth is without any basis. The nonapprehensibility of birth is without any basis. Subhūti, the nonarising of aging and death is without any basis. The nonceasing of aging and death is without any basis. The nondefilement and the nonpurification of aging and death are without any basis. The nonconditioning of aging and death is without any basis. The nonorigination of aging and death is without any basis. The nonapprehensibility of aging and death is without any basis.

8.44 “Subhūti, the nonarising of the perfection of generosity is without any basis. The nonceasing of the perfection of generosity is without any basis. The nondefilement and the nonpurification of the perfection of generosity are without any basis. The nonconditioning of the perfection of generosity is without any basis. The nonorigination of the perfection of generosity [F.48.a] is without any basis. The nonapprehensibility of the perfection of generosity is without any basis. Subhūti, the nonarising of the perfection of ethical discipline is without any basis. The nonceasing of the perfection of ethical discipline is without any basis. The nondefilement and the nonpurification of the perfection of ethical discipline are without any basis. The nonconditioning of the perfection of ethical discipline is without any basis. The nonorigination of the perfection of ethical discipline is without any basis. The nonapprehensibility of the perfection of ethical discipline is without any basis. Subhūti, the nonarising of the perfection of tolerance is without any basis. The nonceasing of the perfection of tolerance is without any basis. The nondefilement and the nonpurification of the perfection of tolerance are without any basis. The nonconditioning of the perfection of tolerance is without any basis. The nonorigination of the perfection of tolerance is without any basis. The nonapprehensibility of the perfection of tolerance is without any basis. Subhūti, the nonarising of the perfection of perseverance is without any basis. The nonceasing of the perfection of perseverance is without any basis. The nondefilement and the nonpurification of the perfection of perseverance are without any basis. The nonconditioning of the perfection of perseverance is without any basis. The nonorigination of the perfection of perseverance is without any basis. The nonapprehensibility of the perfection of perseverance is without any basis. Subhūti, the nonarising of the perfection of meditative concentration is without any basis. The nonceasing of the perfection of meditative concentration is without any basis. The nondefilement and the nonpurification of the perfection of meditative concentration [F.48.b] are without any basis. The nonconditioning of the perfection of meditative concentration is without any basis. The nonorigination of the perfection of meditative concentration is without any basis. The nonapprehensibility of the perfection of meditative concentration is without any basis. Subhūti, the nonarising of the perfection of wisdom is without any basis. The nonceasing of the perfection of wisdom is without any basis. The nondefilement and the nonpurification of the perfection of wisdom are without any basis. The nonconditioning of the perfection of wisdom is without any basis. The nonorigination of the perfection of wisdom is without any basis. The nonapprehensibility of the perfection of wisdom is without any basis.

8.45 “Subhūti, the nonarising of the emptiness of internal phenomena is without any basis. The nonceasing of the emptiness of internal phenomena is without any basis. The nondefilement and the nonpurification of the emptiness of internal phenomena are without any basis. The nonconditioning of the emptiness of internal phenomena is without any basis. The nonorigination of the emptiness of internal phenomena is without any basis. The nonapprehensibility of the emptiness of internal phenomena is without any basis. Subhūti, the nonarising of the emptiness of external phenomena is without any basis. The nonceasing of the emptiness of external phenomena is without any basis. The nondefilement and the nonpurification of the emptiness of external phenomena are without any basis. The nonconditioning of the emptiness of external phenomena is without any basis. The nonorigination of the emptiness of external phenomena is without any basis. The nonapprehensibility of the emptiness of external phenomena is without any basis. Subhūti, the nonarising of the emptiness of external and internal phenomena is without any basis. The nonceasing of the emptiness of external and internal phenomena is without any basis. The nondefilement and the nonpurification of the emptiness of external and internal phenomena are without any basis. The nonconditioning of the emptiness of external and internal phenomena is without any basis. The nonorigination of the emptiness [F.49.a] of external and internal phenomena is without any basis. The nonapprehensibility of the emptiness of external and internal phenomena is without any basis. Subhūti, the nonarising of the emptiness of emptiness is without any basis. The nonceasing of the emptiness of emptiness is without any basis. The nondefilement and the nonpurification of the emptiness of emptiness are without any basis. The nonconditioning of the emptiness of emptiness is without any basis. The nonorigination of the emptiness of emptiness is without any basis. The nonapprehensibility of the emptiness of emptiness is without any basis. Subhūti, the nonarising of the emptiness of great extent is without any basis. The nonceasing of the emptiness of great extent is without any basis. The nondefilement and the nonpurification of the emptiness of great extent are without any basis. The nonconditioning of the emptiness of great extent is without any basis. The nonorigination of the emptiness of great extent is without any basis. The nonapprehensibility of the emptiness of great extent is without any basis. Subhūti, the nonarising of the emptiness of ultimate reality is without any basis. The nonceasing of the emptiness of ultimate reality is without any basis. The nondefilement and the nonpurification of the emptiness of ultimate reality are without any basis. The nonconditioning of the emptiness of ultimate reality is without any basis. The nonorigination of the emptiness of ultimate reality is without any basis. The nonapprehensibility of the emptiness of ultimate reality is without any basis. Subhūti, the nonarising of the emptiness of conditioned phenomena is without any basis. The nonceasing of the emptiness of conditioned phenomena is without any basis. The nondefilement and the nonpurification of the emptiness of conditioned phenomena are without any basis. The nonconditioning of the emptiness of conditioned phenomena is without any basis. The nonorigination of the emptiness of conditioned phenomena is without any basis. The nonapprehensibility of the emptiness [F.49.b] of conditioned phenomena is without any basis. Subhūti, the nonarising of the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena is without any basis. The nonceasing of the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena is without any basis. The nondefilement and the nonpurification of the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena are without any basis. The nonconditioning of the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena is without any basis. The nonorigination of the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena is without any basis. The nonapprehensibility of the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena is without any basis. Subhūti, the nonarising of the emptiness of the unlimited is without any basis. The nonceasing of the emptiness of the unlimited is without any basis. The nondefilement and the nonpurification of the emptiness of the unlimited are without any basis. The nonconditioning of the emptiness of the unlimited is without any basis. The nonorigination of the emptiness of the unlimited is without any basis. The nonapprehensibility of the emptiness of the unlimited is without any basis. Subhūti, the nonarising of the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end is without any basis. The nonceasing of the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end is without any basis. The nondefilement and the nonpurification of the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end are without any basis. The nonconditioning of the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end is without any basis. The nonorigination of the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end is without any basis. The nonapprehensibility of the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end is without any basis. Subhūti, the nonarising of the emptiness of nonexclusion is without any basis. The nonceasing of the emptiness of nonexclusion is without any basis. The nondefilement and the nonpurification of the emptiness of nonexclusion are without any basis. The nonconditioning of the emptiness of nonexclusion is without any basis. [F.50.a] The nonorigination of the emptiness of nonexclusion is without any basis. The nonapprehensibility of the emptiness of nonexclusion is without any basis. Subhūti, the nonarising of the emptiness of inherent nature is without any basis. The nonceasing of the emptiness of inherent nature is without any basis. The nondefilement and the nonpurification of the emptiness of inherent nature are without any basis. The nonconditioning of the emptiness of inherent nature is without any basis. The nonorigination of the emptiness of inherent nature is without any basis. The nonapprehensibility of the emptiness of inherent nature is without any basis. Subhūti, the nonarising of the emptiness of all phenomena is without any basis. The nonceasing of the emptiness of all phenomena is without any basis. The nondefilement and the nonpurification of the emptiness of all phenomena are without any basis. The nonconditioning of the emptiness of all phenomena is without any basis. The nonorigination of the emptiness of all phenomena is without any basis. The nonapprehensibility of the emptiness of all phenomena is without any basis. Subhūti, the nonarising of the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics is without any basis. The nonceasing of the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics is without any basis. The nondefilement and the nonpurification of the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics are without any basis. The nonconditioning of the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics is without any basis. The nonorigination of the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics is without any basis. The nonapprehensibility of the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics is without any basis. Subhūti, the nonarising of the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended is without any basis. The nonceasing of the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended is without any basis. The nondefilement and the nonpurification of the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended are without any basis. The nonconditioning of the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended [F.50.b] is without any basis. The nonorigination of the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended is without any basis. The nonapprehensibility of the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended is without any basis. Subhūti, the nonarising of the emptiness of nonentities is without any basis. The nonceasing of the emptiness of nonentities is without any basis. The nondefilement and the nonpurification of the emptiness of nonentities are without any basis. The nonconditioning of the emptiness of nonentities is without any basis. The nonorigination of the emptiness of nonentities is without any basis. The nonapprehensibility of the emptiness of nonentities is without any basis. Subhūti, the nonarising of the emptiness of essential nature is without any basis. The nonceasing of the emptiness of essential nature is without any basis. The nondefilement and the nonpurification of the emptiness of essential nature are without any basis. The nonconditioning of the emptiness of essential nature is without any basis. The nonorigination of the emptiness of essential nature is without any basis. The nonapprehensibility of the emptiness of essential nature is without any basis. Subhūti, the nonarising of the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities is without any basis. The nonceasing of the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities is without any basis. The nondefilement and the nonpurification of the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities are without any basis. The nonconditioning of the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities is without any basis. The nonorigination of the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities is without any basis. The nonapprehensibility of the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities is without any basis.

8.46      “Subhūti, the nonarising of the applications of mindfulness is without any basis. The nonceasing of the applications of mindfulness is without any basis. The nondefilement and the nonpurification of the applications of mindfulness are without any basis. The nonconditioning of the applications of mindfulness [F.51.a] is without any basis. The nonorigination of the applications of mindfulness is without any basis. The nonapprehensibility of the applications of mindfulness is without any basis. Subhūti, the nonarising of the correct exertions is without any basis. The nonceasing of the correct exertions is without any basis. The nondefilement and the nonpurification of the correct exertions are without any basis. The nonconditioning of the correct exertions is without any basis. The nonorigination of the correct exertions is without any basis. The nonapprehensibility of the correct exertions is without any basis. Subhūti, the nonarising of the supports for miraculous ability is without any basis. The nonceasing of the supports for miraculous ability is without any basis. The nondefilement and the nonpurification of the supports for miraculous ability are without any basis. The nonconditioning of the supports for miraculous ability is without any basis. The nonorigination of the supports for miraculous ability is without any basis. The nonapprehensibility of the supports for miraculous ability is without any basis. Subhūti, the nonarising of the faculties is without any basis. The nonceasing of the faculties is without any basis. The nondefilement and the nonpurification of the faculties are without any basis. The nonconditioning of the faculties is without any basis. The nonorigination of the faculties is without any basis. The nonapprehensibility of the faculties is without any basis. Subhūti, the nonarising of the powers is without any basis. The nonceasing of the powers is without any basis. The nondefilement and the nonpurification of the powers are without any basis. The nonconditioning of the powers is without any basis. The nonorigination of the powers [F.51.b] is without any basis. The nonapprehensibility of the powers is without any basis. Subhūti, the nonarising of the branches of enlightenment is without any basis. The nonceasing of the branches of enlightenment is without any basis. The nondefilement and the nonpurification of the branches of enlightenment are without any basis. The nonconditioning of the branches of enlightenment is without any basis. The nonorigination of the branches of enlightenment is without any basis. The nonapprehensibility of the branches of enlightenment is without any basis. Subhūti, the nonarising of the noble eightfold path is without any basis. The nonceasing of the noble eightfold path is without any basis. The nondefilement and the nonpurification of the noble eightfold path are without any basis. The nonconditioning of the noble eightfold path is without any basis. The nonorigination of the noble eightfold path is without any basis. The nonapprehensibility of the noble eightfold path is without any basis.

8.47 “Subhūti, the nonarising of the truths of the noble ones is without any basis. The nonceasing of the truths of the noble ones is without any basis. The nondefilement and the nonpurification of the truths of the noble ones are without any basis. The nonconditioning of the truths of the noble ones is without any basis. The nonorigination of the truths of the noble ones is without any basis. The nonapprehensibility of the truths of the noble ones is without any basis. Subhūti, the nonarising of the meditative concentrations is without any basis. The nonceasing of the meditative concentrations is without any basis. The nondefilement and the nonpurification of the meditative concentrations are without any basis. The nonconditioning of the meditative concentrations [F.52.a] is without any basis. The nonorigination of the meditative concentrations is without any basis. The nonapprehensibility of the meditative concentrations is without any basis. Subhūti, the nonarising of the immeasurable attitudes is without any basis. The nonceasing of the immeasurable attitudes is without any basis. The nondefilement and the nonpurification of the immeasurable attitudes are without any basis. The nonconditioning of the immeasurable attitudes is without any basis. The nonorigination of the immeasurable attitudes is without any basis. The nonapprehensibility of the immeasurable attitudes is without any basis. Subhūti, the nonarising of the formless absorptions is without any basis. The nonceasing of the formless absorptions is without any basis. The nondefilement and the nonpurification of the formless absorptions are without any basis. The nonconditioning of the formless absorptions is without any basis. The nonorigination of the formless absorptions is without any basis. The nonapprehensibility of the formless absorptions is without any basis. Subhūti, the nonarising of the liberations is without any basis. The nonceasing of the liberations is without any basis. The nondefilement and the nonpurification of the liberations are without any basis. The nonconditioning of the liberations is without any basis. The nonorigination of the liberations is without any basis. The nonapprehensibility of the liberations is without any basis. Subhūti, the nonarising of the serial steps of meditative absorption is without any basis. The nonceasing of the serial steps of meditative absorption is without any basis. The nondefilement [F.52.b] and the nonpurification of the serial steps of meditative absorption are without any basis. The nonconditioning of the serial steps of meditative absorption is without any basis. The nonorigination of the serial steps of meditative absorption is without any basis. The nonapprehensibility of the serial steps of meditative absorption is without any basis. Subhūti, the nonarising of the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation is without any basis. The nonceasing of the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation is without any basis. The nondefilement and the nonpurification of the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation are without any basis. The nonconditioning of the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation is without any basis. The nonorigination of the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation is without any basis. The nonapprehensibility of the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation is without any basis. Subhūti, the nonarising of the extrasensory powers is without any basis. The nonceasing of the extrasensory powers is without any basis. The nondefilement and the nonpurification of the extrasensory powers are without any basis. The nonconditioning of the extrasensory powers is without any basis. The nonorigination of the extrasensory powers is without any basis. The nonapprehensibility of the extrasensory powers is without any basis. Subhūti, the nonarising of the meditative stabilities is without any basis. The nonceasing of the meditative stabilities is without any basis. The nondefilement and the nonpurification [F.53.a] of the meditative stabilities are without any basis. The nonconditioning of the meditative stabilities is without any basis. The nonorigination of the meditative stabilities is without any basis. The nonapprehensibility of the meditative stabilities is without any basis. Subhūti, the nonarising of the dhāraṇī gateways is without any basis. The nonceasing of the dhāraṇī gateways is without any basis. The nondefilement and the nonpurification of the dhāraṇī gateways are without any basis. The nonconditioning of the dhāraṇī gateways is without any basis. The nonorigination of the dhāraṇī gateways is without any basis. The nonapprehensibility of the dhāraṇī gateways is without any basis.

8.48 “Subhūti, the nonarising of the powers of the tathāgatas is without any basis. The nonceasing of the powers of the tathāgatas is without any basis. The nondefilement and the nonpurification of the powers of the tathāgatas are without any basis. The nonconditioning of the powers of the tathāgatas is without any basis. The nonorigination of the powers of the tathāgatas is without any basis. The nonapprehensibility of the powers of the tathāgatas is without any basis. Subhūti, the nonarising of the fearlessnesses is without any basis. The nonceasing of the fearlessnesses is without any basis. The nondefilement and the nonpurification of the fearlessnesses are without any basis. The nonconditioning of the fearlessnesses is without any basis. The nonorigination of the fearlessnesses is without any basis. The nonapprehensibility of the fearlessnesses is without any basis. Subhūti, the nonarising of the kinds of exact knowledge is without any basis. The nonceasing of the kinds of exact knowledge is [F.53.b] without any basis. The nondefilement and the nonpurification of the kinds of exact knowledge are without any basis. The nonconditioning of the kinds of exact knowledge is without any basis. The nonorigination of the kinds of exact knowledge is without any basis. The nonapprehensibility of the kinds of exact knowledge is without any basis. Subhūti, the nonarising of great loving kindness is without any basis. The nonceasing of great loving kindness is without any basis. The nondefilement and the nonpurification of great loving kindness are without any basis. The nonconditioning of great loving kindness is without any basis. The nonorigination of great loving kindness is without any basis. The nonapprehensibility of great loving kindness is without any basis. Subhūti, the nonarising of great compassion is without any basis. The nonceasing of great compassion is without any basis. The nondefilement and the nonpurification of great compassion are without any basis. The nonconditioning of great compassion is without any basis. The nonorigination of great compassion is without any basis. The nonapprehensibility of great compassion is without any basis. Subhūti, the nonarising of the distinct qualities of the buddhas is without any basis. The nonceasing of the distinct qualities of the buddhas is without any basis. The nondefilement and the nonpurification of the distinct qualities of the buddhas are without any basis. The nonconditioning of the distinct qualities of the buddhas is without any basis. The nonorigination of the distinct qualities of the buddhas is without any basis. The nonapprehensibility of the distinct qualities of the buddhas is without any basis.

8.49 “Subhūti, just as a mental image of the utter purity of physical forms is without any basis; a mental image of the utter purity of [F.54.a] feelings is without any basis; a mental image of the utter purity of perceptions is without any basis; a mental image of the utter purity of formative predispositions is without any basis; and a mental image of the utter purity of consciousness is without any basis, in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom.

8.50 “Subhūti, just as a mental image of the utter purity of the eyes is without any basis; a mental image of the utter purity of the ears is without any basis; a mental image of the utter purity of the nose is without any basis; a mental image of the utter purity of the tongue is without any basis; a mental image of the utter purity of the body is without any basis; and a mental image of the utter purity of the mental faculty is without any basis, in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom.

8.51 “Subhūti, just as a mental image of the utter purity of sights is without any basis; a mental image of the utter purity of sounds is without any basis; a mental image of the utter purity of odors is without any basis; a mental image of the utter purity of tastes is without any basis; a mental image of the utter purity of tangibles is without any basis; and a mental image of the utter purity of the mental phenomena is without any basis, in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom.

8.52 “Subhūti, just as a mental image of the utter purity of visual consciousness is without any basis; a mental image of the utter purity of auditory consciousness is without any basis; a mental image [F.54.b] of the utter purity of olfactory consciousness is without any basis; a mental image of the utter purity of gustatory consciousness is without any basis; a mental image of the utter purity of tactile consciousness is without any basis; and a mental image of the utter purity of mental consciousness is without any basis, in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom.

8.53 “Subhūti, just as a mental image of the utter purity of visually compounded sensory contact is without any basis; a mental image of the utter purity of aurally compounded sensory contact is without any basis; a mental image of the utter purity of nasally compounded sensory contact is without any basis; a mental image of the utter purity of lingually compounded sensory contact is without any basis; a mental image of the utter purity of corporeally compounded sensory contact is without any basis; and a mental image of the utter purity of mentally compounded sensory contact is without any basis, in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom.

8.54 “Subhūti, just as a mental image of the utter purity of feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact is without any basis; a mental image of the utter purity of feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact is without any basis; a mental image of the utter purity of feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact is without any basis; a mental image of the utter purity of feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact is without any basis; a mental image of the utter purity of feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact is without any basis; and a mental image of the utter purity of feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact is without any basis, [F.55.a] in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom.

8.55 “Subhūti, just as a mental image of the utter purity of the earth element is without any basis; a mental image of the utter purity of the water element is without any basis; a mental image of the utter purity of the fire element is without any basis; a mental image of the utter purity of the wind element is without any basis; a mental image of the utter purity of the space element is without any basis; and a mental image of the utter purity of the consciousness element is without any basis, in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom.

8.56 “Subhūti, just as a mental image of the utter purity of ignorance is without any basis; a mental image of the utter purity of formative predispositions is without any basis; a mental image of the utter purity of consciousness is without any basis; a mental image of the utter purity of name and form is without any basis; a mental image of the utter purity of the six sense fields is without any basis; a mental image of the utter purity of sensory contact is without any basis; a mental image of the utter purity of sensation is without any basis; a mental image of the utter purity of craving is without any basis; a mental image of the utter purity of grasping is without any basis; a mental image of the utter purity of the rebirth process is without any basis; a mental image of the utter purity of birth is without any basis; and a mental image of the utter purity of aging and death is without any basis, in the same way,

Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, [F.55.b] in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom. [B5]

8.57 “Subhūti, just as a mental image of the utter purity of the perfection of generosity is without any basis; a mental image of the utter purity of the perfection of ethical discipline is without any basis; a mental image of the utter purity of the perfection of tolerance is without any basis; a mental image of the utter purity of the perfection of perseverance is without any basis; a mental image of the utter purity of the perfection of meditative concentration is without any basis; and a mental image of the utter purity of the perfection of wisdom is without any basis, in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom.

8.58 “Subhūti, just as a mental image of the utter purity of the emptiness of internal phenomena is without any basis; a mental image of the utter purity of the emptiness of external phenomena is without any basis; a mental image of the utter purity of the emptiness of external and internal phenomena is without any basis; a mental image of the utter purity of the emptiness of emptiness is without any basis; a mental image of the utter purity of the emptiness of great extent is without any basis; a mental image of the utter purity of the emptiness of ultimate reality is without any basis; a mental image of the utter purity of the emptiness of conditioned phenomena is without any basis; a mental image of the utter purity of the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena is without any basis; a mental image of the utter purity of the emptiness of the unlimited is without any basis; a mental image of the utter purity of the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end is without any [F.56.a] basis; a mental image of the utter purity of the emptiness of nonexclusion is without any basis; a mental image of the utter purity of the emptiness of inherent nature is without any basis; a mental image of the utter purity of the emptiness of all phenomena is without any basis; a mental image of the utter purity of the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics is without any basis; a mental image of the utter purity of the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended is without any basis; a mental image of the utter purity of the emptiness of nonentities is without any basis; a mental image of the utter purity of the emptiness of essential nature is without any basis; and a mental image of the utter purity of the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities is without any basis, in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom.

- 8.59       “Subhūti, just as a mental image of the utter purity of the applications of mindfulness is without any basis; a mental image of the utter purity of the correct exertions is without any basis; a mental image of the utter purity of the supports for miraculous ability is without any basis; a mental image of the utter purity of the faculties is without any basis; a mental image of the utter purity of the powers is without any basis; a mental image of the utter purity of the branches of enlightenment is without any basis; and a mental image of the utter purity of the noble eightfold path is without any basis, in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom.
- 8.60       “Subhūti, just as a mental image of the utter purity of the truths of the noble ones is without any basis; a mental image of the utter purity of the meditative concentrations is without any basis; a mental image of the utter purity [F.56.b] of the immeasurable attitudes is without any basis; a mental image of the utter purity of the formless absorptions is without any basis; a mental image of the utter purity of the liberations is without any basis; a mental image of the utter purity of the serial steps of meditative absorption is without any basis; a mental image of the utter purity of the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation is without any basis; a mental image of the utter purity of the extrasensory powers is without any basis; a mental image of the utter purity of the meditative stabilities is without any basis; and a mental image of the utter purity of the dhāraṇī gateways is without any basis, in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom.
- 8.61       “Subhūti, just as a mental image of the utter purity of the powers of the tathāgatas is without any basis; a mental image of the utter purity of the fearlessnesses is without any basis; a mental image of the utter purity of the kinds of exact knowledge is without any basis; a mental image of the utter purity of great compassion is without any basis; and a mental image of the utter purity of the distinct qualities of the buddhas is without any basis, in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom.
- 8.62       “Subhūti, just as a mental image of the utter purity of the self is without any basis on account of the nonexistence of a self, in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom. Subhūti, just as a mental image of the utter purity of a being is without any basis on account of the [F.57.a] nonexistence of a being, in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom. Subhūti, just as a mental image of the utter purity of a life form is without any basis on account of the nonexistence of a life form, in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom. Subhūti, just as a mental image of the utter purity of life is without any basis on account of the nonexistence of life, in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom. Subhūti, just as a mental image of the utter purity of an individual is without any basis on account of the nonexistence of an individual, in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom. Subhūti, just as a mental image of the utter purity of a person is without any basis on account of the nonexistence of a person, in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom. Subhūti, just as a mental image of the utter purity of one born of Manu is without any basis on account of the nonexistence of one born of Manu, in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom. Subhūti, just as a mental image of the utter purity of a child of Manu is without any basis on account of the nonexistence of a child of Manu, in the same way, [F.57.b] Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom. Subhūti, just as a mental image of the utter purity of an agent is without any basis on account of the nonexistence of an agent, in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom. Subhūti, just as a mental image of the utter purity of an experiencer is without any basis on account of the nonexistence of an experiencer, in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom. Subhūti, just as a mental image of the utter purity of a knower is without any basis on account of the nonexistence of a knower, in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom. Subhūti, just as a mental image of the utter purity of a viewer is without any basis on account of the nonexistence of a viewer, in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom.

- 8.63 “Subhūti, just as, when the disk of the sun rises, darkness is without any basis, in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom.
- 8.64 “Subhūti, just as, during the eon of conflagration,<sup>362</sup> all types of conditioned phenomena are without any basis, in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, [F.58.a] in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom.
- 8.65 “Subhūti, just as degenerate morality in the ethical discipline of the tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas is without any basis, in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom. Subhūti, just as distraction in the meditative stability of the tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas is without any basis, in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom. Subhūti, just as intellectual confusion in the wisdom of the tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas is without any basis, in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom. Subhūti, just as nonliberation in the liberation of the tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas is without any basis, in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom. Subhūti, just as the absence of seeing the transcendental knowledge of liberation in the seeing of the transcendental knowledge of liberation of the tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas is without any basis, in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing [F.58.b] the perfection of wisdom.
- 8.66 “Subhūti, just as the light of the sun and moon is without any basis, in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom. Subhūti, just as the light of the planets, stars, gemstones, and lightning bolts is without any basis, in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom.
- 8.67 “Subhūti, just as the light of the gods of the Cāturmahārājika realm is without any basis, in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom. Subhūti, just as the light of the gods of the Trayastrīṃśa realm is without any basis, in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom. Subhūti, just as the light of the gods of the Yāma realm is without any basis, in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom. Subhūti, just as the light of the gods of the Tuṣita realm is without any basis, in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom. Subhūti, just as the light of the gods of the Nirmāṇarati realm is without any basis, in the same way, Subhūti, [F.59.a] there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom. Subhūti, just as the light of the gods of the Paranirmitavaśavartin realm is without any basis, in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom.

8.68 “Subhūti, just as the light of the gods of the Brahmakāyika realm is without any basis, in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom. Subhūti, just as the light of the gods of the Brahmāpurohita realm is without any basis, in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom. Subhūti, just as the light of the gods of the Brahmāpariṣadya realm is without any basis, in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom. Subhūti, just as the light of the gods of the Mahābrahmā realm is without any basis, in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom.

8.69 “Subhūti, just as the light of the gods of the Ābha realm is without any basis, in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom. Subhūti, just as the light of the gods of the Parīttābha realm is without any basis, in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva [F.59.b] great being practicing the perfection of wisdom. Subhūti, just as the light of the gods of the Apramāṇābha realm is without any basis, in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom. Subhūti, just as the light of the gods of the Ābhāsvara realm is without any

- basis, in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom.
- 8.70 “Subhūti, just as the light of the gods of the Śubha realm is without any basis, in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom. Subhūti, just as the light of the gods of the Parīttasubha realm is without any basis, in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom. Subhūti, just as the light of the gods of the Apramāṇasubha realm is without any basis, in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom. Subhūti, just as the light of the gods of the Śubhakṛtsna realm is without any basis, in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom.
- 8.71 “Subhūti, just as the light of the gods of the Vṛha realm is without any basis, in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom. [F.60.a] Subhūti, just as the light of the gods of the Parīttavṛha realm is without any basis, in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom. Subhūti, just as the light of the gods of the Apramāṇavṛha realm is without any basis, in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom.
- 8.72 “Subhūti, just as the light of the gods of the Śuddhāvāsa realms is without any basis, in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom.
- 8.73 “Subhūti, just as the light of bodhisattva great beings is without any basis, in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom. Subhūti, just as the light of the tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas is without any basis, in the same way, Subhūti, there is no actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva, in the sense of a bodhisattva great being practicing the perfection of wisdom.
- 8.74 “If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because all those phenomena—that enlightenment, that bodhisattva, and that actual entity denoted by the word bodhisattva—are neither conjoined nor disjoined, and are immaterial, impossible to indicate, unobstructed, and have only one defining characteristic, which is to say, they are without defining characteristics. Subhūti, bodhisattva great beings should train in the fact that all phenomena are falsehoods.<sup>363</sup> [F.60.b] Bodhisattva great beings should know all phenomena.”

8.75 “Blessed Lord, what are all phenomena? Blessed Lord, how do bodhisattva great beings train in falsehoods? How will bodhisattva great beings know all phenomena?”

8.76 “Subhūti,” replied the Blessed One, “regarding ‘all phenomena,’ they are virtuous or nonvirtuous, determinate or indeterminate, mundane or supramundane, contaminated or uncontaminated, conditioned or unconditioned, a basic transgression or not a basic transgression, and common or uncommon. Subhūti, these are called all phenomena. Bodhisattva great beings should train in the fact that all those phenomena are false. Those are all the phenomena that bodhisattva great beings should indeed know.”

8.77 “Blessed Lord, what are the mundane virtuous phenomena?”

“Subhūti,” replied the Blessed One, “regarding ‘mundane virtuous phenomena,’ they are respect for one’s father, respect for one’s mother, respect for a virtuous ascetic, respect for those born as priests, acts of service undertaken on behalf of elderly family members, bases of meritorious deeds originating from generosity, bases of meritorious deeds originating from ethical discipline and originating from meditation, and bases from having carried out one’s assigned duty,<sup>364</sup> the path of the ten virtuous actions, the nine mundane perceptions—namely, the perception of [a corpse as] bloated, the perception of it as worm-infested, [F.61.a] the perception of it as putrefied, the perception of it as bloodied, the perception of it as black and blue, the perception of it as chewed on, the perception of it as dismembered, the perception of it as bones, and the perception of it as immolated—the four mundane meditative concentrations, the four immeasurable attitudes, the four formless absorptions, the five extrasensory powers, and the ten mundane mindfulnesses—namely, mindfulness of the Buddha, mindfulness of the Dharma, mindfulness of the Saṅgha, mindfulness of ethical discipline, mindfulness of giving away, mindfulness of the gods, mindfulness of the inhalation and exhalation of breath, mindfulness of the body, mindfulness of disillusionment, and mindfulness of death. These are called mundane virtuous phenomena.”

8.78 “Blessed Lord, what are the mundane nonvirtuous phenomena?”

“The mundane nonvirtuous phenomena are the paths of the ten nonvirtuous actions,” replied the Blessed One. “That is to say, Subhūti, the slaying of living creatures is a mundane nonvirtuous phenomenon. Stealing, Subhūti, is a mundane nonvirtuous phenomenon. Sexual misconduct because of lust, Subhūti, is a mundane nonvirtuous phenomenon. Lying, Subhūti, is a mundane nonvirtuous phenomenon. Back-biting, Subhūti, is a mundane nonvirtuous phenomenon. Verbal abuse,<sup>365</sup> Subhūti, is a mundane nonvirtuous phenomenon. Irresponsible chatter, Subhūti, is a mundane nonvirtuous phenomenon. Coveting, Subhūti, is a mundane nonvirtuous phenomenon. Bearing malice, Subhūti, is a mundane nonvirtuous phenomenon. Wrong view, Subhūti, is a mundane nonvirtuous phenomenon. And, Subhūti, anger, holding a grudge, hypocrisy, nursing pent-up anger, violence, jealousy, miserliness, pride, [F.61.b] and perverse pride<sup>366</sup>—these are mundane nonvirtuous phenomena.”

8.79 “Blessed Lord, what are the mundane indeterminate phenomena?”

“Physical actions are indeterminate,”<sup>367</sup> replied the Blessed One. “Verbal actions are indeterminate. Mental actions are indeterminate. The four primary elements are indeterminate. The five sense faculties are indeterminate. The six sense fields are indeterminate. The four formless absorptions<sup>368</sup> are indeterminate. The aggregates are indeterminate. The sensory elements are indeterminate. The sense fields are indeterminate. All the maturation are indeterminate. Subhūti, these are called mundane indeterminate phenomena.”

8.80 “Blessed Lord, what are the mundane phenomena?”

“Subhūti,” replied the Blessed One, “regarding those called ‘mundane phenomena,’ they are the five aggregates, the twelve sense fields, the eighteen sensory elements, the path of the ten virtuous actions, the four meditative concentrations, the four immeasurable attitudes, the four formless absorptions, the five extrasensory powers, and whatever other mundane phenomena there may be that are not supramundane phenomena. These are called mundane phenomena.”

8.81 “Blessed Lord, what are the supramundane phenomena?”

“Subhūti,” replied the Blessed One, “regarding those called ‘supramundane phenomena,’ they are the four applications of mindfulness, the four correct exertions, the four supports for miraculous abilities, the five faculties, the five powers, the seven branches of enlightenment, and the noble eightfold path; the emptiness gateway to liberation, [F.62.a] signlessness gateway to liberation, and wishlessness gateway to liberation; the faculty of coming to fully understand what has not been understood, the faculty of fully understanding, and the faculty of knowing one has fully understood,<sup>369</sup> the meditative stability with an initial mental application and with a sustained mental application, the meditative stability without an initial mental application but with just a sustained mental application, and the meditative stability without an initial mental application and without a sustained mental application;<sup>370</sup> knowledge, freedom, mindfulness, alertness, and appropriate attention; and the eight liberations.

8.82 “If you ask what these eight are, those with physical forms observe physical forms. This is the first liberation. Those with the perception of no internal physical forms observe external physical forms. This is the second liberation. They are intent on pleasant states. This is the third liberation. Having completely transcended the perception of physical forms so that perceptions of obstruction have subsided, those who do not direct their attention to perceptions of diversity achieve and dwell in the sphere of infinite space, thinking, ‘Space is infinite.’ This is the fourth liberation. Having completely transcended the sphere of infinite space in all respects, they achieve and dwell in the sphere of infinite consciousness, thinking, ‘Consciousness is infinite.’ This is the fifth liberation. Having completely transcended the sphere of infinite consciousness in all respects, they achieve and dwell in the sphere of nothing-at-all, thinking, ‘There is nothing at all.’ This is the sixth liberation. Having completely transcended the sphere of nothing-at-all in all respects, they achieve and dwell in the sphere of neither perception nor nonperception. This is the seventh liberation. Having completely transcended the sphere of neither perception nor nonperception in all respects, [F.62.b] they achieve and dwell in the cessation of perceptions and feelings. This is the eighth liberation. Those are the eight liberations.

8.83 “And there are the nine serial steps of meditative absorption. If you ask what these nine are, they are as follows. [Practitioners] achieve and maintain the first meditative concentration that is detached from sense objects, detached from negative and nonvirtuous attributes, has an initial mental application and a sustained mental application, and is endowed with the joy and the bliss that arise from detachment. Having pacified the initial mental application and the sustained mental application, with inner serene confidence—which is to say, a mind that has become single-pointed—they achieve and maintain the second meditative concentration endowed with the joy and bliss that arise from meditative stability. On account of having no attachment to the joy, dwelling with mindfulness and alertness in equanimity they experience the bliss with their bodies and achieve and maintain the third meditative concentration devoid of joy about which the noble ones say, ‘They are mindful, abiding in bliss, and equanimous.’ On account of having earlier abandoned the bliss, abandoned suffering, and caused mental happiness and mental unhappiness to subside, they achieve and maintain the fourth meditative concentration without bliss and suffering, and in which equanimity and mindfulness are utterly purified. Having completely transcended the perception of physical forms so that perceptions of obstruction have subsided, those who do not direct their attention to perceptions of diversity achieve and maintain the sphere of infinite space, thinking, 'Space is infinite.' Having completely transcended the sphere of infinite space in all respects, [F.63.a] they achieve and maintain the sphere of infinite consciousness, thinking, 'Consciousness is infinite.' Having completely transcended the sphere of infinite consciousness in all respects, they achieve and maintain the sphere of nothing-at-all, thinking, 'There is nothing at all.' Having completely transcended the sphere of nothing-at-all in all respects, they achieve and dwell in the sphere of neither perception nor nonperception. Having completely transcended the sphere of neither perception nor nonperception in all respects, they achieve and maintain the cessation of perceptions and feelings.

8.84 "So, those nine serial steps of meditative absorption, and the emptiness of internal phenomena, the emptiness of external phenomena, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, the emptiness of emptiness, the emptiness of great extent, the emptiness of ultimate reality, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, the emptiness of the unlimited, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, the emptiness of nonexclusion, the emptiness of inherent nature, the emptiness of all phenomena, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, the emptiness of nonentities, the emptiness of essential nature, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities, as well as the ten powers of the tathāgatas, the four fearlessnesses, the four kinds of exact knowledge, and the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas—these are called supramundane phenomena."

8.85 "Blessed Lord, what are the contaminated phenomena?"

"Subhūti," replied the Blessed One, "regarding those called 'contaminated phenomena,' they are the five aggregates, the twelve sense fields, [F.63.b] the eighteen sensory elements, the four meditative concentrations, the four immeasurable attitudes, the four formless absorptions, and the five extrasensory powers. These are called contaminated phenomena."

8.86 "Blessed Lord, what are the uncontaminated phenomena?"

"Subhūti," replied the Blessed One, "regarding those called 'uncontaminated phenomena,' they are the four applications of mindfulness, the four correct exertions, the four supports for miraculous abilities, the five faculties, the five powers, the seven branches of enlightenment, and the noble eightfold path, and the four truths of the noble ones, the eight liberations, the nine serial steps of meditative absorption, emptiness, signlessness, wishlessness, all the meditative stabilities, the dhāraṇī gateways, the ten powers of the tathāgatas, the four fearlessnesses, the four kinds of exact knowledge, great loving kindness, great compassion, and the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas. These are called uncontaminated phenomena.”

8.87 “Blessed Lord, what are the conditioned phenomena?”

“Subhūti,” replied the Blessed One, “regarding those called ‘conditioned phenomena,’ they are the realm of desire, the realm of form, the realm of formlessness, and the other phenomena apart from these that are included in the sphere of conditioned phenomena—the four applications of mindfulness, the four correct exertions, the four supports for miraculous abilities, the five faculties, the five powers, the seven branches of enlightenment, and the noble eightfold path, and the four truths of the noble ones, the four meditative concentrations, the four immeasurable attitudes, the four [F.64.a] formless absorptions, the eight liberations, the nine serial steps of meditative absorption, emptiness, signlessness, wishlessness, the five extrasensory powers, the six perfections, all the emptinesses, all the meditative stabilities, all the dhāraṇī gateways, the ten powers of the tathāgatas, the four fearlessnesses, the four kinds of exact knowledge, great loving kindness, great compassion, and the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas. These are called conditioned phenomena.”

8.88 “Blessed Lord, what are the unconditioned phenomena?”

“Subhūti,” replied the Blessed One, “regarding those called ‘unconditioned phenomena,’ they are those that do not arise, disintegrate, and transform, which is to say, the extinction of desire, the extinction of hatred, the extinction of delusion, the real nature, the unmistakable real nature, the one and only real nature, the reality of phenomena, the realm of phenomena, the maturity of phenomena, the realm of the inconceivable, and the very limit of reality. These, Subhūti, are called unconditioned phenomena.”

8.89 “Blessed Lord, what are the common phenomena?”

“Subhūti,” replied the Blessed One, “regarding those called ‘common phenomena,’ they are the four meditative concentrations, the four immeasurable attitudes, the four formless absorptions, and the five extrasensory powers. These are called phenomena shared in common with ordinary persons.”

8.90 “Blessed Lord, what are the uncommon phenomena?”

“Subhūti,” replied the Blessed One, “regarding those called ‘uncommon phenomena,’ they are the four applications of mindfulness, the four correct exertions, the four supports for miraculous abilities, the five faculties, the five powers, the [F.64.b] seven branches of enlightenment, and the noble eightfold path, and the four truths of the noble ones, the eight liberations, the nine serial steps of meditative absorption, emptiness, signlessness, wishlessness, all the meditative stabilities, all the dhāraṇī gateways, the ten powers of the tathāgatas, the four fearlessnesses, the four kinds of exact knowledge, great loving kindness, great compassion, and the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas. These are called uncommon phenomena.”

8.91 “Since bodhisattva great beings who practice the perfection of wisdom are without ideation, they should not become attached to any of those phenomena that are empty of their own defining characteristics. Since they are without ideation and without conceptual thought, they should comprehend all phenomena in accordance with nonduality.”

8.92 Then Venerable Subhūti asked the Blessed One, “Blessed Lord, why, when you say ‘bodhisattva great beings,’ do you call bodhisattvas ‘great beings’?”

8.93 “Subhūti,” replied the Blessed One, “bodhisattvas are called great beings because they will lead a great number of beings with certainty to consummation.”<sup>371</sup>

8.94 “Blessed Lord, who are such a great number of beings with certainty, such a great number of beings with certainty, that bodhisattva great beings will lead to consummation?”

8.95 “Subhūti,” replied the Blessed One, “regarding that great number of beings—those on the level of the spiritual family, those who are the eighth, those who have entered the stream, once-returners, non-returners, arhats, [F.65.a] pratyekabuddhas, and bodhisattvas who have initially set their minds on enlightenment, up to bodhisattva great beings who dwell on the level at which progress has become irreversible—they, Subhūti, are called the great number of beings with certainty. Those bodhisattva great beings will lead such beings as those to consummation. There the bodhisattva great beings’ setting of the vajra-like mind on enlightenment is called the consummation of the great number of beings with certainty.”

8.96 “Blessed Lord, what is this setting of the vajra-like mind on enlightenment?”

“Here, Subhūti,” replied the Blessed One, “bodhisattva great beings set their minds on enlightenment, thinking, ‘I should don armor for the sake of all beings in inestimable saṃsāra. I should renounce all possessions. I should develop equanimity toward all beings.’<sup>372</sup> I should enable all beings to attain final nirvāṇa by means of the three vehicles. I should understand that despite enabling all beings to attain final nirvāṇa, since there are indeed no beings who will attain final nirvāṇa, all phenomena are nonarising and unceasing. I should practice the six perfections with the unadulterated<sup>373</sup> mind of all-aspect omniscience. I should train in the realization of the [ultimate] attribute that is followed everywhere by completion. I should comprehend the accomplishment of the attributes in a single principle.<sup>374</sup> I should train in order to achieve all the inestimable attributes.’ They set their mind in that way. Subhūti, that is the bodhisattva great beings' setting of the vajra-like mind on enlightenment. [F.65.b] Keeping to it, without apprehending anything, bodhisattva great beings lead the great number of beings with certainty to consummation.

8.97 “Moreover, Subhūti, bodhisattva great beings set their minds in this way: ‘For the sake of all those beings I should experience all those feelings of suffering, the suffering that the denizens of the hells, the animal realm, and the world of Yama, as many as there are, feel.’ On top of that,<sup>375</sup> bodhisattva great beings set their minds in this way, thinking, ‘Even for the sake of each being, individually, over many hundreds of thousands of tens of millions of billions of eons, I should experience all those sufferings of the denizens of the hells as long as a being has not attained final nirvāṇa in the expanse of nirvāṇa where no residue of the aggregates is left behind.’ In just that way, ‘For the sake of all beings, I should also experience all those sufferings of the denizens of the hells as long as all beings have not passed into final nirvāṇa in the expanse of nirvāṇa where no residue of the aggregates is left behind.’ And from then on, they will set their mind, thinking, ‘For my own sake, I should plant the roots of virtue, and, after many hundreds of thousands of tens of millions of billions of eons accumulating manifold provisions of enlightenment, I should fully awaken to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment.’ Subhūti, that is the bodhisattva great beings' setting of the vajra-like mind. Keeping to it, without apprehending anything, bodhisattva great beings lead the great number of beings with certainty to consummation.

8.98 “Moreover, Subhūti, bodhisattva great [F.66.a] beings should always and uninterruptedly develop a sublime mind, a sublime mind on account of which all beings will be led to consummation.<sup>376</sup> In this regard, the sublime mind of bodhisattva great beings is, from the time when they first set their mind on enlightenment, not having a greedy mind, not having a hateful mind, not having a deluded mind, not setting their mind on harming, not having a śrāvaka's mind, and not having a pratyekabuddha's mind. This is the sublime mind of bodhisattva great beings. Through that sublime mind they lead all beings to their consummation, but still they should not give rise to conceits because of that.

8.99 “Moreover, Subhūti, bodhisattva great beings should have an unshakeable mind. In this regard, the unshakeable mind of bodhisattva great beings is attention turned toward all-aspect omniscience without giving rise to conceit because of that. This is the unshakeable mind of bodhisattva great beings. Through that, without apprehending anything, they will lead all beings to consummation.

- 8.100 “Moreover, Subhūti, bodhisattva great beings should set their mind on the benefit and happiness of all beings. In this regard, the bodhisattva great beings’ mind set on benefit and happiness is a refuge to all beings, and does not abandon them, but without giving rise to conceit because of that. This, Subhūti, is the bodhisattva great beings’ mind set on benefit and happiness. Keeping to it, without apprehending anything, bodhisattva great beings lead the great number of beings with certainty to consummation. [F.66.b]
- 8.101 “Moreover, Subhūti, bodhisattva great beings should always and uninterruptedly wish for the Dharma, enjoy Dharma, appreciate the Dharma, and practice and engage in having an appreciation for the Dharma. In this regard, if you ask what is Dharma, it is this: the indivisibility of all dharmas.
- 8.102 “If you ask what it is to wish for the Dharma, it is to wish for and appreciate the Dharma. That is called to wish for the Dharma.
- 8.103 “If you ask what it is to enjoy the Dharma, it is to enjoy and take pleasure in the Dharma. That is called to enjoy the Dharma.
- 8.104 “If you ask what it is to appreciate the Dharma, it is to see the good qualities of the Dharma. That is called to appreciate the Dharma.
- 8.105 “If you ask what it is to practice and engage in<sup>377</sup> having an appreciation for the Dharma, it is to cultivate and magnify just that Dharma. That is called to practice and engage in having an appreciation for the Dharma.
- 8.106 “In this way, Subhūti, without apprehending anything, bodhisattva great beings who practice the perfection of wisdom should lead the great number of beings with certainty to consummation.
- 8.107 “Moreover, Subhūti, without apprehending anything, bodhisattva great beings who practice the perfection of wisdom should lead the great number of beings with certainty to consummation while abiding in the emptiness of internal phenomena, while abiding in the emptiness of external phenomena, while abiding in the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, while abiding in the emptiness of emptiness, while abiding in the emptiness of great extent, while abiding in the emptiness of ultimate reality, while abiding in the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, while abiding in the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, while abiding in the emptiness of the unlimited, while abiding in the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, while abiding in the emptiness of nonexclusion, while abiding in the emptiness of inherent nature, while abiding in the emptiness of all phenomena, while abiding in the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, while abiding in the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, while abiding in the emptiness of nonentities, while abiding in the emptiness of essential nature, [F.67.a] and while abiding in the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities.

8.108 “Moreover, Subhūti, without apprehending anything, bodhisattva great beings who practice the perfection of wisdom should lead the great number of beings with certainty to consummation while abiding in the applications of mindfulness, the correct exertions, the supports for miraculous abilities, the faculties, the powers, the branches of enlightenment, and the noble eightfold path, and the truths of the noble ones, the meditative concentrations, the immeasurable attitudes, the formless absorptions, the liberations, the serial steps of meditative absorption, the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation, the extrasensory powers, the meditative stabilities, the dhāraṇī gateways, the ten powers of the tathāgatas, the fearlessnesses, the kinds of exact knowledge, great loving kindness, great compassion, and the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas.

8.109 “Moreover, Subhūti, without apprehending anything, bodhisattva great beings who practice the perfection of wisdom should lead the great number of beings with certainty to consummation while abiding in the meditative stability heroic valor, while abiding in the meditative stability precious seal, while abiding in the meditative stability lion’s play, while abiding in the meditative stability beautiful moon, while abiding in the meditative stability [F.67.b] crest of the moon’s victory banner, while abiding in the meditative stability surpassing all phenomena, while abiding in the meditative stability seal of all phenomena, while abiding in the meditative stability surveying the crown pinnacle, while abiding in the meditative stability certainty in the realm of phenomena, while abiding in the meditative stability crest of certainty’s victory banner, while abiding in the meditative stability vajra, while abiding in the meditative stability seal of entry into all phenomena, while abiding in the meditative stability well established as the king of meditative stabilities, while abiding in the meditative stability excellently well established,<sup>378</sup> while abiding in the meditative stability well-engaging king of meditative stabilities, while abiding in the meditative stability diffusion of light rays, while abiding in the meditative stability without mistakes, while abiding in the meditative stability because of the diffusion of light rays not making mistakes, while abiding in the meditative stability power of effort, while abiding in the meditative stability array of power, while abiding in the meditative stability exalted, while abiding in the meditative stability engaging with certainty in lexical explanations, while abiding in the meditative stability entry into designations, while abiding in the meditative stability observation of spatial directions, while abiding in the meditative stability sealed with the seal, while abiding in the meditative stability unimpaired, while abiding in the meditative stability oceanic seal gathering all phenomena, while abiding in the meditative stability seal of the king,<sup>379</sup> while abiding in the meditative stability permeation of space, while abiding in the meditative stability vajra maṇḍala, while abiding in the meditative stability purified of the three spheres,<sup>380</sup> while abiding in the meditative stability shoulder ornament of the victory banner's crest, while abiding in the meditative stability Indra's crest, while abiding in the meditative stability pursuit of the stream,<sup>381</sup> while abiding in the meditative stability yawning lion,<sup>382</sup> while abiding in the meditative stability stretching lion,<sup>383</sup> [F.68.a] while abiding in the meditative stability stretching-out lion, while abiding in the meditative stability beyond sequence, while abiding in the meditative stability without attachment or impediment,<sup>384</sup> while abiding in the meditative stability repudiation of afflicted mental states,<sup>385</sup> while abiding in the meditative stability illumination, while abiding in the meditative stability unseeking, while abiding in the meditative stability no fixed abode, while abiding in the meditative stability free from mentation, while abiding in the meditative stability taming the four māras,<sup>386</sup> while abiding in the meditative stability stainless lamplight, while abiding in the meditative stability boundless light, while abiding in the meditative stability illuminator, while abiding in the meditative stability total illumination, while abiding in the meditative stability pure supremacy, while abiding in the meditative stability stainless light, while abiding in the meditative stability bringer of joy, while abiding in the meditative stability lightning lamp, while abiding in the meditative stability inexhaustible, while abiding in the meditative stability unvanquished, while abiding in the meditative stability majestic, while abiding in the meditative stability free from extinction, while abiding in the meditative stability unmoving, while abiding in the meditative stability calmed,<sup>387</sup> while abiding in the meditative stability imperishable,<sup>388</sup> abiding in the meditative stability lamp of the sun, while abiding in the meditative stability immaculate moon, while abiding in the meditative stability clear-eyed,<sup>389</sup> while abiding in the meditative stability lamp of wisdom, while abiding in the meditative stability clear appearance, while abiding in the meditative stability moon lamp,<sup>390</sup> while abiding in the meditative stability illuminating, while abiding in the meditative stability does what needs to be done, while abiding in the meditative stability glory of transcendental knowledge, while abiding in the meditative stability vajra-like, while abiding in the meditative stability stability of mind, while abiding in the meditative stability total illumination, while abiding in the meditative stability well situated, while abiding in the meditative stability jewel cusp, while abiding in the meditative stability seal of the supreme phenomenon, while abiding in [F.68.b] the meditative stability sameness of all phenomena, the meditative stability renunciation of delight, while abiding in the meditative stability elevated by phenomena, while abiding in the meditative stability expanded on account of being elevated by phenomena,<sup>391</sup> while abiding in the meditative stability jewel state, while abiding in the meditative stability forsaking fights, while abiding in the meditative stability dispersal, while abiding in the meditative stability distinguishing the terms associated with all phenomena, while abiding in the meditative stability determination,<sup>392</sup> while abiding in the meditative stability stainless performance, while abiding in the meditative stability arranging the sameness of letters, while abiding in the meditative stability devoid of letters, while abiding in the meditative stability cutting off the objective support,<sup>393</sup> while abiding in the meditative stability unmodified, while abiding in the meditative stability aspectless, while abiding in the meditative stability entering into names and signs,<sup>394</sup> while abiding in the meditative stability free from activity, while abiding in the meditative stability entering into the ascertainment of names, while abiding in the meditative stability a practitioner without a dwelling, while abiding in the meditative stability devoid of darkness, while abiding in the meditative stability endowed with practice, while abiding in the meditative stability unwavering, while abiding in the meditative stability transcendence of the range, while abiding in the meditative stability accumulation of all attributes, while abiding in the meditative stability abiding without mentation,<sup>395</sup> while abiding in the meditative stability abiding with certainty,<sup>396</sup> while abiding in the meditative stability blossoming and vibrance of the flowers of virtue, while abiding in the meditative stability endowed with the branches of enlightenment, while abiding in the meditative stability boundless eloquence, while abiding in the meditative stability boundless lamplight,<sup>397</sup> while abiding in the meditative stability equal to the unequaled, while abiding in the meditative stability transcending all phenomena, while abiding in the meditative stability delineator, while abiding in the meditative stability dispelling doubt, while abiding in the meditative stability [F.69.a] without settled focus, while abiding in the meditative stability single array, while abiding in the meditative stability manifest attainment of aspects, the meditative stability single aspect, while abiding in the meditative stability nonexclusion of the aspect, while abiding in the meditative stability supreme performance,<sup>398</sup> while abiding in the meditative stability comprehension of all bases of existence through realization, while abiding in the meditative stability entrance to symbols and sounds, while abiding in the meditative stability jewel heart,<sup>399</sup> while abiding in the meditative stability unattached to any phenomena, while abiding in the meditative stability array of flashes of lightning, while abiding in the meditative stability forsaking, while abiding in the meditative stability lamp of doctrine, while abiding in the meditative stability lamp of transcendental knowledge, while abiding in the meditative stability manifest attainment of the miraculous ability to not return, while abiding in the meditative stability devoid of vocalic syllables, while abiding in the meditative stability burning lamp, while abiding in the meditative stability purification of defining characteristics, while abiding in the meditative stability nondistinguished, while abiding in the meditative stability endowed with a distinct forbearance, while abiding in the meditative stability endowed with all finest aspects,<sup>400</sup> while abiding in the meditative stability endowed with dhāraṇīs, while abiding in the meditative stability absence of joy with respect to all happiness and suffering, while abiding in the meditative stability inexhaustible cornucopia, while abiding in the meditative stability dhāraṇī intelligence, while abiding in the meditative stability perfect elimination of right and wrong, while abiding in the meditative stability perfect calming of all contradictions and refutations, while abiding in the meditative stability no harmony or disharmony, while abiding in the meditative stability taintless light, while abiding in the meditative stability endowed with the essence, while abiding in the meditative stability taintless light of the full moon, while abiding in the meditative stability lightning light, while abiding in the meditative stability [F.69.b] great ornament,<sup>401</sup> while abiding in the meditative stability illuminator in all respects, while abiding in the meditative stability protector of all worlds,<sup>402</sup> while abiding in the meditative stability sameness of meditative stability, while abiding in the meditative stability with a dustless and dust-free principle, while abiding in the meditative stability convergence in nonaffliction, while abiding in the meditative stability convergence of all afflicted mental states in nonaffliction,<sup>403</sup> while abiding in the meditative stability intent on a dwelling that has not been apprehended, while abiding in the meditative stability abiding in the real nature without mentation, while abiding in the meditative stability self-originated from the vessel,<sup>404</sup> while abiding in the meditative stability incinerating all afflicted mental states, while abiding in the meditative stability lamp of great transcendental knowledge, while abiding in the meditative stability origin of the ten powers, while abiding in the meditative stability opener of the gateways, while abiding in the meditative stability dispelling the defects of corporeality, while abiding in the meditative stability obliterating defects of speech, transforming them as if into space,<sup>405</sup> while abiding in the meditative stability dispelling the defects of the mind,<sup>406</sup> while abiding in the meditative stability thorough investigation, while abiding in the meditative stability space-like, and while abiding in the meditative stability space-like and without attachment, hence free and without blemish.

8.110 “Abiding in these attributes, Subhūti, bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom and lead the great number of beings with certainty to consummation. This is why bodhisattvas are called great beings.” [F.70.a] [B6]

8.111 Then the venerable Śāradvatīputra said to the Blessed One, “Blessed Lord, I too am inspired to say in what sense bodhisattvas are called great beings.”

“Śāradvatīputra,” replied the Blessed One, “be inspired to speak of why bodhisattvas are called great beings.”

8.112 Śāradvatīputra then explained, “Blessed Lord, although bodhisattva great beings teach the Dharma to beings in order that they might abandon the view of the self; might abandon the view of a being; might abandon the view of a life form; might abandon the view of a person; might abandon the view of a life; might abandon the view of an individual; might abandon the view of one born of Manu; might abandon the view of a child of Manu; might abandon the view of an agent; might abandon the view of an instigator of an agent; might abandon the view of a motivator; might abandon the view of an inciter; might abandon the view of an experiencer; might abandon the view of an instigator of an experiencer; might abandon the view of a knower; and might abandon the view of a viewer; might abandon the nihilist view and might abandon the eternalist view; might abandon the view of existence and might abandon the view of nonexistence; might abandon the view of aggregates, might abandon the view of sensory elements, and might abandon the view of sense fields; might abandon the view of dependent origination; might abandon the view of the truths; might abandon the view of the perfections; might abandon the view of emptiness; might abandon the view of the applications of mindfulness, might abandon the view of the correct exertions, might abandon the view of the supports for miraculous ability, might abandon the view of the faculties, [F.70.b] might abandon the view of the powers, might abandon the view of the branches of enlightenment, and might abandon the view of the noble eightfold path; might abandon the view of the truths of the noble ones; might abandon the view of the meditative concentrations, might abandon the view of the immeasurable attitudes, might abandon the view of the formless absorptions, might abandon the view of the liberations, and might abandon the view of the serial steps of meditative absorption; might abandon the view of the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation; might abandon the view of the extrasensory powers; might abandon the view of the meditative stabilities and might abandon the view of the dhāraṇī gateways; might abandon the view of the powers of the tathāgatas, might abandon the view of the fearlessnesses, might abandon the view of the kinds of exact knowledge, might abandon the view of great loving kindness, might abandon the view of great compassion, and might abandon the view of the distinct qualities of the buddhas; might abandon the view of beings to be matured; might abandon the view of buddhafi elds to be refined; might abandon the view of enlightenment; might abandon the view of the Buddha, might abandon the view of the Dharma, and might abandon the view of the Saṅgha; might abandon the view of the turning of the wheel of the Dharma; and, although they teach the Dharma to beings in order that they might abandon the view of the attainment of final nirvāṇa, they do so by way of not apprehending anything. This is why bodhisattvas are called great beings.”

8.113 Then the venerable Subhūti asked the venerable Śāradvatīputra, “Venerable Śāradvatīputra, why would bodhisattva great beings have a view [F.71.a] concerning physical forms, have a view concerning feelings, have a view concerning perceptions, have a view concerning formative predispositions, and have a view concerning consciousness; have a view concerning the eyes, have a view concerning the ears, have a view concerning the nose, have a view concerning the tongue, have a view concerning the body, and have a view concerning the mental faculty; have a view concerning sights, have a view concerning sounds, have a view concerning odors, have a view concerning tastes, have a view concerning tangibles, and have a view concerning mental phenomena; have a view concerning visual consciousness, have a view concerning auditory consciousness, have a view concerning olfactory consciousness, have a view concerning gustatory consciousness, have a view concerning tactile consciousness, and have a view concerning mental consciousness; have a view concerning visually compounded sensory contact, have a view concerning aurally compounded sensory contact, have a view concerning nasally compounded sensory contact, have a view concerning lingually compounded sensory contact, have a view concerning corporeally compounded sensory contact, and have a view concerning mentally compounded sensory contact; have a view concerning feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact, have a view concerning feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact, have a view concerning feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact, have a view concerning feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact, have a view concerning feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact, and have a view concerning feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact; have a view concerning the earth element, have a view concerning the water element, have a view concerning the fire element, have a view concerning the wind element, have a view concerning [F.71.b] the space element, and have a view concerning the consciousness element; have a view concerning ignorance, have a view concerning formative predispositions, have a view concerning consciousness, have a view concerning name and form, have a view concerning the six sense fields, have a view concerning sensory contact, have a view concerning sensation, have a view concerning craving, have a view concerning grasping, have a view concerning the rebirth process, have a view concerning birth, and have a view concerning aging and death; have a view concerning the perfection of generosity, have a view concerning the perfection of ethical discipline, have a view concerning the perfection of tolerance, have a view concerning the perfection of perseverance, have a view concerning the perfection of meditative concentration, and have a view concerning the perfection of wisdom; have a view concerning the emptiness of internal phenomena, have a view concerning the emptiness of external phenomena, have a view concerning the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, have a view concerning the emptiness of emptiness, have a view concerning the emptiness of great extent, have a view concerning the emptiness of ultimate reality, have a view concerning the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, have a view concerning the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, have a view concerning the emptiness of the unlimited, have a view concerning the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, have a view concerning the emptiness of nonexclusion, have a view concerning the emptiness of inherent nature, have a view concerning the emptiness of all phenomena, have a view concerning the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, have a view concerning the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, have a view concerning the emptiness of nonentities, have a view concerning the emptiness of essential nature, and have a view concerning [F.72.a] the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities; have a view concerning the applications of mindfulness, have a view concerning the correct exertions, have a view concerning the supports for miraculous ability, have a view concerning the faculties, have a view concerning the powers, have a view concerning the branches of enlightenment, and have a view concerning the noble eightfold path; have a view concerning the truths of the noble ones; have a view concerning the meditative concentrations, have a view concerning the immeasurable attitudes, have a view concerning the formless absorptions, have a view concerning the liberations, and have a view concerning the serial steps of meditative absorption; have a view concerning the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation; have a view concerning the extrasensory powers; have a view concerning the meditative stabilities and have a view concerning the dhāraṇī gateways; have a view concerning the powers of the tathāgatas, have a view concerning the fearlessnesses, have a view concerning the kinds of exact knowledge, have a view concerning great loving kindness, have a view concerning great compassion, and have a view concerning the distinct qualities of the buddhas; have a view concerning the beings to be matured; have a view concerning the buddhafiels to be refined; have a view concerning enlightenment; have a view concerning the Buddha, have a view concerning the Dharma, and have a view concerning the Saṅgha; have a view concerning the turning of the wheel of the Dharma; and have a view concerning the attainment of final nirvāṇa?”

8.114 “Venerable Subhūti, in this regard, bodhisattva great beings who practice the perfection of wisdom [F.72.b] without skill in means apprehend physical forms and develop a view of them by way of apprehending, without skill in means apprehend feelings and develop a view of them by way of apprehending, without skill in means apprehend perceptions and develop a view of them by way of apprehending, without skill in means apprehend formative predispositions and develop a view of them by way of apprehending, and without skill in means apprehend consciousness and develop a view of it by way of apprehending; without skill in means apprehend the eyes and develop a view of them by way of apprehending, without skill in means apprehend the ears and develop a view of them by way of apprehending, without skill in means apprehend the nose and develop a view of it by way of apprehending, without skill in means apprehend the tongue and develop a view of it by way of apprehending, without skill in means apprehend the body and develop a view of it by way of apprehending, and without skill in means apprehend the mental faculty and develop a view of it by way of apprehending; without skill in means apprehend sights and develop a view of them by way of apprehending, without skill in means apprehend sounds and develop a view of them by way of apprehending, without skill in means apprehend odors and develop a view of them by way of apprehending, without skill in means apprehend tastes and develop a view of them by way of apprehending, without skill in means apprehend tangibles and develop a view of them by way of apprehending, and without skill in means apprehend mental phenomena and develop a view of them by way of apprehending; without skill in means apprehend visual consciousness and develop a view of it by way of apprehending, without skill in means apprehend auditory consciousness and develop a view of it by way of apprehending, without skill in means apprehend olfactory consciousness and develop a view of it by way of apprehending, without skill in means apprehend gustatory consciousness and develop a view of it by way of apprehending, without skill in means apprehend tactile consciousness and develop a view of it by way of apprehending, and without skill in means apprehend mental consciousness and develop a view of it by way of apprehending; without skill in means apprehend visually compounded sensory contact and develop a view of it by way of apprehending, without skill in means apprehend aurally compounded sensory contact and develop a view of it by way of apprehending, without skill in means apprehend nasally compounded sensory contact and develop a view of it [F.73.a] by way of apprehending, without skill in means apprehend lingually compounded sensory contact and develop a view of it by way of apprehending, without skill in means apprehend corporeally compounded sensory contact and develop a view of it by way of apprehending, and without skill in means apprehend mentally compounded sensory contact and develop a view of it by way of apprehending; without skill in means apprehend feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact and develop a view of them by way of apprehending, without skill in means apprehend feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact and develop a view of them by way of apprehending, without skill in means apprehend feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact and develop a view of them by way of apprehending, without skill in means apprehend feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact and develop a view of them by way of apprehending, without skill in means apprehend feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact and develop a view of them by way of apprehending, and without skill in means apprehend feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact and develop a view of them by way of apprehending; without skill in means apprehend the earth element and develop a view of it by way of apprehending, without skill in means apprehend the water element and develop a view of it by way of apprehending, without skill in means apprehend the fire element and develop a view of it by way of apprehending, without skill in means apprehend the wind element and develop a view of it by way of apprehending, without skill in means apprehend the space element and develop a view of it by way of apprehending, and without skill in means apprehend the consciousness element and develop a view of it by way of apprehending; without skill in means apprehend ignorance and develop a view of it by way of apprehending, without skill in means apprehend formative predispositions and develop a view of them by way of apprehending, without skill in means apprehend consciousness and develop a view of it by way of apprehending, without skill in means apprehend name and form and develop a view of them by way of apprehending, without skill in means apprehend the six sense fields and develop a view of them by way of apprehending, without skill in means apprehend sensory contact and develop a view of it by way of apprehending, without skill in means apprehend sensation and develop a view of it by way of apprehending, without skill in means apprehend [F.73.b] craving and develop a view of it by way of apprehending, without skill in means apprehend grasping and develop a view of it by way of apprehending, without skill in means apprehend the rebirth process and develop a view of it by way of apprehending, without skill in means apprehend birth and develop a view of it by way of apprehending, and without skill in means apprehend aging and death and develop a view of them by way of apprehending; without skill in means apprehend the perfection of generosity and develop a view of it by way of apprehending, without skill in means apprehend the perfection of ethical discipline and develop a view of it by way of apprehending, without skill in means apprehend the perfection of tolerance and develop a view of it by way of apprehending, without skill in means apprehend the perfection of perseverance and develop a view of it by way of apprehending, without skill in means apprehend the perfection of meditative concentration and develop a view of it by way of apprehending, and without skill in means apprehend the perfection of wisdom and develop a view of it by way of apprehending; without skill in means apprehend the emptiness of internal phenomena and develop a view of it by way of apprehending, without skill in means apprehend the emptiness of external phenomena and develop a view of it by way of apprehending, without skill in means apprehend the emptiness of external and internal phenomena and develop a view of it by way of apprehending, without skill in means apprehend the emptiness of emptiness and develop a view of it by way of apprehending, without skill in means apprehend the emptiness of great extent and develop a view of it by way of apprehending, without skill in means apprehend the emptiness of ultimate reality and develop a view of it by way of apprehending, without skill in means apprehend the emptiness of conditioned phenomena and develop a view of it by way of apprehending, without skill in means apprehend the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena and develop a view of it by way of apprehending, without skill in means apprehend the emptiness of the unlimited and develop a view of it by way of apprehending, without skill in means apprehend the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end and develop a view of it by way of apprehending, without skill in means apprehend the emptiness of nonexclusion and develop a view of it by way of apprehending, without skill in means apprehend the emptiness of inherent nature and develop a view of it by way of apprehending, without skill in means apprehend the emptiness of all phenomena [F.74.a] and develop a view of it by way of apprehending, without skill in means apprehend the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics and develop a view of it by way of apprehending, without skill in means apprehend the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended and develop a view of it by way of apprehending, without skill in means apprehend the emptiness of nonentities and develop a view of it by way of apprehending, without skill in means apprehend the emptiness of essential nature and develop a view of

it by way of apprehending, and without skill in means apprehend the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities and develop a view of it by way of apprehending; without skill in means apprehend the applications of mindfulness and develop a view of them by way of apprehending, without skill in means apprehend the correct exertions and develop a view of them by way of apprehending, without skill in means apprehend the supports for miraculous ability and develop a view of them by way of apprehending, without skill in means apprehend the faculties and develop a view of them by way of apprehending, without skill in means apprehend the powers and develop a view of them by way of apprehending, without skill in means apprehend the branches of enlightenment and develop a view of them by way of apprehending, and without skill in means apprehend the noble eightfold path and develop a view of it by way of apprehending; without skill in means apprehend the truths of the noble ones and develop a view of them by way of apprehending; without skill in means apprehend the meditative concentrations and develop a view of them by way of apprehending, without skill in means apprehend the immeasurable attitudes and develop a view of them by way of apprehending, without skill in means apprehend the formless absorptions and develop a view of them by way of apprehending, without skill in means apprehend the liberations and develop a view of them by way of apprehending, and without skill in means apprehend the serial steps of meditative absorption and develop a view of them by way of apprehending; without skill in means apprehend the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation and develop a view of them by way of apprehending; without skill in means apprehend the extrasensory powers and develop a view of them by way of apprehending; without skill in means apprehend the meditative stabilities [F.74.b] and develop a view of them by way of apprehending, and without skill in means apprehend the dhāraṇī gateways and develop a view of them by way of apprehending; without skill in means apprehend the powers of the tathāgatas and develop a view of them by way of apprehending, without skill in means apprehend the fearlessnesses and develop a view of them by way of apprehending, without skill in means apprehend the kinds of exact knowledge and develop a view of them by way of apprehending, without skill in means apprehend great loving kindness and develop a view of it by way of apprehending, without skill in means apprehend great compassion and develop a view of it by way of apprehending, and without skill in means apprehend the distinct qualities of the buddhas and develop a view of them by way of apprehending; without skill in means apprehend the beings to be matured and develop a view of them by way of apprehending; without skill in means apprehend the buddhafiels to be refined and develop a view of them by way of apprehending; without skill in means apprehend enlightenment and develop a view of it by way of apprehending; without skill in means apprehend the Buddha and develop a view of him by way of apprehending, without skill in means apprehend the Dharma and develop a view of it by way of apprehending, and without skill in means apprehend the Saṅgha and develop a view of it by way of apprehending; without skill in means apprehend the turning of the wheel of the Dharma and develop a view of it by way of apprehending; and without skill in means apprehend the attainment of final nirvāṇa and develop a view of it by way of apprehending.

8.115 “Venerable Subhūti, for these reasons bodhisattva great beings have a view concerning physical forms, a view concerning feelings, a view concerning perceptions, a view concerning formative predispositions, and a view concerning consciousness; for these reasons they have a view concerning the eyes, a view concerning the ears, a view concerning the nose, a view concerning the tongue, a view concerning the body, and a view concerning the mental faculty; for these reasons they have a view concerning sights, a view concerning sounds, a view concerning odors, a view concerning tastes, a view concerning tangibles, and a view concerning mental phenomena; for these reasons they have a view concerning visual consciousness, a view concerning auditory consciousness, a view concerning [F.75.a] olfactory consciousness, a view concerning gustatory consciousness, a view concerning tactile consciousness, and a view concerning mental consciousness; for these reasons they have a view concerning visually compounded sensory contact, a view concerning aurally compounded sensory contact, a view concerning nasally compounded sensory contact, a view concerning lingually compounded sensory contact, a view concerning corporeally compounded sensory contact, and a view concerning mentally compounded sensory contact; for these reasons they have a view concerning feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact, a view concerning feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact, a view concerning feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact, a view concerning feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact, a view concerning feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact, and a view concerning feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact; for these reasons they have a view concerning the earth element, a view concerning the water element, a view concerning the fire element, a view concerning the wind element, a view concerning the space element, and a view concerning the consciousness element; for these reasons they have a view concerning ignorance, a view concerning formative predispositions, a view concerning consciousness, a view concerning name and form, a view concerning the six sense fields, a view concerning sensory contact, a view concerning sensation, a view concerning craving, a view concerning grasping, a view concerning the rebirth process, a view concerning birth, and a view concerning aging and death; for these reasons they have a view concerning the perfection of generosity, a view concerning the perfection of ethical discipline, a view concerning the perfection of tolerance, a view concerning the perfection of perseverance, a view concerning the perfection of meditative concentration, and a view concerning the perfection of wisdom; for these reasons they have a view concerning the emptiness of internal phenomena, a view concerning the emptiness of external phenomena, a view concerning the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, a view concerning the emptiness of emptiness, a view concerning the emptiness of great extent, [F.75.b] a view concerning the emptiness of ultimate reality, a view concerning the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, a view concerning the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, a view concerning the emptiness of the unlimited, a view concerning the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, a view concerning the emptiness of nonexclusion, a view concerning the emptiness of inherent nature, a view concerning the emptiness of all phenomena, a view concerning the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, a view concerning the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, a view concerning the emptiness of nonentities, a view concerning the emptiness of essential nature, and a view concerning the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities; for these reasons they have a view concerning the applications of mindfulness, a view concerning the correct exertions, a view concerning the supports for miraculous ability, a view concerning the faculties, a view concerning the powers, a view concerning the branches of enlightenment, and a view concerning the noble eightfold path; for these reasons they have a view concerning the truths of the noble ones, a view concerning the meditative concentrations, a view concerning the immeasurable attitudes, a view concerning the formless absorptions, a view concerning the liberations, a view concerning the serial steps of meditative absorption, a view concerning the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation, a view concerning the extrasensory powers, a view concerning the meditative stabilities, and a view concerning the dhāraṇī gateways; for these reasons they have a view concerning the powers of the tathāgatas, a view concerning the fearlessnesses, a view concerning the kinds of exact knowledge, a view concerning great loving kindness, a view concerning great compassion, and a view concerning the distinct qualities of the buddhas; and for these reasons they have a view concerning the beings to be matured, a view concerning the buddhafi elds to be refined, a view concerning enlightenment, a view concerning the Buddha, a view concerning the Dharma, a view concerning the Saṅgha, a view concerning the turning of the wheel of the Dharma, and a view concerning the attainment of final nirvāṇa. However, in this regard, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom [F.76.a] with skill in means they teach the Dharma, without apprehending anything, in order that those views might be abandoned.

8.116 Then the venerable Subhūti said to the Blessed One, “Blessed Lord, I too am inspired to say why a bodhisattva is called a great being.”

“Subhūti, be inspired to speak of that!” replied the Blessed One.

8.117 Subhūti then explained, “Blessed Lord, they are without attachment even to such a mind as the mind set on enlightenment that is equal to the unequaled and is not shared in common with any śrāvakas or pratyekabuddhas. It is for that reason bodhisattvas are called great beings. If you ask why, it is because the mind set on omniscience is free from contaminants and not part of the three realms. So, owing to its emptiness of inherent nature, they are not attached even to that mind—that mind set on omniscience that is free from contaminants and that is not part of the three realms. That is why bodhisattvas are reckoned to be great beings.”<sup>407</sup>

8.118 Then the venerable Śāradvatīputra asked the venerable Subhūti, “Venerable Subhūti, what is the mind of bodhisattva great beings that is equal to the unequaled, and that is not shared in common with the śrāvakas and pratyekabuddhas?”

8.119 “In this regard, Venerable Śāradvatīputra,” replied Subhūti, “bodhisattva great beings, starting from the time when they first set their mind on enlightenment, do not observe any phenomenon at all that is arising, and they do not observe any phenomenon at all that is ceasing, increasing or decreasing, coming or going, defiled or purified. Venerable Śāradvatīputra, in that [mind] that has no arising, no ceasing, no increasing, no decreasing, [F.76.b] no coming, no going, no defilement, and no purification there is no mind of the śrāvakas, no mind of the pratyekabuddhas, no mind of the bodhisattvas, and no mind of the perfectly complete buddhas. Venerable Śāradvatīputra, this is the mind of bodhisattva great beings—equal to the unequaled, and not shared in common with all śrāvakas or pratyekabuddhas.”

8.120 “Venerable Subhūti, you said, ‘They are not attached even to that mind—that mind set on omniscience, free from contaminants and not part of the three realms,’ so would it not be the case, Venerable Subhūti, that physical forms would therefore be without attachment,<sup>408</sup> that feelings would be without attachment, that perceptions would be without attachment, that formative predispositions would be without attachment, and that consciousness would be without attachment; that the eyes would be without attachment, that the ears would be without attachment, that the nose would be without attachment, that the tongue would be without attachment, that the body would be without attachment, and that the mental faculty would be without attachment; that sights would be without attachment, that sounds would be without attachment, that odors would be without attachment, that tastes would be without attachment, that tangibles would be without attachment, and that mental phenomena would be without attachment; that visual consciousness would be without attachment, that auditory consciousness would be without attachment, that olfactory consciousness would be without attachment, that gustatory consciousness would be without attachment, that tactile consciousness would be without attachment, and that mental consciousness would be without attachment; that visually compounded sensory contact would be without attachment, that aurally compounded sensory contact would be without attachment, that nasally compounded sensory contact would be without attachment, that lingually compounded sensory contact would be without attachment, that corporeally compounded sensory contact [F.77.a] would be without attachment, and that mentally compounded sensory contact would be without attachment; that feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact would be without attachment, that feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact would be without attachment, that feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact would be without attachment, that feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact would be without attachment, that feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact would be without attachment, and that feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact would be without attachment; that the earth element would be without attachment, that the water element would be without attachment, that the fire element would be without attachment, that the wind element would be without attachment, that the space element would be without attachment, and that the consciousness element would be without attachment; that ignorance would be without attachment, that formative predispositions would be without attachment, that consciousness would be without attachment, that name and form would be without attachment, that the six sense fields would be without attachment, that sensory contact would be without attachment, that sensation would be without attachment, that craving would be without attachment, that grasping would be without attachment, that the rebirth process would be without attachment, that birth would be without attachment, and that aging and death would be without attachment; that the perfection of generosity would be without attachment, that the perfection of ethical discipline would be without attachment, that the perfection of tolerance would be without attachment, that the perfection of perseverance would be without attachment, that the perfection of meditative concentration would be without attachment, and that the perfection of wisdom would be without attachment; that the emptiness of internal phenomena would be without attachment, that the emptiness of external phenomena would be without attachment, that the emptiness of external and internal phenomena would be without attachment, that the emptiness of emptiness would be without attachment, that the emptiness of great extent would be without attachment, that the emptiness of ultimate reality would be without attachment, that the emptiness of conditioned phenomena would be [F.77.b] without attachment, that the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena would be without attachment, that the emptiness of the unlimited would be without attachment, that the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end would be without attachment, that the emptiness of nonexclusion would be without attachment, that the emptiness of inherent nature would be without attachment, that the emptiness of all phenomena would be without attachment, that the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics would be without attachment, that the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended would be without attachment, that the emptiness of nonentities would be without attachment, that the emptiness of essential nature would be without attachment, and that the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities would be without attachment; that the applications of mindfulness would be without attachment, that the correct exertions would be without attachment, that the supports for miraculous ability would be without attachment, that the faculties would be without attachment, that the powers would be without attachment, that the branches of enlightenment would be without attachment, and that the noble eightfold path would be without attachment; that the truths of the noble ones would be without attachment, that the meditative concentrations would be without attachment, that the immeasurable attitudes would be without attachment, that the formless absorptions would be without attachment, that the liberations would be without attachment, that the serial steps of meditative absorption would be without attachment, that the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation would be without attachment, that the extrasensory powers would be without attachment, that the meditative stabilities would be without attachment, and that the dhāraṇī gateways would be without attachment; that the powers of the tathāgatas would be without attachment, that the fearlessnesses would be without attachment, that the kinds of exact knowledge would be without attachment, that great loving kindness would be without attachment, that great compassion would be without attachment, and that the distinct qualities of the buddhas would be without attachment; and that omniscience would be without attachment, [F.78.a] that the knowledge of the aspects of the path would be without attachment, and that all-aspect omniscience would be without attachment?"

8.121 "Venerable Śāradvatīputra, that is so," replied Subhūti. "Physical forms are without attachment, feelings are without attachment, perceptions are without attachment, formative predispositions are without attachment, and consciousness is without attachment; the eyes are without attachment, the ears are without attachment, the nose is without attachment, the tongue is without attachment, the body is without attachment, and the mental faculty is without attachment; sights are without attachment, sounds are without attachment, odors are without attachment, tastes are without attachment, tangibles are without attachment, and mental phenomena are without attachment; visual consciousness is without attachment, auditory consciousness is without attachment, olfactory consciousness is without attachment, gustatory consciousness is without attachment, tactile consciousness is without attachment, and mental consciousness is without attachment; visually compounded sensory contact is without attachment, aurally compounded sensory contact is without attachment, nasally compounded sensory contact is without attachment, lingually compounded sensory contact is without attachment, corporeally compounded sensory contact is without attachment, and mentally compounded sensory contact is without attachment; feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact are without attachment, feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact are without attachment, feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact are without attachment, feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact are without attachment, feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact are without attachment, and feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact are without attachment; the earth element is without attachment, [F.78.b] the water element is without attachment, the fire element is without attachment, the wind element is without attachment, the space element is without attachment, and the consciousness element is without attachment; ignorance is without attachment, formative predispositions are without attachment, consciousness is without attachment, name and form are without attachment, the six sense fields are without attachment, sensory contact is without attachment, sensation is without attachment, craving is without attachment, grasping is without attachment, the rebirth process is without attachment, birth is without attachment, and aging and death are without attachment; the perfection of generosity is without attachment, the perfection of ethical discipline is without attachment, the perfection of tolerance is without attachment, the perfection of perseverance is without attachment, the perfection of meditative concentration is without attachment, and the perfection of wisdom is without attachment; the emptiness of internal phenomena is without attachment, the emptiness of external phenomena is without attachment, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena is without attachment, the emptiness of emptiness is without attachment, the emptiness of great extent is without attachment, the emptiness of ultimate reality is without attachment, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena is without attachment, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena is without attachment, the emptiness of the unlimited is without attachment, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end is without attachment, the emptiness of nonexclusion is without attachment, the emptiness of inherent nature is without attachment, the emptiness of all phenomena is without attachment, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics is without attachment, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended is without attachment, the emptiness of nonentities is without attachment, the emptiness of essential nature is without attachment, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities is without [F.79.a] attachment; the applications of mindfulness are without attachment, the correct exertions are without attachment, the supports for miraculous ability are without attachment, the faculties are without attachment, the powers are without attachment, the branches of enlightenment are without attachment, and the noble eightfold path is without attachment; the truths of the noble ones are without attachment, the meditative concentrations are without attachment, the immeasurable attitudes are without attachment, the formless absorptions are without attachment, the liberations are without attachment, the serial steps of meditative absorption are without attachment, the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation are without attachment, the extrasensory powers are without attachment, the meditative stabilities are without attachment, and the dhāraṇī gateways are without attachment; the powers of the tathāgatas are without attachment, the fearlessnesses are without attachment, the kinds of exact knowledge are without attachment, great loving kindness is without attachment, great compassion is without attachment, and the distinct qualities of the buddhas are without attachment; and omniscience is without attachment, the knowledge of the aspects of the path is without attachment, and all-aspect omniscience is without attachment.”

- 8.122 “Venerable Subhūti, you said, ‘That mind set on omniscience is free from contaminants and not part of the three realms,’ so, Venerable Subhūti, in that case not only that, but also would the minds of ordinary persons be free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to their emptiness of inherent nature? Would the minds of the śrāvakas and pratyekabuddhas, as well as [F.79.b] the minds of the lord buddhas, also be free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to their emptiness of inherent nature?”
- 8.123 “They are, Venerable Śāradvatīputra,” replied Subhūti. “The minds of ordinary persons are also free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature. The minds of the śrāvakas are also free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature. The minds of the pratyekabuddhas are also free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature. The minds of the lord buddhas are also free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature.”
- 8.124 “Venerable Subhūti, in that case, physical forms would also be free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; feelings would also be free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; perceptions would also be free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; formative predispositions would also be free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; and consciousness would also be free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature.
- 8.125 “The eyes would also be free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; the ears would also be free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; the nose would also be free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; the tongue would also be free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; the body would also be free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; and the mental faculty would also be free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature. Sights would also be free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; sounds would also be free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; odors would also be free [F.80.a] from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; tastes would also be free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; tangibles would also be free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; and mental phenomena would also be free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature. Visual consciousness would also be free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; auditory consciousness would also be free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; olfactory consciousness would also be free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; gustatory consciousness would also be free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; tactile consciousness would also be free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; and mental consciousness would also be free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature. Visually compounded sensory contact would also be free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; aurally compounded sensory contact would also be free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; nasally compounded sensory contact would also be free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; lingually compounded sensory contact would also be free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; corporeally compounded sensory contact would also be free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; and mentally compounded sensory contact would also be free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature. Feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact would also be free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact would also be free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, [F.80.b] owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact would also be free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact would also be free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact would also be free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; and feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact would also be free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature.

8.126 “The earth element would also be free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; the water element would also be free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; the fire element would also be free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; the wind element would also be free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; the space element would also be free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; and the consciousness element would also be free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature.

8.127 “Ignorance would also be free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; formative predispositions would also be free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; consciousness would also be free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; name and form would also be free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; the six sense fields would also be free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; sensory contact would also be free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; sensation would also be free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; craving would also be free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; [F.81.a] grasping would also be free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; the rebirth process would also be free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; birth would also be free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; and aging and death would also be free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature.

8.128 “The perfection of generosity would also be free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; the perfection of ethical discipline would also be free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; the perfection of tolerance would also be free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; the perfection of perseverance would also be free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; the perfection of meditative concentration would also be free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; and the perfection of wisdom would also be free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature.

8.129 “The emptiness of internal phenomena would also be free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; the emptiness of external phenomena would also be free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; the emptiness of external and internal phenomena would also be free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; the emptiness of emptiness would also be free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; the emptiness of great extent would also be free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; the emptiness of ultimate reality would also be free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; the emptiness of conditioned phenomena would also be free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena would also be free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; [F.81.b] the emptiness of the unlimited would also be free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end would also be free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; the emptiness of nonexclusion would also be free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; the emptiness of inherent nature would also be free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; the emptiness of all phenomena would also be free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics would also be free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended would also be free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; the emptiness of nonentities would also be free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; the emptiness of essential nature would also be free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities would also be free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature.

8.130 “The applications of mindfulness would also be free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; the correct exertions would also be free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; the supports for miraculous ability would also be free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; the faculties would also be free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; the powers would also be free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; the branches of enlightenment would also be free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; and the noble eightfold path would also be free [F.82.a] from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature.

8.131 “The truths of the noble ones would also be free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; the meditative concentrations would also be free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; the immeasurable attitudes would also be free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; the formless absorptions would also be free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; the liberations would also be free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; the serial steps of meditative absorption would also be free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation would also be free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; the extrasensory powers would also be free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; the meditative stabilities would also be free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; and the dhāraṇī gateways would also be free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature.

- 8.132 “the powers of the tathāgatas would also be free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; the fearlessnesses would also be free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; the kinds of exact knowledge would also be free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; great loving kindness would also be free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; great compassion would also be free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; and the distinct qualities of the buddhas would also be free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature.
- 8.133 “Omniscience would also be free from contaminants [F.82.b] and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; the knowledge of the aspects of the path would also be free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; and all-aspect omniscience would also be free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature.” [B7]
- 8.134 “Venerable Śāradvatīputra, it is as you have said!” replied Subhūti. “Physical forms are also free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; feelings are also free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; perceptions are also free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; formative predispositions are also free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; and consciousness is also free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature.
- 8.135 “The eyes are also free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; the ears are also free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; the nose is also free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; the tongue is also free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; the body is also free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; and the mental faculty is also free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature. Sights are also free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; sounds are also free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; odors are also free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; tastes are also free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; tangibles are also [F.83.a] free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; and mental phenomena is also free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature. Visual consciousness is also free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; auditory consciousness is also free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; olfactory consciousness is also free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; gustatory consciousness is also free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; tactile consciousness is also free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; and mental consciousness is also free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature. Visually compounded sensory contact is also free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; aurally compounded sensory contact is also free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; nasally compounded sensory contact is also free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; lingually compounded sensory contact is also free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; corporeally compounded sensory contact is also free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; and mentally compounded sensory contact is also free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature. Feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact are also free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact are also free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact are also free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact [F.83.b] are also free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact are also free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; and feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact are also free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature.

8.136 “The earth element is also free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; the water element is also free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; the fire element is also free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; the wind element is also free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; the space element is also free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; and the consciousness element is also free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature.

8.137 “Ignorance is also free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; formative predispositions are also free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; consciousness is also free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; name and form are also free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; the six sense fields are also free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; sensory contact is also free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; sensation is also free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; craving is also free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; grasping is also free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; the rebirth process is also free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; birth is also free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; and aging and death are also [F.84.a] free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature.

8.138 “The perfection of generosity is also free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; the perfection of ethical discipline is also free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; the perfection of tolerance is also free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; the perfection of perseverance is also free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; the perfection of meditative concentration is also free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; and the perfection of wisdom is also free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature.

8.139 “The emptiness of internal phenomena is also free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; the emptiness of external phenomena is also free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; the emptiness of external and internal phenomena is also free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; the emptiness of emptiness is also free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; the emptiness of great extent is also free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; the emptiness of ultimate reality is also free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; the emptiness of conditioned phenomena is also free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena is also free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; the emptiness of the unlimited is also free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end is also free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end is also free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; the emptiness of nonexclusion is also free from contaminants [F.84.b] and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; the emptiness of inherent nature is also free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; the emptiness of all phenomena is also free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics is also free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended is also free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; the emptiness of nonentities is also free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; the emptiness of essential nature is also free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities is also free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature.

8.140 “The applications of mindfulness are also free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; the correct exertions are also free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; the supports for miraculous ability are also free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; the faculties are also free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; the powers are also free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; the branches of enlightenment are also free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; and the noble eightfold path is also free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature.

8.141 “The truths of the noble ones are also free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; the meditative concentrations are also free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; the immeasurable attitudes are also free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; the formless absorptions are also free [F.85.a] from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; the liberations are also free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; the serial steps of meditative absorption are also free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation are also free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; the extrasensory powers are also free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; the meditative stabilities are also free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; and the dhāraṇī gateways are also free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature.

8.142 “the powers of the tathāgatas are also free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; the fearlessnesses are also free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; the kinds of exact knowledge are also free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; great loving kindness is also free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature;<sup>409</sup> great compassion is also free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; and the distinct qualities of the buddhas are also free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature.

8.143 “Omniscience is also free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; the knowledge of the aspects of the path is also free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature; and all-aspect omniscience is also free from contaminants and not part of the three realms, owing to the emptiness of inherent nature.”

8.144 “Venerable Subhūti, you said, ‘Because of nonexistent mind, they are not attached even to this mind.’<sup>410</sup> So, Venerable Subhūti, in that case not only that, [F.85.b] but nonexistent physical forms also would be without attachment to physical forms,<sup>411</sup> nonexistent feelings also would be without attachment to feelings, nonexistent perceptions also would be without attachment to perceptions, nonexistent formative predispositions also would be without attachment to formative predispositions, and nonexistent consciousness would also be without attachment to consciousness.

8.145 “The nonexistent eyes would also be without attachment to the eyes; the nonexistent ears would also be without attachment to the ears; the nonexistent nose would also be without attachment to the nose; the nonexistent tongue would also be without attachment to the tongue; the nonexistent body would also be without attachment to the body; and the nonexistent mental faculty would also be without attachment to the mental faculty. Nonexistent sights would also be without attachment to sights; nonexistent sounds would also be without attachment to sounds; nonexistent odors would also be without attachment to odors; nonexistent tastes would also be without attachment to tastes; nonexistent tangibles would also be without attachment to tangibles; and nonexistent mental phenomena would also be without attachment to mental phenomena. Nonexistent visual consciousness would also be without attachment to visual consciousness; nonexistent auditory consciousness would also be without attachment to auditory consciousness; nonexistent olfactory consciousness would also be without attachment to olfactory consciousness; nonexistent gustatory consciousness would also be without attachment to gustatory consciousness; nonexistent tactile consciousness would also be without attachment to tactile consciousness; and nonexistent mental consciousness would also be without attachment to mental consciousness. Nonexistent visually compounded sensory contact would also be without attachment to visually compounded sensory contact; nonexistent aurally compounded sensory contact would also be without attachment to aurally compounded sensory contact; nonexistent nasally compounded sensory contact would also be without attachment to nasally compounded sensory contact; nonexistent lingually compounded sensory contact would also be without attachment to lingually compounded sensory contact; nonexistent corporeally compounded sensory contact would also be without attachment to corporeally compounded sensory contact; and nonexistent mentally compounded sensory contact would also be without attachment to mentally compounded sensory contact. Nonexistent feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact [F.86.a] would also be without attachment to feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact; nonexistent feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact would also be without attachment to feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact; nonexistent feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact would also be without attachment to feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact; nonexistent feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact would also be without attachment to feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact; nonexistent feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact would also be without attachment to feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact; and nonexistent feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact would also be without attachment to feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact.

8.146 “The nonexistent earth element would also be without attachment to the earth element; the nonexistent water element would also be without attachment to the water element; the nonexistent fire element would also be without attachment to the fire element; the nonexistent wind element would also be without attachment to the wind element; the nonexistent space element would also be without attachment to the space element; and the nonexistent consciousness element would also be without attachment to the consciousness element.

8.147 “Nonexistent ignorance would also be without attachment to ignorance; nonexistent formative predispositions would also be without attachment to formative predispositions; nonexistent consciousness would also be without attachment to consciousness; nonexistent name and form would also be without attachment to name and form; the nonexistent six sense fields would also be without attachment to the six sense fields; nonexistent sensory contact would also be without attachment to sensory contact; nonexistent sensation would also be without attachment to sensation; nonexistent craving would also be without attachment to craving; nonexistent grasping would also be without attachment to grasping; the nonexistent rebirth process would also be without attachment to the rebirth process; nonexistent birth would also be without attachment to birth; and nonexistent aging and death would also be without attachment to aging and death.

8.148 “The nonexistent perfection of generosity would also [F.86.b] be without attachment to the perfection of generosity; the nonexistent perfection of ethical discipline would also be without attachment to the perfection of ethical discipline; the nonexistent perfection of tolerance would also be without attachment to the perfection of tolerance; the nonexistent perfection of perseverance would also be without attachment to the perfection of perseverance; the nonexistent perfection of meditative concentration would also be without attachment to the perfection of meditative concentration; and the nonexistent perfection of wisdom would also be without attachment to the perfection of wisdom.

8.149 “The nonexistent emptiness of internal phenomena would also be without attachment to the emptiness of internal phenomena; the nonexistent emptiness of external phenomena would also be without attachment to the emptiness of external phenomena; the nonexistent emptiness of external and internal phenomena would also be without attachment to the emptiness of external and internal phenomena; the nonexistent emptiness of emptiness would also be without attachment to the emptiness of emptiness; the nonexistent emptiness of great extent would also be without attachment to the emptiness of great extent; the nonexistent emptiness of ultimate reality would also be without attachment to the emptiness of ultimate reality; the nonexistent emptiness of conditioned phenomena would also be without attachment to the emptiness of conditioned phenomena; the nonexistent emptiness of unconditioned phenomena would also be without attachment to the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena; the nonexistent emptiness of the unlimited would also be without attachment to the emptiness of the unlimited; the nonexistent emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end would also be without attachment to the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end; the nonexistent emptiness of nonexclusion would also be without attachment to the emptiness of nonexclusion; the nonexistent emptiness of inherent nature would also be without attachment to the emptiness of inherent nature; the nonexistent emptiness of all phenomena would also be without attachment to the emptiness of all phenomena; the nonexistent emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics would also be without attachment to the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics; the nonexistent emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended would also be without attachment to the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended; the nonexistent emptiness of nonentities would also be [F.87.a] without attachment to the emptiness of nonentities;

the nonexistent emptiness of essential nature would also be without attachment to the emptiness of essential nature; and the nonexistent emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities would also be without attachment to the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities.

8.150 “The nonexistent applications of mindfulness would also be without attachment to the applications of mindfulness; the nonexistent correct exertions would also be without attachment to the correct exertions; the nonexistent supports for miraculous ability would also be without attachment to the supports for miraculous ability; the nonexistent faculties would also be without attachment to the faculties; the nonexistent powers would also be without attachment to the powers; the nonexistent branches of enlightenment would also be without attachment to the branches of enlightenment; and the nonexistent noble eightfold path would also be without attachment to the noble eightfold path.

8.151 “The nonexistent truths of the noble ones would also be without attachment to the truths of the noble ones; the nonexistent meditative concentrations would also be without attachment to the meditative concentrations; the nonexistent immeasurable attitudes would also be without attachment to the immeasurable attitudes; the nonexistent formless absorptions would also be without attachment to the formless absorptions; the nonexistent liberations would also be without attachment to the liberations; the nonexistent serial steps of meditative absorption would also be without attachment to the serial steps of meditative absorption; the nonexistent emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation would also be without attachment to the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation; the nonexistent extrasensory powers would also be without attachment to the extrasensory powers; the nonexistent meditative stabilities would also be without attachment to the meditative stabilities; and the nonexistent dhāraṇī gateways would also be without attachment to [F.87.b] the dhāraṇī gateways.

8.152 “The nonexistent powers of the tathāgatas would also be without attachment to the powers of the tathāgatas; the nonexistent fearlessnesses would also be without attachment to the fearlessnesses; the nonexistent kinds of exact knowledge would also be without attachment to the kinds of exact knowledge; nonexistent great loving kindness would also be without attachment to great loving kindness; nonexistent great compassion would also be without attachment to great compassion; and the nonexistent distinct qualities of the buddhas would also be without attachment to the distinct qualities of the buddhas.

- 8.153 “Nonexistent omniscience would also be without attachment to omniscience; the nonexistent knowledge of the aspects of the path would also be without attachment to the knowledge of the aspects of the path; and nonexistent all-aspect omniscience would also be without attachment to the knowledge of all-aspect omniscience.”
- 8.154 “Venerable Śāradvatīputra, it is so!” he replied. “Nonexistent physical forms are without attachment to physical forms, nonexistent feelings are without attachment to feelings, nonexistent perceptions are without attachment to perceptions, nonexistent formative predispositions are without attachment to formative predispositions, and nonexistent consciousness is without attachment to consciousness.
- 8.155 “The nonexistent eyes are without attachment to the eyes; the nonexistent ears are without attachment to the ears; the nonexistent nose is without attachment to the nose; the nonexistent tongue is without attachment to the tongue; the nonexistent body is without attachment to the body; and the nonexistent mental faculty is without attachment to the mental faculty. Nonexistent sights are without attachment to sights; nonexistent sounds are without attachment to sounds; nonexistent odors are without attachment to odors; nonexistent tastes are without attachment to tastes; nonexistent tangibles are without attachment to tangibles; and nonexistent mental phenomena are without attachment to mental phenomena. Nonexistent visual consciousness is without attachment to [F.88.a] visual consciousness; nonexistent auditory consciousness is without attachment to auditory consciousness; nonexistent olfactory consciousness is without attachment to olfactory consciousness; nonexistent gustatory consciousness is without attachment to gustatory consciousness; nonexistent tactile consciousness is without attachment to tactile consciousness; and nonexistent mental consciousness is without attachment to mental consciousness. Nonexistent visually compounded sensory contact is without attachment to visually compounded sensory contact; nonexistent aurally compounded sensory contact is without attachment to aurally compounded sensory contact; nonexistent nasally compounded sensory contact is without attachment to nasally compounded sensory contact; nonexistent lingually compounded sensory contact is without attachment to lingually compounded sensory contact; nonexistent corporeally compounded sensory contact is without attachment to corporeally compounded sensory contact; and nonexistent mentally compounded sensory contact is without attachment to mentally compounded sensory contact. Nonexistent feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact are without attachment to feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact; nonexistent feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact are without attachment to feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact; nonexistent feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact are without attachment to feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact; nonexistent feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact are without attachment to feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact; nonexistent feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact are without attachment to feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact; and nonexistent feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact are without attachment to feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact.

8.156 “The nonexistent earth element is without attachment to the earth element; the nonexistent [F.88.b] water element is without attachment to the water element; the nonexistent fire element is without attachment to the fire element; the nonexistent wind element is without attachment to the wind element; the nonexistent space element is without attachment to the space element; and the nonexistent consciousness element is without attachment to the consciousness element.

8.157 “Nonexistent ignorance is without attachment to ignorance; nonexistent formative predispositions are without attachment to formative predispositions; nonexistent consciousness is without attachment to consciousness; nonexistent name and form are without attachment to name and form; the nonexistent six sense fields are without attachment to the six sense fields; nonexistent sensory contact is without attachment to sensory contact; nonexistent sensation is without attachment to sensation; nonexistent craving is without attachment to craving; nonexistent grasping is without attachment to grasping; the nonexistent rebirth process is without attachment to the rebirth process; nonexistent birth is without attachment to birth; and nonexistent aging and death are without attachment to aging and death.

8.158 “The nonexistent perfection of generosity is without attachment to the perfection of generosity; the nonexistent perfection of ethical discipline is without attachment to the perfection of ethical discipline; the nonexistent perfection of tolerance is without attachment to the perfection of tolerance; the nonexistent perfection of perseverance is without attachment to the perfection of perseverance; the nonexistent perfection of meditative concentration is without attachment to the perfection of meditative concentration; and the nonexistent perfection of wisdom is without attachment to the perfection of wisdom.

8.159 “The nonexistent emptiness of internal phenomena is without attachment to the emptiness of internal phenomena; the nonexistent emptiness of external phenomena is without attachment to the emptiness of external phenomena; the nonexistent emptiness of external and internal phenomena [F.89.a] is without attachment to the emptiness of external and internal phenomena; the nonexistent emptiness of emptiness is without attachment to the emptiness of emptiness; the nonexistent emptiness of great extent is without attachment to the emptiness of great extent; the nonexistent emptiness of ultimate reality is without attachment to the emptiness of ultimate reality; the nonexistent emptiness of conditioned phenomena is without attachment to the emptiness of conditioned phenomena; the nonexistent emptiness of unconditioned phenomena is without attachment to the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena; the nonexistent emptiness of the unlimited is without attachment to the emptiness of the unlimited; the nonexistent emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end is without attachment to the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end; the nonexistent emptiness of nonexclusion is without attachment to the emptiness of nonexclusion; the nonexistent emptiness of inherent nature is without attachment to the emptiness of inherent nature; the nonexistent emptiness of all phenomena is without attachment to the emptiness of all phenomena; the nonexistent emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics is without attachment to the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics; the nonexistent emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended is without attachment to the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended; the nonexistent emptiness of nonentities is without attachment to the emptiness of nonentities; the nonexistent emptiness of essential nature is without attachment to the emptiness of essential nature; and the nonexistent emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities is without attachment to the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities.

8.160 “The nonexistent applications of mindfulness are without attachment to the applications of mindfulness; the nonexistent correct exertions are without attachment to the correct exertions; the nonexistent supports for miraculous ability are without attachment to the supports for miraculous ability; the nonexistent faculties are without attachment to the faculties; the nonexistent powers are without attachment [F.89.b] to the powers; the nonexistent branches of enlightenment is without attachment to the branches of enlightenment; and the nonexistent noble eightfold path is without attachment to the noble eightfold path.

8.161 “The nonexistent truths of the noble ones are without attachment to the truths of the noble ones; the nonexistent meditative concentrations are without attachment to the meditative concentrations; the nonexistent immeasurable attitudes are without attachment to the immeasurable attitudes; the nonexistent formless absorptions are without attachment to the formless absorptions; the nonexistent liberations are without attachment to the liberations; the nonexistent serial steps of meditative absorption are without attachment to the serial steps of meditative absorption; the nonexistent emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation are without attachment to the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation; the nonexistent extrasensory powers are without attachment to the extrasensory powers; the nonexistent meditative stabilities are without attachment to the meditative stabilities; and the nonexistent dhāraṇī gateways are without attachment to the dhāraṇī gateways.

8.162 “The nonexistent powers of the tathāgatas are without attachment to the powers of the tathāgatas; the nonexistent fearlessnesses are without attachment to the fearlessnesses; the nonexistent kinds of exact knowledge are without attachment to the kinds of exact knowledge; nonexistent great loving kindness is without attachment to great loving kindness; nonexistent great compassion is without attachment to great compassion; and the nonexistent distinct qualities of the buddhas are without attachment to the distinct qualities of the buddhas.

8.163 “Nonexistent omniscience is [F.90.a] without attachment to omniscience; the nonexistent knowledge of the aspects of the path is without attachment to the knowledge of the aspects of the path; and nonexistent all-aspect omniscience is without attachment to the knowledge of all-aspect omniscience.

8.164 “Venerable Śāradvatīputra, bodhisattva great beings who practice the perfection of wisdom in that manner do not apprehend all dharmas, whereby they do not give rise to conceits and do not become fixated, even on the basis of that mind set on enlightenment, a mind that is equal to the unequaled, a mind that is not shared in common with the śrāvakas or pratyekabuddhas. This is why bodhisattvas are called great beings.”

8.165 Then the venerable Pūrṇa Maitrāyaṇīputra said to the Blessed One, “Blessed Lord, I too am inspired to say in what sense bodhisattvas are called great beings.”

“Pūrṇa, be inspired to speak of that!” replied the Blessed One.

8.166 “Blessed Lord,” said Pūrṇa, “they are beings who have donned the great armor. Blessed Lord, they are beings who have entered upon the Great Vehicle. Blessed Lord, they are beings who are mounted on<sup>412</sup> the Great Vehicle. This is why bodhisattvas are called great beings.”

8.167 Then the venerable Śāradvatīputra asked the venerable Pūrṇa Maitrāyaṇīputra, “Venerable Pūrṇa, to what extent are bodhisattva great beings said to have ‘donned the great armor’?”

8.168 “Venerable Śāradvatīputra,” replied Pūrṇa, “in this regard, bodhisattva great beings do not maintain [F.90.b] the perfection of generosity and offer their gifts for the sake of a small or limited number of beings, but they do practice the perfection of generosity and offer their gifts for the sake of all beings. They do not maintain the perfection of ethical discipline and maintain their ethical discipline for the sake of a small or limited number of beings, but they do practice the perfection of ethical discipline and maintain their ethical discipline for the sake of all beings. They do not maintain the perfection of tolerance and cultivate tolerance for the sake of a small or limited number of beings, but they do practice the perfection of tolerance and cultivate tolerance for the sake of all beings. They do not maintain the perfection of perseverance and engage in perseverance for the sake of a small or limited number of beings, but they do practice the perfection of perseverance and engage in perseverance for the sake of all beings. They do not maintain the perfection of meditative concentration and develop meditative concentration for the sake of a small or limited number of beings, but they do practice the perfection of meditative concentration and develop meditative concentration for the sake of all beings. They do not maintain the perfection of wisdom and cultivate wisdom for the sake of a small or limited number of beings, but they do practice the perfection of wisdom and cultivate wisdom for the sake of all beings.

8.169 “Bodhisattva great beings do not don their armor for the sake of a finite number of beings, thinking, ‘Just this many beings I will lead to final nirvāṇa in the expanse of nonresidual nirvāṇa; just this many beings I will not lead to final nirvāṇa. Just this many beings will I establish in enlightenment; just this many beings I will not establish in enlightenment.’ [F.91.a] Rather, bodhisattva great beings don the great armor for the sake of all beings, setting their mind, thinking, ‘I myself should complete the perfection of generosity, and I should also connect all beings with the perfection of generosity. I myself should complete the perfection of ethical discipline, and I should also connect all beings with the perfection of ethical discipline. I myself should complete the perfection of tolerance, and I should also connect all beings with the perfection of tolerance. I myself should complete the perfection of perseverance, and I should also connect all beings with the perfection of perseverance. I myself should complete the perfection of meditative concentration, and I should also connect all beings with the perfection of meditative concentration. And I myself should complete the perfection of wisdom, and I should also connect all beings with the perfection of wisdom.

8.170 “ I myself should complete the emptiness of internal phenomena, and I should also connect all beings with the emptiness of internal phenomena. I myself should complete the emptiness of external phenomena, and I should also connect all beings with the emptiness of external phenomena. I myself should complete the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, and I should also connect all beings with the emptiness of external and internal phenomena. I myself should complete the emptiness of emptiness, and I should also connect all beings with the emptiness of emptiness. I myself should complete the emptiness of great extent, [F.91.b] and I should also connect all beings with the emptiness of great extent. I myself should complete the emptiness of ultimate reality, and I should also connect all beings with the emptiness of ultimate reality. I myself should complete the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, and I should also connect all beings with the emptiness of conditioned phenomena. I myself should complete the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, and I should also connect all beings with the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena. I myself should complete the emptiness of the unlimited, and I should also connect all beings with the emptiness of the unlimited. I myself should complete the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, and I should also connect all beings with the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end. I myself should complete the emptiness of nonexclusion, and I should also connect all beings with the emptiness of nonexclusion. I myself should complete the emptiness of inherent nature, and I should also connect all beings with the emptiness of inherent nature. I myself should complete the emptiness of all phenomena, and I should also connect all beings with the emptiness of all phenomena. I myself should complete the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, and I should also connect all beings with the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics. I myself should complete the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, and I should also connect all beings with the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended. I myself should complete the emptiness of nonentities, and I should also connect all beings with the emptiness of nonentities. I myself [F.92.a] should complete the emptiness of essential nature, and I should also connect all beings with the emptiness of essential nature. And I myself should complete the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities, and I should also connect all beings with the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities.

- 8.171 “ ‘I myself should maintain the four applications of mindfulness, and I should also connect all beings with the four applications of mindfulness. I myself should maintain the four correct exertions, and I should also connect all beings with the four correct exertions. I myself should maintain the four supports for miraculous ability, and I should also connect all beings with the four supports for miraculous ability. I myself should maintain the five faculties, and I should also connect all beings with the five faculties. I myself should maintain the five powers, and I should also connect all beings with the five powers. I myself should maintain the seven branches of enlightenment, and I should also connect all beings with the seven branches of enlightenment. I myself should maintain the noble eightfold path, and I should also connect all beings with the noble eightfold path.
- 8.172 “ ‘I myself should maintain the truths of the noble ones, and I should also connect all beings with the truths of the noble ones. I myself should maintain the meditative concentrations, and I should also connect all beings with the meditative concentrations. I myself should maintain the immeasurable attitudes, and I should also connect all beings with the immeasurable attitudes. I myself should maintain the formless absorptions, and I should also connect all [F.92.b] beings with the formless absorptions.
- 8.173 “ ‘I myself should maintain the eight liberations, and I should also connect all beings with the eight liberations. I myself should maintain the nine serial steps of meditative absorption, and I should also connect all beings with the nine serial steps of meditative absorption. I myself should maintain the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation, and I should also connect all beings with the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation. I myself should maintain the extrasensory powers, and I should also connect all beings with the extrasensory powers. I myself should maintain the meditative stabilities, and I should also connect all beings with the meditative stabilities. I myself should maintain the dhāraṇī gateways, and I should also connect all beings with the dhāraṇī gateways. I myself should maintain the ten powers of the tathāgatas, and I should also connect all beings with the ten powers of the tathāgatas. I myself should maintain the four fearlessnesses, and I should also connect all beings with the four fearlessnesses. I myself should maintain the four kinds of exact knowledge, and I should also connect all beings with the four kinds of exact knowledge. I myself should maintain great compassion, and I should also connect all beings with great compassion. I myself should maintain the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas, and I should also connect all beings with the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas.’ Venerable Śāradvatīputra, [F.93.a] it is to that extent that bodhisattva great beings are said to have ‘donned the great armor.’

- 8.174 “Moreover, Venerable Śāradvatīputra, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom, the acts of generosity that they undertake are undertaken not with attention connected with śrāvakas or pratyekabuddhas, but with their attention directed toward all-aspect omniscience. Making common cause with all beings, they dedicate the roots of their virtue to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. This is the armor of the perfection of generosity of bodhisattva great beings undertaking acts of generosity while practicing the perfection of wisdom.
- 8.175 “Moreover, Venerable Śāradvatīputra, bodhisattva great beings undertaking acts of generosity with their attention directed toward all-aspect omniscience do not dedicate it with the aim of the levels of the śrāvakas or pratyekabuddhas. This is the armor of the perfection of ethical discipline of bodhisattva great beings undertaking acts of generosity while practicing the perfection of wisdom.
- 8.176 “Moreover, Venerable Śāradvatīputra, bodhisattva great beings undertaking acts of generosity with their attention directed toward all-aspect omniscience endure, appreciate, and bear<sup>413</sup> phenomena. This is the armor of the perfection of tolerance of bodhisattva great beings undertaking acts of generosity while practicing the perfection of wisdom.
- 8.177 “Moreover, Venerable Śāradvatīputra, when bodhisattva great beings undertake acts of generosity, with their attention directed toward all-aspect omniscience they do not decline in their perseverance. [F.93.b] This is the armor of the perfection of perseverance of bodhisattva great beings undertaking acts of generosity while practicing the perfection of wisdom.
- 8.178 “Moreover, Venerable Śāradvatīputra, when bodhisattva great beings undertake acts of generosity, with their attention thus directed toward all-aspect omniscience they make their minds one-pointed, and because of their single focus on that do not allow an opportunity for minds connected with the śrāvakas or pratyekabuddhas to develop. This is the armor of the perfection of meditative concentration of bodhisattva great beings undertaking acts of generosity while practicing the perfection of wisdom.
- 8.179 “Moreover, Venerable Śāradvatīputra, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom and undertake acts of generosity, with their attention thus directed toward all-aspect omniscience they maintain the perception that all phenomena are illusions that have been conjured up and do not apprehend the giver, do not apprehend the gift, and do not apprehend the recipient. This is the armor of the perfection of wisdom of bodhisattva great beings undertaking acts of generosity while practicing the perfection of wisdom.

- 8.180 “Moreover, Venerable Śāradvatīputra, you should know that when bodhisattva great beings, with their attention directed toward all-aspect omniscience, neither entertain mental images of those perfections nor apprehend them, then they are bodhisattva great beings practicing the perfection of wisdom who have donned the armor of the perfection of generosity.
- 8.181 “Moreover, Venerable Śāradvatīputra, bodhisattva great beings who practice the perfection of ethical discipline, with their attention directed toward all-aspect omniscience, [F.94.a] undertake acts of generosity and, making common cause with all beings, dedicate them, by way of not apprehending anything, to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. This is the perfection of generosity of bodhisattva great beings practicing the perfection of ethical discipline.
- 8.182 “Moreover, Venerable Śāradvatīputra, bodhisattva great beings practicing the perfection of ethical discipline, with their attention directed toward all-aspect omniscience, do not hanker for the levels of the śrāvakas or pratyekabuddhas, and much less still for the levels of ordinary people. This is the perfection of ethical discipline of bodhisattva great beings practicing the perfection of ethical discipline.
- 8.183 “Moreover, Venerable Śāradvatīputra, bodhisattva great beings practicing the perfection of ethical discipline, with their attention directed toward all-aspect omniscience, endure, appreciate, and bear phenomena. This is the perfection of tolerance of bodhisattva great beings practicing the perfection of ethical discipline.
- 8.184 “Moreover, Venerable Śāradvatīputra, bodhisattva great beings practicing the perfection of ethical discipline, with their attention directed toward all-aspect omniscience, do not decline in their perseverance. This is the perfection of perseverance of bodhisattva great beings practicing the perfection of ethical discipline.
- 8.185 “Moreover, Venerable Śāradvatīputra, when bodhisattva great beings practice and maintain the perfection of ethical discipline, with their attention directed toward all-aspect omniscience, they do not allow an opportunity for minds connected with the śrāvakas [F.94.b] or pratyekabuddhas to develop, and, making common cause with all beings, they dedicate the roots of their virtue to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. This is the perfection of meditative concentration of bodhisattva great beings practicing the perfection of ethical discipline.
- 8.186 “Moreover, Venerable Śāradvatīputra, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of ethical discipline, not with attention connected with śrāvakas or pratyekabuddhas, but with their attention directed toward all-aspect omniscience, they maintain the perception that all phenomena are illusions that have been conjured up and do not give rise to conceit on the basis of that ethical discipline. They also do not apprehend that ethical discipline, owing to the emptiness of an inherent existence, and making common cause with all beings, dedicate the roots of their virtue to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. This is the perfection of wisdom of bodhisattva great beings practicing the perfection of ethical discipline.

8.187 “Moreover, Venerable Śāradvatīputra, bodhisattva great beings practicing the perfection of ethical discipline in that manner retain all six perfections, therefore they are said to have ‘donned the great armor.’

8.188 “Moreover, Venerable Śāradvatīputra, bodhisattva great beings who practice the perfection of tolerance, not with attention connected with śrāvakas or pratyekabuddhas, but with their attention directed toward all-aspect omniscience, undertake acts of generosity, and, making common cause with all beings, they dedicate the roots of virtue to unsurpassed, [F.95.a] perfectly complete enlightenment. This is the perfection of generosity of bodhisattva great beings practicing the perfection of tolerance.

8.189 “Moreover, Venerable Śāradvatīputra, bodhisattva great beings who practice the perfection of tolerance, not with attention connected with śrāvakas or pratyekabuddhas, but with their attention directed toward all-aspect omniscience, maintain ethical discipline, and, making common cause with all beings, dedicate the roots of virtue to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. This is the perfection of ethical discipline of bodhisattva great beings practicing the perfection of tolerance.

8.190 “Moreover, Venerable Śāradvatīputra, bodhisattva great beings who practice the perfection of tolerance, with their attention directed toward all-aspect omniscience endure, appreciate, and bear phenomena. This is the perfection of tolerance of bodhisattva great beings practicing the perfection of tolerance.

8.191 “Moreover, Venerable Śāradvatīputra, bodhisattva great beings who practice the perfection of tolerance, not with attention connected with śrāvakas or pratyekabuddhas, but with their attention directed toward all-aspect omniscience, do not decline in their perseverance. This is the perfection of perseverance of bodhisattva great beings practicing the perfection of tolerance.

8.192 “Moreover, Venerable Śāradvatīputra, bodhisattva great beings who practice the perfection of tolerance, not with attention connected with śrāvakas or pratyekabuddhas, but with their attention [F.95.b] directed toward all-aspect omniscience make their minds one-pointed. This is the perfection of meditative concentration of bodhisattva great beings practicing the perfection of tolerance.

- 8.193 “Moreover, Venerable Śāradvatīputra, bodhisattva great beings who practice the perfection of tolerance, not with attention connected with śrāvakas or pratyekabuddhas, but with their attention directed toward all-aspect omniscience, maintain the perception that all phenomena are illusions that have been conjured up but do not give rise to conceits on the basis of that tolerance and also do not apprehend that tolerance. This is the perfection of wisdom of bodhisattva great beings practicing the perfection of tolerance.
- 8.194 “Moreover, Venerable Śāradvatīputra, bodhisattva great beings practicing the perfection of tolerance in that manner retain all six perfections, therefore they are said to have ‘donned the great armor.’
- 8.195 “Moreover, Venerable Śāradvatīputra, bodhisattva great beings who practice the perfection of tolerance, not with attention connected with śrāvakas or pratyekabuddhas, but with their attention directed towards all-aspect omniscience, undertake acts of generosity and, making common cause with all beings, dedicate the roots of virtue to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. This is the perfection of generosity of bodhisattva great beings practicing the perfection of tolerance.
- 8.196 “Moreover, Venerable Śāradvatīputra, bodhisattva great beings who practice the perfection of perseverance, not with attention connected with śrāvakas or pratyekabuddhas, but [F.96.a] with their attention directed toward all-aspect omniscience, maintain ethical discipline and, making common cause with all beings, dedicate the roots of virtue to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. This is the perfection of ethical discipline of bodhisattva great beings practicing the perfection of perseverance.
- 8.197 “Moreover, Venerable Śāradvatīputra, bodhisattva great beings who practice the perfection of perseverance, not with attention connected with śrāvakas or pratyekabuddhas, but with their attention directed toward all-aspect omniscience, endure, appreciate, and bear phenomena. This is the perfection of tolerance of bodhisattva great beings practicing the perfection of perseverance.
- 8.198 “Moreover, Venerable Śāradvatīputra, bodhisattva great beings who practice the perfection of perseverance, not with attention connected with śrāvakas or pratyekabuddhas, but with their attention directed toward all-aspect omniscience, for the sake of all beings do not decline in their perseverance. This is the perfection of perseverance of bodhisattva great beings practicing the perfection of perseverance.
- 8.199 “Moreover, Venerable Śāradvatīputra, bodhisattva great beings who practice the perfection of perseverance, not with attention connected with śrāvakas or pratyekabuddhas, but with their attention directed toward all-

- aspect omniscience, make their minds one-pointed. This is the perfection of meditative concentration [F.96.b] of bodhisattva great beings practicing the perfection of perseverance.
- 8.200 “Moreover, Venerable Śāradvatīputra, bodhisattva great beings who practice the perfection of perseverance, not with attention connected with śrāvakas or pratyekabuddhas, but with their attention directed toward all-aspect omniscience, maintain the perception that all phenomena are illusions that have been conjured up but do not give rise to conceits on the basis of that perseverance and also do not apprehend that perseverance. This is the perfection of wisdom of bodhisattva great beings practicing the perfection of perseverance.
- 8.201 “Moreover, Venerable Śāradvatīputra, bodhisattva great beings practicing the perfection of perseverance in that manner incorporate all six perfections, therefore they are said to have ‘donned the great armor.’
- 8.202 “Moreover, Venerable Śāradvatīputra, bodhisattva great beings who practice the perfection of meditative concentration, not with attention connected with śrāvakas or pratyekabuddhas, but with their attention directed toward all-aspect omniscience, undertake acts of generosity and, making common cause with all beings, dedicate the roots of virtue to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. This is the perfection of generosity of bodhisattva great beings practicing the perfection of meditative concentration.
- 8.203 “Moreover, Venerable Śāradvatīputra, bodhisattva great beings who practice the perfection of meditative concentration, [F.97.a] not with attention connected with śrāvakas or pratyekabuddhas, but with their attention directed toward all-aspect omniscience, maintain ethical discipline and, making common cause with all beings, dedicate the roots of virtue to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. This is the perfection of ethical discipline of bodhisattva great beings practicing the perfection of meditative concentration.
- 8.204 “Moreover, Venerable Śāradvatīputra, bodhisattva great beings who practice the perfection of meditative concentration, not with attention connected with śrāvakas or pratyekabuddhas, but with their attention directed toward all-aspect omniscience, cultivate tolerance, and, making common cause with all beings, dedicate the roots of virtue to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. This is the perfection of tolerance of bodhisattva great beings practicing the perfection of meditative concentration.
- 8.205 “Moreover, Venerable Śāradvatīputra, bodhisattva great beings who practice the perfection of meditative concentration, not with attention connected with śrāvakas or pratyekabuddhas, but with their attention directed toward all-aspect omniscience, do not decline in their perseverance, and, making common cause with all beings, dedicate the roots of virtue to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. This is the perfection of perseverance of bodhisattva great beings practicing the perfection of meditative concentration.

8.206 “Moreover, Venerable Śāradvatīputra, bodhisattva [F.97.b] great beings who practice the perfection of meditative concentration with their attention directed toward all-aspect omniscience make their minds one-pointed, and, because of their single focus on that, do not allow an opportunity for attention connected with the śrāvakas or pratyekabuddhas. They make common cause with all beings, and dedicate the roots of virtue to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. This is the perfection of meditative concentration of bodhisattva great beings practicing the perfection of meditative concentration.

8.207 “Moreover, Venerable Śāradvatīputra, bodhisattva great beings who practice the perfection of meditative concentration maintain the perception that all phenomena are illusions that have been conjured up but do not give rise to conceits on the basis of that meditative concentration and do not apprehend that meditative concentration. They make common cause with all beings, and dedicate the roots of virtue to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. This is the perfection of wisdom of bodhisattva great beings practicing the perfection of meditative concentration.

8.208 “Moreover, Venerable Śāradvatīputra, bodhisattva great beings practicing the perfection of meditative concentration in that manner incorporate all six perfections, therefore they are said to have ‘donned the great armor.’

8.209 “Moreover, Venerable Śāradvatīputra, bodhisattva great beings who practice the perfection of wisdom, not with attention connected with śrāvakas or pratyekabuddhas, but with their attention directed toward all-aspect omniscience, undertake acts of generosity [F.98.a] purified of the three spheres [of giver, gift, and recipient], and, making common cause with all beings, dedicate the roots of virtue to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. This is the perfection of generosity of bodhisattva great beings practicing the perfection of wisdom.

8.210 “Moreover, Venerable Śāradvatīputra, bodhisattva great beings who practice the perfection of wisdom, not with attention connected with śrāvakas or pratyekabuddhas, but with their attention directed toward all-aspect omniscience, maintain ethical discipline and, making common cause with all beings, dedicate the roots of virtue to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. This is the perfection of ethical discipline of bodhisattva great beings practicing the perfection of wisdom.

- 8.211 “Moreover, Venerable Śāradvatīputra, bodhisattva great beings who practice the perfection of wisdom, not with attention connected with śrāvakas or pratyekabuddhas, but with their attention directed toward all-aspect omniscience, endure, appreciate, and bear phenomena, and, making common cause with all beings, dedicate the roots of virtue to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. This is the perfection of tolerance of bodhisattva great beings practicing the perfection of wisdom.
- 8.212 “Moreover, Venerable Śāradvatīputra, bodhisattva great beings who practice the perfection of wisdom, not with attention connected with śrāvakas or pratyekabuddhas, but with their attention directed toward [F.98.b] all-aspect omniscience, do not decline in their perseverance, and, making common cause with all beings, dedicate the roots of virtue to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. This is the perfection of perseverance of bodhisattva great beings practicing the perfection of wisdom.
- 8.213 “Moreover, Venerable Śāradvatīputra, bodhisattva great beings who practice the perfection of wisdom, not with attention connected with śrāvakas or pratyekabuddhas, but with their attention directed toward all-aspect omniscience, make their minds one-pointed, and, making common cause with all beings, dedicate the roots of virtue to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. This is the perfection of meditative stability of bodhisattva great beings practicing the perfection of wisdom.
- 8.214 “Moreover, Venerable Śāradvatīputra, bodhisattva great beings who practice the perfection of perseverance, not with attention connected with śrāvakas or pratyekabuddhas, but with their attention directed toward all-aspect omniscience, maintain the perception that all phenomena are illusions that have been conjured up, but do not give rise to conceits on the basis of that perfection of wisdom, and, making common cause with all beings, they dedicate the roots of virtue to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. This is the perfection of wisdom of bodhisattva great beings practicing the perfection of wisdom.
- 8.215 “Venerable Śāradvatīputra, once bodhisattva great beings, with their minds directed toward all-aspect omniscience, neither [F.99.a] entertain mental images of these perfections, beings, or enlightenment nor apprehend them, that is the great armor of the six perfections of bodhisattva great beings who practice the perfection of wisdom. Venerable Śāradvatīputra, bodhisattva great beings maintain each of the perfections in that manner and perfect all six perfections.
- 8.216 “Moreover, Venerable Śāradvatīputra, bodhisattva great beings become absorbed in the meditative concentrations, the immeasurable attitudes, and the formless absorptions, but they do not at all relish those meditative concentrations, immeasurable attitudes, and formless absorptions. They are not captivated by those meditative concentrations, immeasurable attitudes, and formless absorptions, and they will not be subject to rebirth on account of those meditative concentrations, immeasurable attitudes, and formless absorptions. This, Venerable Śāradvatīputra, is the perfection of wisdom of bodhisattva great beings in association with skillful means.

8.217 “Moreover, Venerable Śāradvatīputra, bodhisattva great beings become absorbed in the meditative concentrations, immeasurable attitudes, and formless absorptions through their vision of detachment and their vision of emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness, but they will not be subject to rebirth on account of them, nor will they actualize the very limit of reality, but still, they will overwhelm<sup>414</sup> all śrāvakas and pratyekabuddhas. This, Venerable Śāradvatīputra, is the great armor of skillful means of bodhisattva great beings who practice the perfection of wisdom. [F.99.b] Venerable Śāradvatīputra, it is in this way that bodhisattva great beings are said to have ‘donned the great armor.’ [B8]

8.218 “Venerable Śāradvatīputra, when bodhisattva great beings have donned the great armor in such ways, the blessed lord buddhas who reside in the world systems of the eastern direction, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā, cry out cries of delight and proclaim their names. They raise their voices and shout out loud,<sup>415</sup> ‘This bodhisattva great being, in such and such a world system, has donned such great armor, is bringing beings to maturity, is refining a buddhafiield, and is playing with the miraculous abilities!’ The blessed lord buddhas who reside in the world systems of the southern direction, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā, cry out cries of delight and proclaim their names. They raise their voices and shout out loud, ‘This bodhisattva great being, in such and such a world system, has donned such great armor, is bringing beings to maturity, is refining a buddhafiield, and is playing with the miraculous abilities!’ The blessed lord buddhas who reside in the world systems of the western direction, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā, cry out cries of delight and proclaim their names. They raise their voices and shout out loud, ‘This bodhisattva great being, in such and such a world system, has donned such great armor, is bringing beings to maturity, is refining a buddhafiield, and is playing with [F.100.a] the miraculous abilities!’ The blessed lord buddhas who reside in the world systems of the northern direction, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā, cry out cries of delight and proclaim their names. They raise their voices and shout out loud, ‘This bodhisattva great being, in such and such a world system, has donned such great armor, is bringing beings to maturity, is refining a buddhafiield, and is playing with the miraculous abilities!’ The blessed lord buddhas who reside in the world systems of the intermediate northeastern direction, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā, cry out cries of delight and proclaim their names. They raise their voices and shout out loud, ‘This bodhisattva great being, in such and such a world system, has donned such great armor, is bringing beings to maturity, is refining a buddhafiield, and is playing with the miraculous abilities!’ The blessed lord buddhas who reside in the world systems of the intermediate southeastern direction, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā, cry out cries of delight and proclaim their names. They raise their voices and shout out loud, ‘This bodhisattva great being, in such and such a world system, has donned such great armor, is bringing beings to maturity, is refining a buddhafiield, and is playing with the miraculous abilities!’ The blessed lord buddhas who reside in the world systems of the intermediate southwestern direction, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā, cry out cries of delight and proclaim their names. They raise their voices and shout out loud, ‘This bodhisattva great being, [F.100.b] in such and such a world system, has donned such great armor, is bringing beings to maturity, is refining a buddhafiield, and is playing with the miraculous abilities!’ The blessed lord buddhas who reside in the world systems of the intermediate northwestern direction, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā, cry out cries of delight and proclaim their names. They raise their voices and shout out loud, ‘This bodhisattva great being, in such and such a world system, has donned such great armor, is bringing beings to maturity, is refining a buddhafiield, and is playing with the miraculous abilities!’ The blessed lord buddhas who reside in the world systems in the direction of the nadir, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā, cry out cries of delight and proclaim their names. They raise their voices and shout out loud, ‘This bodhisattva great being, in such and such a world system, has donned such great armor, is bringing beings to maturity, is refining a buddhafiield, and is playing with the miraculous abilities!’ the blessed lord buddhas who reside in the world systems in the direction of the zenith, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā, cry out cries of delight and proclaim their names. They raise their voices and shout out loud, ‘This bodhisattva great being, in such and such a world system, has donned such great armor, is bringing beings to maturity, is refining a buddhafiield, and is playing with the miraculous abilities!’ ”

8.219 Śāradvatīputra then asked, “Venerable [F.101.a] Pūrṇa, to what extent is it said that bodhisattva great beings ‘have entered upon the Great Vehicle,’ and what is the Great Vehicle of the bodhisattva great beings?”

8.220 “Venerable Śāradvatīputra,” replied Pūrṇa, “here bodhisattva great beings who practice the six perfections, while practicing the perfection of generosity, achieve and then maintain the first meditative concentration that is detached from sense objects, detached from negative and nonvirtuous attributes, has an initial mental application and a sustained mental application, and is endowed with the joy and the bliss that arise from detachment. Having pacified the initial mental application and the sustained mental application, with inner serene confidence—which is to say, a mind that has become single-pointed—they achieve and maintain the second meditative concentration endowed with the joy and bliss that arise from meditative stability. On account of having no attachment to the joy, dwelling with mindfulness and alertness in equanimity they experience the bliss with their bodies and achieve and maintain the third meditative concentration devoid of joy, about which the noble ones say, ‘They are mindful, abiding in bliss, and equanimous.’ On account of having earlier abandoned the bliss, abandoned suffering, and caused mental happiness and mental unhappiness to subside, with equanimity and mindfulness they achieve and maintain the fourth meditative concentration without bliss and suffering.<sup>416</sup>

8.221 “They permeate the world systems in the ten directions, within the whole infinity of the realm of phenomena and the very reaches of the realm of space, with a mind endowed with a loving kindness that is vast, extensive, nondual, immeasurable, without enmity, free from harm, without rivalry, perfected, and well cultivated, remaining [F.101.b] intent on and maintaining it. They permeate the world systems in the ten directions, within the whole infinity of the realm of phenomena and the very reaches of the realm of space, with a mind endowed with a compassion that is vast, extensive, nondual, immeasurable, without enmity, free from harm, without rivalry, perfected, and well cultivated, remaining intent on and maintaining it. They permeate the world systems in the ten directions, within the whole infinity of the realm of phenomena and the very reaches of the realm of space, with a mind endowed with an empathetic joy that is vast, extensive, nondual, immeasurable, without enmity, free from harm, without rivalry, perfected, and well cultivated, remaining intent on and maintaining it. They permeate the world systems in the ten directions, within the whole infinity of the realm of phenomena and the very reaches of the realm of space, with a mind endowed with an equanimity, by way of not apprehending anything, that is vast, extensive, nondual, immeasurable, without enmity, free from harm, without rivalry, perfected, and well cultivated, remaining intent on and maintaining it. Having completely transcended the perception of physical forms so that perceptions of obstruction have subsided, they do not direct their attention to diverse perceptions and achieve and maintain the sphere of infinite space, thinking, ‘Space is infinite.’ Having completely transcended the sphere of infinite space in all respects, they achieve and maintain the sphere of infinite consciousness, thinking, ‘Consciousness is infinite.’

Having completely transcended the sphere of infinite consciousness in all respects, they achieve and maintain the sphere of nothing-at-all, thinking, 'There is nothing at all.' Having completely transcended [F.102.a] the sphere of nothing-at-all, they achieve and maintain the sphere of neither perception nor nonperception<sup>417</sup> by way of not apprehending anything. This is the meditative concentration of bodhisattva great beings, and once the bodhisattva great beings, absorbed in these meditative concentrations, these immeasurable attitudes, and these formless states, via the aspects, tokens, and signs of space,<sup>418</sup> have arisen from them they dedicate the merit to all-aspect omniscience. This is the perfection of generosity of bodhisattva great beings.

8.222 "While they practice the perfection of ethical discipline, they achieve and then maintain the first meditative concentration that is detached from sense objects, detached from negative and nonvirtuous attributes, has an initial mental application and a sustained mental application, and is endowed with the joy and the bliss that arise from detachment. Having pacified the initial mental application and the sustained mental application, with inner serene confidence—which is to say, a mind that has become single-pointed—they achieve and maintain the second meditative concentration endowed with the joy and bliss that arise from meditative stability. On account of having no attachment to the joy, dwelling with mindfulness and alertness in equanimity they experience the bliss with their bodies and achieve and maintain the third meditative concentration devoid of joy, about which the noble ones say, 'They are mindful, abiding in bliss, and equanimous.' On account of having earlier abandoned the bliss, abandoned suffering, and caused mental happiness and mental unhappiness to subside, with equanimity and mindfulness they achieve and maintain [F.102.b] the fourth meditative concentration without bliss and suffering. They permeate the world systems in the ten directions, within the whole infinity of the realm of phenomena and the very reaches of the realm of space, with a mind endowed with a loving kindness that is vast, extensive, nondual, immeasurable, without enmity, free from harm, without rivalry, perfected, and well cultivated, remaining intent on and maintaining it. They permeate the world systems in the ten directions, within the whole infinity of the realm of phenomena and the very reaches of the realm of space, with a mind endowed with a compassion that is vast, extensive, nondual, immeasurable, without enmity, free from harm, without rivalry, perfected, and well cultivated, remaining intent on and maintaining it. They permeate the world systems in the ten directions, within the whole infinity of the realm of phenomena and the very reaches of the realm of space, with a mind endowed with an empathetic joy that is vast, extensive, nondual, immeasurable, without enmity, free from harm, without rivalry, perfected, and well cultivated, remaining intent on and maintaining it. They permeate the world systems in the ten directions, within the whole infinity of the realm of phenomena and the very reaches of the realm of space, with a mind endowed with an equanimity, by way of not apprehending anything, that is vast, extensive, nondual, immeasurable, without enmity, free from harm, without rivalry, perfected, and well cultivated, remaining intent on and maintaining it. Having completely transcended the perception of physical forms so that perceptions of obstruction have subsided, they do not direct their attention to diverse perceptions and achieve and maintain the sphere of infinite space, thinking, 'Space is infinite.' Having completely transcended [F.103.a] the sphere of infinite space in all respects, they achieve and maintain the sphere of infinite consciousness, thinking, 'Consciousness is infinite.' Having completely transcended the sphere of infinite consciousness in all respects, they achieve and maintain the sphere of nothing-at-all, thinking, 'There is nothing at all.' Having completely transcended the sphere of nothing-at-all, they achieve and maintain the sphere of neither perception nor nonperception by way of not apprehending anything. This is the meditative concentration of bodhisattva great beings, and once the bodhisattva great beings, absorbed in these meditative concentrations, these immeasurable attitudes, and these formless states, via the aspects, tokens, and signs of space, have arisen from them they dedicate the merit to all-aspect omniscience. This is the perfection of ethical discipline of bodhisattva great beings.

8.223      "While they practice the perfection of tolerance, they achieve and then maintain the first meditative concentration that is detached from sense objects, detached from negative and nonvirtuous attributes, has an initial mental application and a sustained mental application, and is endowed with the joy and the bliss that arise from detachment. Having pacified the initial mental application and the sustained mental application, with inner serene confidence—which is to say, a mind that has become single-pointed—they achieve and maintain the second meditative concentration endowed with the joy and bliss that arise from meditative stability. On account of having no attachment to the joy, dwelling with mindfulness and alertness in equanimity they experience the bliss with their bodies and achieve and maintain the third meditative concentration devoid of joy, about which the noble ones say, 'They are mindful, abiding in bliss, [F.103.b] and equanimous.' On account of having earlier abandoned the bliss, abandoned suffering, and caused mental happiness and mental unhappiness to subside, with equanimity and mindfulness they achieve and maintain the fourth meditative concentration without bliss and suffering. They permeate the world systems in the ten directions, within the whole infinity of the realm of phenomena and the very reaches of the realm of space, with a mind endowed with a loving kindness that is vast, extensive, nondual, immeasurable, without enmity, free from harm, without rivalry, perfected, and well cultivated, remaining intent on and maintaining it. They permeate the world systems in the ten directions, within the whole infinity of the realm of phenomena and the very reaches of the realm of space, with a mind endowed with a compassion that is vast, extensive, nondual, immeasurable, without enmity, free from harm, without rivalry, perfected, and well cultivated, remaining intent on and maintaining it. They permeate the world systems in the ten directions, within the whole infinity of the realm of phenomena and the very reaches of the realm of space, with a mind endowed with an empathetic joy that is vast, extensive, nondual, immeasurable, without enmity, free from harm, without rivalry, perfected, and well cultivated, remaining intent on and maintaining it. They permeate the world systems in the ten directions, [F.104.a] within the whole infinity of the realm of phenomena and the very reaches of the realm of space, with a mind endowed with an equanimity, by way of not apprehending anything, that is vast, extensive, nondual, immeasurable, without enmity, free from harm, without rivalry, perfected, and well cultivated, remaining intent on and maintaining it. Having completely transcended the perception of physical forms so that perceptions of obstruction have subsided, they do not direct their attention to diverse perceptions and achieve and maintain the sphere of infinite space, thinking, 'Space is infinite.' Having completely transcended the sphere of infinite space in all respects, they achieve and maintain the sphere of infinite consciousness, thinking, 'Consciousness is infinite.' Having completely transcended the sphere of infinite consciousness in all respects, they achieve and maintain the sphere of nothing-at-all, thinking, 'There is nothing at all.' Having completely transcended the sphere of nothing-at-all, they achieve and maintain the sphere of neither perception nor nonperception by way of not apprehending anything. This is the meditative concentration of bodhisattva great beings, and once the bodhisattva great beings, absorbed in these meditative concentrations, these immeasurable attitudes, and these formless states, via the aspects, tokens, and signs of space, have arisen from them they dedicate the merit to all-aspect omniscience. This is the perfection of tolerance of bodhisattva great beings.

8.224      "While they practice the perfection of perseverance, they achieve and then maintain [F.104.b] the first meditative concentration that is detached from sense objects, detached from negative and nonvirtuous attributes, has an initial mental application and a sustained mental application, and is endowed with the joy and the bliss that arise from detachment. Having pacified the initial mental application and the sustained mental application, with inner serene confidence—which is to say, a mind that has become single-pointed—they achieve and maintain the second meditative concentration endowed with the joy and bliss that arise from meditative stability. On account of having no attachment to the joy, dwelling with mindfulness and alertness in equanimity they experience the bliss with their bodies and achieve and maintain the third meditative concentration devoid of joy, about which the noble ones say, ‘They are mindful, abiding in bliss, and equanimous.’ On account of having earlier abandoned the bliss, abandoned suffering, and caused mental happiness and mental unhappiness to subside, with equanimity and mindfulness they achieve and maintain the fourth meditative concentration without bliss and suffering. They permeate the world systems in the ten directions, within the whole infinity of the realm of phenomena and the very reaches of the realm of space, with a mind endowed with a loving kindness that is vast, extensive, nondual, immeasurable, without enmity, free from harm, without rivalry, perfected, and well cultivated, remaining intent on and maintaining it. They permeate the world systems in the ten directions, within the whole infinity of the realm of phenomena and the very reaches of the realm of space, with a mind endowed with a compassion that is vast, extensive, nondual, immeasurable, without enmity, free from harm, without rivalry, perfected, and well cultivated, remaining intent on and maintaining it. [F.105.a] They permeate the world systems in the ten directions, within the whole infinity of the realm of phenomena and the very reaches of the realm of space, with a mind endowed with an empathetic joy that is vast, extensive, nondual, immeasurable, without enmity, free from harm, without rivalry, perfected, and well cultivated, remaining intent on and maintaining it. They permeate the world systems in the ten directions, within the whole infinity of the realm of phenomena and the very reaches of the realm of space, with a mind endowed with an equanimity, by way of not apprehending anything, that is vast, extensive, nondual, immeasurable, without enmity, free from harm, without rivalry, perfected, and well cultivated, remaining intent on and maintaining it. Having completely transcended the perception of physical forms so that perceptions of obstruction have subsided, they do not direct their attention to diverse perceptions and achieve and maintain the sphere of infinite space, thinking, ‘Space is infinite.’ Having completely transcended the sphere of infinite space in all respects, they achieve and maintain the sphere of infinite consciousness, thinking, ‘Consciousness is infinite.’ Having completely transcended the sphere of infinite consciousness in all respects, they achieve and maintain the sphere of nothing-at-all, thinking,

'There is nothing at all.' Having completely transcended the sphere of nothing-at-all, they achieve and maintain the sphere of neither perception nor nonperception by way of not apprehending anything. This is the meditative concentration of bodhisattva great beings, and once the bodhisattva great beings, [F.105.b] absorbed in these meditative concentrations, these immeasurable attitudes, and these formless states, via the aspects, tokens, and signs of space, have arisen from them they dedicate the merit to all-aspect omniscience. This is the perfection of perseverance of bodhisattva great beings.

8.225 "While they practice the perfection of meditative concentration, they achieve and then maintain the first meditative concentration that is detached from sense objects, detached from negative and nonvirtuous attributes, has an initial mental application and a sustained mental application, and is endowed with the joy and the bliss that arise from detachment. Having pacified the initial mental application and the sustained mental application, with inner serene confidence—which is to say, a mind that has become single-pointed—they achieve and maintain the second meditative concentration endowed with the joy and bliss that arise from meditative stability. On account of having no attachment to the joy, dwelling with mindfulness and alertness in equanimity they experience the bliss with their bodies and achieve and maintain the third meditative concentration devoid of joy, about which the noble ones say, 'They are mindful, abiding in bliss, and equanimous.' On account of having earlier abandoned the bliss, abandoned suffering, and caused mental happiness and mental unhappiness to subside, with equanimity and mindfulness they achieve and maintain the fourth meditative concentration without bliss and suffering. They permeate the world systems in the ten directions, within the whole infinity of the realm of phenomena and the very reaches of the realm of space, with a mind endowed with a loving kindness that is vast, extensive, nondual, immeasurable, without enmity, free from harm, without rivalry, perfected, and well cultivated, [F.106.a] remaining intent on and maintaining it. They permeate the world systems in the ten directions, within the whole infinity of the realm of phenomena and the very reaches of the realm of space, with a mind endowed with a compassion that is vast, extensive, nondual, immeasurable, without enmity, free from harm, without rivalry, perfected, and well cultivated, remaining intent on and maintaining it. They permeate the world systems in the ten directions, within the whole infinity of the realm of phenomena and the very reaches of the realm of space, with a mind endowed with an empathetic joy that is vast, extensive, nondual, immeasurable, without enmity, free from harm, without rivalry, perfected, and well cultivated, remaining intent on and maintaining it. They permeate the world systems in the ten directions, within the whole infinity of the realm of phenomena and the very reaches of the realm of space, with a mind endowed with an equanimity, by way of not apprehending anything, that is vast, extensive, nondual, immeasurable, without enmity, free from harm, without rivalry, perfected, and well cultivated, remaining intent on and maintaining it. Having completely transcended the perception of physical forms so that perceptions of obstruction have subsided, they do not direct their attention to diverse perceptions and achieve and maintain the sphere of infinite space, thinking, 'Space is infinite.' Having completely transcended the sphere of infinite space in all respects, they achieve and maintain the sphere of infinite consciousness, thinking, 'Consciousness is infinite.' Having completely transcended the sphere of infinite consciousness in all respects, [F.106.b] they achieve and maintain the sphere of nothing-at-all, thinking, 'There is nothing at all.' Having completely transcended the sphere of nothing-at-all, they achieve and maintain the sphere of neither perception nor nonperception by way of not apprehending anything. This is the meditative concentration of bodhisattva great beings, and once the bodhisattva great beings, absorbed in these meditative concentrations, these immeasurable attitudes, and these formless states, via the aspects, tokens, and signs of space, have arisen from them they dedicate the merit to all-aspect omniscience. This is the perfection of meditative concentration of bodhisattva great beings.

8.226 "While they practice the perfection of wisdom, they achieve and maintain the first meditative concentration that is detached from sense objects, detached from negative and nonvirtuous attributes, has an initial mental application and a sustained mental application, and is endowed with the joy and the bliss that arise from detachment. Having pacified the initial mental application and the sustained mental application, with inner serene confidence, which is to say, a mind that has become single-pointed, they achieve and maintain the second meditative concentration endowed with the joy and bliss that arise from meditative stability. On account of having no attachment to the joy, dwelling with mindfulness and alertness in equanimity they experience the bliss with their bodies and achieve and maintain the third meditative concentration devoid of joy, about which the noble ones say 'They are mindful, abiding in bliss, and equanimous.' On account of having earlier abandoned the bliss, abandoned suffering, and caused mental happiness and mental unhappiness to subside, with equanimity and mindfulness [F.107.a] they achieve and maintain the fourth meditative concentration without bliss and suffering. They permeate the world systems in the ten directions, within the whole infinity of the realm of phenomena and the very reaches of the realm of space, with a mind endowed with a loving kindness that is vast, extensive, nondual, immeasurable, without enmity, free from harm, without rivalry, perfected, and well cultivated, remaining intent on and maintaining it. They permeate the world systems in the ten directions, within the whole infinity of the realm of phenomena and the very reaches of the realm of space, with a mind endowed with a compassion that is vast, extensive, nondual, immeasurable, without enmity, free from harm, without rivalry, perfected, and well cultivated, remaining intent on and maintaining it. They permeate the world systems in the ten directions, within the whole infinity of the realm of phenomena and the very reaches of the realm of space, with a mind endowed with an empathetic joy that is vast, extensive, nondual, immeasurable, without enmity, free from harm, without rivalry, perfected, and well cultivated, remaining intent on and maintaining it. They permeate the world systems in the ten directions, within the whole infinity of the realm of phenomena and the very reaches of the realm of space, with a mind endowed with an equanimity, by way of not apprehending anything, that is vast, extensive, nondual, immeasurable, without enmity, free from harm, without rivalry, perfected, and well cultivated, remaining intent on and maintaining it. Having completely transcended the perception of physical forms so that perceptions of obstruction have subsided, they do not direct their attention to diverse perceptions and achieve and maintain the sphere of infinite space, thinking, 'Space is infinite.' [F.107.b] Having completely transcended the sphere of infinite space in all respects, they achieve and maintain the sphere of infinite consciousness, thinking, 'Consciousness is infinite.' Having completely transcended the sphere of infinite consciousness in all respects, they achieve and maintain the sphere of nothing-at-all, thinking, 'There is nothing at all.' Having completely transcended the sphere of nothing-at-all, they achieve and maintain the sphere of neither perception nor nonperception by way of not apprehending anything. This is the meditative concentration of bodhisattva great beings, and once the bodhisattva great beings, absorbed in these meditative concentrations, these immeasurable attitudes, and these formless states, via the aspects, tokens, and signs of space, have arisen from them they dedicate the merit to all-aspect omniscience. This is the perfection of wisdom of bodhisattva great beings.

8.227 "It is in this way, Venerable Śāradvatīputra, that bodhisattva great beings are said to 'have entered upon the Great Vehicle.'

8.228 "Moreover, Venerable Śāradvatīputra, bodhisattva great beings permeate the world systems in the ten directions, within the whole infinity of the realm of phenomena and the very reaches of the realm of space, with a mind endowed with a loving kindness that is vast, extensive, nondual, immeasurable, without enmity, free from harm, without rivalry, perfected, and well cultivated, remaining intent on and maintaining it. They permeate the world systems in the ten directions, within the whole infinity of the realm of phenomena and the very reaches of the realm of space, with a mind endowed with a compassion that is vast, extensive, nondual, immeasurable, without enmity, free from harm, [F.108.a] without rivalry, perfected, and well cultivated, remaining intent on and maintaining it. They permeate the world systems in the ten directions, within the whole infinity of the realm of phenomena and the very reaches of the realm of space, with a mind endowed with an empathetic joy that is vast, extensive, nondual, immeasurable, without enmity, free from harm, without rivalry, perfected, and well cultivated, remaining intent on and maintaining it. They permeate the world systems in the ten directions, within the whole infinity of the realm of phenomena and the very reaches of the realm of space, with a mind endowed with an equanimity that is vast, extensive, nondual, immeasurable, without enmity, free from harm, without rivalry, perfected, and well cultivated, remaining intent on and maintaining it.

8.229      “They achieve and maintain the first meditative concentration that is detached from sense objects, detached from negative and nonvirtuous attributes, has an initial mental application and a sustained mental application, and is endowed with the joy and the bliss that arise from detachment. Having pacified the initial mental application and the sustained mental application, with inner serene confidence—which is to say, a mind that has become single-pointed—they achieve and maintain the second meditative concentration endowed with the joy and bliss that arise from meditative stability. On account of having no attachment to the joy, dwelling with mindfulness and alertness in equanimity they experience the bliss with their bodies and achieve and maintain the third meditative concentration devoid of joy, about which the noble ones say, ‘They are mindful, abiding in bliss, and equanimous.’ [F.108.b] On account of having earlier abandoned the bliss, abandoned suffering, and caused mental happiness and mental unhappiness to subside, with equanimity and mindfulness they achieve and maintain the fourth meditative concentration without bliss and suffering.

8.230      “Having completely transcended the perception of physical forms so that perceptions of obstruction have subsided, they do not direct their attention to diverse perceptions and achieve and maintain the sphere of infinite space, thinking, ‘Space is infinite.’ Having completely transcended the sphere of infinite space in all respects, they achieve and maintain the sphere of infinite consciousness, thinking, ‘Consciousness is infinite.’ Having completely transcended the sphere of infinite consciousness in all respects, they achieve and maintain the sphere of nothing-at-all, thinking, ‘There is nothing at all.’

Having completely transcended the sphere of nothing-at-all, they achieve and maintain the sphere of neither perception nor nonperception by way of not apprehending anything. This is the meditative stability of bodhisattva great beings.

8.231 “Moreover, bodhisattva great beings, with their minds directed toward all-aspect omniscience, preceded by great compassion, describe, explain, teach, interpret, analyze, and elucidate<sup>419</sup> these meditative concentrations, immeasurable attitudes, and formless absorptions to others so that they might abandon afflicted mental states, and they correctly teach their savor, their defects, and the release from them. This is the perfection of generosity of bodhisattva great beings.

8.232 “Once bodhisattva great beings, with their attentions directed toward all-aspect omniscience, [F.109.a] are absorbed in these meditative concentrations, immeasurable attitudes, and formless absorptions, even when they arise from them they do not allow an opportunity for the development of any other śrāvaka or pratyekabuddha setting of the mind. This is the unblemished perfection of ethical discipline of bodhisattva great beings.

8.233 “When bodhisattva great beings, with their attention directed toward all-aspect omniscience, dwell in these meditative concentrations, immeasurable attitudes, and formless absorptions, they think, ‘I will teach the Dharma in order that the afflicted mental states of all beings might be ended.’ This enduring, appreciating, scrutinizing, contemplating, and comprehending of thinking and paying attention like that is the perfection of tolerance of bodhisattva great beings.

8.234 “When bodhisattva great beings, with their attention directed toward all-aspect omniscience, dwell in these meditative concentrations, immeasurable attitudes, and formless absorptions, their perseverance for the welfare of all beings and all-aspect omniscience does not decline. This is the perfection of perseverance of bodhisattva great beings.

8.235 “When bodhisattva great beings, with their attention directed toward all-aspect omniscience, become absorbed in, and also when they arise from, these meditative concentrations, liberations, meditative stabilities, and absorptions, they do not descend to<sup>420</sup> the levels of the śrāvakas or pratyekabuddhas. This is the perfection of meditative concentration [F.109.b] of bodhisattva great beings.

8.236 “Even while bodhisattva great beings, with their attention directed toward all-aspect omniscience, definitively discern<sup>421</sup> these branches of the first meditative concentration, branches of the second meditative concentration, branches of the third meditative concentration, and branches of the fourth meditative concentration; loving kindness, compassion, empathetic joy, and equanimity; the sphere of infinite space, the sphere of infinite consciousness, the sphere of nothing-at-all, and the sphere of neither perception nor nonperception through the impermanence aspect, through the suffering aspect, through the selflessness aspect, through the peaceful aspect, through the emptiness aspect, through the signlessness aspect, and through the wishlessness aspect, they do not apprehend these meditative concentrations, immeasurable attitudes, and formless absorptions, and they do not give rise to conceits on the basis of them. This is the perfection of wisdom of bodhisattva great beings. Venerable Śāradvatīputra, this is the Great Vehicle of bodhisattva great beings practicing the perfection of wisdom.

8.237 “Moreover, Venerable Śāradvatīputra, regarding the Great Vehicle of bodhisattva great beings, they cultivate in all respects the four applications of mindfulness, they cultivate in all respects the four correct exertions, they cultivate in all respects the four supports for miraculous abilities, they cultivate in all respects the five faculties, they cultivate in all respects the five powers, they cultivate in all respects the seven branches of enlightenment, and they cultivate in all respects the noble eightfold path; they cultivate in all respects the truths of the noble ones, [F.110.a] they cultivate in all respects the meditative concentrations, they cultivate in all respects the immeasurable attitudes, they cultivate in all respects the formless absorptions, they cultivate in all respects the liberations, they cultivate in all respects the serial steps of meditative absorption, they cultivate in all respects the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation, they cultivate in all respects the extrasensory powers, they cultivate in all respects the meditative stabilities, and they cultivate in all respects the dhāraṇī gateways; they cultivate in all respects the powers of the tathāgatas, they cultivate in all respects the fearlessnesses, they cultivate in all respects the kinds of exact knowledge, they cultivate in all respects great loving kindness, they cultivate in all respects great compassion, and they cultivate in all respects the distinct qualities of the buddhas; and they cultivate in all respects omniscience, they cultivate in all respects knowledge of the aspects of the path, and they cultivate in all respects all-aspect omniscience. This, Venerable Śāradvatīputra, is the Great Vehicle of bodhisattva great beings.

8.238 “Moreover, Venerable Śāradvatīputra, bodhisattva great beings become absorbed in the meditative stability of loving kindness and apply themselves diligently to it, thinking, ‘I should save all beings.’ They become absorbed in the meditative stability of compassion and feel compassion and empathy for beings. They become absorbed [F.110.b] in the meditative stability of empathetic joy and bring beings to mind with the thought, ‘I should liberate all beings.’ They become absorbed in the meditative stability of equanimity and apply themselves diligently to the cessation of the contaminants of beings. This is the perfection of generosity of bodhisattva great beings who practice the immeasurable attitudes.

8.239 “When bodhisattva great beings are absorbed in, and also when they arise from, the aspects, tokens, and signs of these meditative concentrations and immeasurable attitudes, they do not dedicate these to the level of the śrāvakas or the level of the pratyekabuddhas, and instead only dedicate them to all-aspect omniscience. This is the unblemished perfection of ethical discipline of bodhisattva great beings who practice the immeasurable attitudes.

8.240 “Once bodhisattva great beings dwell in the meditative concentrations, the immeasurable attitudes, and the formless absorptions, without mixing them up, and do not develop a desire for those two levels—the level of the śrāvakas or the level of the pratyekabuddhas—but aspire to and delight in all-aspect omniscience, this is the perfection of tolerance possessed by bodhisattva great beings who practice the immeasurable attitudes.

8.241 “Once bodhisattva great beings, with their minds set on and directed to all-aspect omniscience, act without giving up the attempt to abandon nonvirtuous actions and excel in virtuous actions, this is the perfection of perseverance of bodhisattva great beings who practice the immeasurable attitudes.

8.242 “Once bodhisattva great beings are absorbed in these meditative concentrations, immeasurable attitudes, and formless absorptions, [F.111.a] but are not subject to rebirth on account of these meditative concentrations, immeasurable attitudes, and formless absorptions, and do not relish them and are not captivated by them, this is the perfection of meditative concentration of bodhisattva great beings who practice the immeasurable attitudes.

8.243 “When bodhisattva great beings, with their attention directed toward all-aspect omniscience, are absorbed in, and arise from, those meditative concentrations, immeasurable attitudes, and formless absorptions, they definitively discern them through the impermanence aspect, through the suffering aspect, through the selflessness aspect, through the peaceful aspect, through the emptiness aspect, through the signlessness aspect, and through the wishlessness aspect, and yet they do not enter either into the maturity of the śrāvakas or the pratyekabuddhas. This is the perfection of wisdom of bodhisattva great beings who practice the immeasurable attitudes. This, Venerable Śāradvatīputra, is the Great Vehicle of bodhisattva great beings.

8.244 “Moreover, Venerable Śāradvatīputra, the Great Vehicle of bodhisattva great beings is to understand the emptiness of internal phenomena, but in a manner that does not apprehend anything; to understand the emptiness of external phenomena, but in a manner that does not apprehend anything; to understand the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, but in a manner that does not apprehend anything; to understand the emptiness of emptiness, but in a manner that does not apprehend anything; to understand the emptiness of great extent, but in a manner that does not apprehend anything; to understand the emptiness of ultimate reality, but in a manner that does not apprehend anything; to understand the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, but in a manner that does not apprehend anything; to understand the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, but in a manner that does not apprehend anything; [F.111.b] to understand the emptiness of the unlimited, but in a manner that does not apprehend anything; to understand the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, but in a manner that does not apprehend anything; to understand the emptiness of nonexclusion, but in a manner that does not apprehend anything; to understand the emptiness of inherent nature, but in a manner that does not apprehend anything; to understand the emptiness of all phenomena, but in a manner that does not apprehend anything; to understand the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, but in a manner that does not apprehend anything; to understand the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, but in a manner that does not apprehend anything; to understand the emptiness of nonentities, but in a manner that does not apprehend anything; to understand the emptiness of essential nature, but in a manner that does not apprehend anything; and to understand the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities but in a manner that does not apprehend anything. This, Venerable Śāradvatīputra, is the Great Vehicle of bodhisattva great beings.

8.245 “Moreover, Venerable Śāradvatīputra, the Great Vehicle of bodhisattva great beings is to understand that the mind is undistracted and absorbed with respect to all phenomena.<sup>422</sup> This, venerable Śāradvatīputra, is the Great Vehicle of bodhisattva great beings.

8.246 “Moreover, Venerable Śāradvatīputra, the Great Vehicle of bodhisattva great beings is not to engage in understanding anything as<sup>423</sup> ‘permanent,’ not to engage in understanding anything as ‘impermanent,’ not to engage in understanding anything as ‘happiness,’ not to engage in understanding anything as ‘suffering,’ not to engage in understanding anything as ‘self’ and not to engage in understanding anything as ‘nonself,’ not to engage in understanding anything as ‘pleasant’ and not to engage in understanding anything as ‘unpleasant,’ not to engage in understanding anything as ‘empty’ and not to engage in understanding anything as ‘not empty,’ not to engage in understanding anything as ‘having a sign’ and not to engage [F.112.a] in understanding anything as ‘signless,’ and not to engage in understanding anything as ‘with wishes’ and not to engage in understanding anything as ‘wishless.’ This, Venerable Śāradvatīputra, in a manner that does not apprehend anything, is the Great Vehicle of bodhisattva great beings.

8.247 “Moreover, Venerable Śāradvatīputra, the Great Vehicle of bodhisattva great beings is the understanding that does not engage with past time, the understanding that does not engage with future time, and the understanding that does not cause engagement with present time, but, by way of not apprehending past, future, or present time, in it there is not even not understanding past, future, or present time. This, Venerable Śāradvatīputra, by way of not apprehending it, is the Great Vehicle of bodhisattva great beings.

8.248 “Moreover, Venerable Śāradvatīputra, the Great Vehicle of bodhisattva great beings is the understanding that does not cause engagement with the realm of desire, and is the understanding that does not cause engagement with the world systems of form and formlessness, yet is not even not understanding the three world systems of desire, form, and formlessness. This, too, Venerable Śāradvatīputra, by way of not apprehending it, is the Great Vehicle of bodhisattva great beings.

8.249 “Moreover, Venerable Śāradvatīputra, the Great Vehicle of bodhisattva great beings is the understanding that does not cause engagement with mundane phenomena, and is the understanding that does not cause engagement with supramundane, contaminated or uncontaminated, or conditioned or unconditioned phenomena, yet is not even not knowing mundane and supramundane phenomena and is not even not knowing contaminated or uncontaminated, or conditioned or unconditioned phenomena. This, too Venerable Śāradvatīputra, by way of not apprehending it, is the Great Vehicle of bodhisattva great beings.”

8.250 “Venerable Pūrṇa, to what extent is it said that bodhisattva great beings [F.112.b] ‘are mounted upon the Great Vehicle?’”

8.251 “Venerable Śāradvatīputra,” replied Pūrṇa, “here, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom, they are also mounted on the perfection of generosity, but they do not apprehend gifts, they do not apprehend the perfection of generosity, they do not apprehend the bodhisattvas, they do not apprehend the recipients, nor do they apprehend paying attention. It is in this way, by way of not apprehending anything, that bodhisattva great beings are said to be ‘mounted on the perfection of generosity.’”

8.252 “Venerable Śāradvatīputra, here, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom, they are also mounted on the perfection of ethical discipline, but they do not apprehend ethical discipline, they do not apprehend the perfection of ethical discipline, they do not apprehend the bodhisattvas, nor do they apprehend paying attention. It is in this way, by way of not apprehending anything, that bodhisattva great beings are said to be ‘mounted on the perfection of ethical discipline.’ Venerable Śāradvatīputra, here, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom, they are also mounted on the perfection of tolerance, but they do not apprehend tolerance, they do not apprehend the perfection of tolerance, they do not apprehend the bodhisattvas, nor do they apprehend paying attention. It is in this way, by way of not apprehending anything, that bodhisattva great beings are said to be ‘mounted on the perfection of tolerance.’ Venerable Śāradvatīputra, here, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom, they are also mounted on the perfection of perseverance, [F.113.a] but they do not apprehend perseverance, they do not apprehend the perfection of perseverance, they do not apprehend the bodhisattvas, nor do they apprehend paying attention. It is in this way, by way of not apprehending anything, that bodhisattva great beings are said to be ‘mounted on the perfection of perseverance.’ Venerable Śāradvatīputra, here, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom, they are also mounted on the perfection of meditative concentration, but they do not apprehend meditative concentration, they do not apprehend the perfection of meditative concentration, they do not apprehend the bodhisattvas, nor do they apprehend paying attention. It is in this way, by way of not apprehending anything, that bodhisattva great beings are said to be ‘mounted on the perfection of meditative concentration.’ Venerable Śāradvatīputra, here, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom, they are also mounted on the perfection of wisdom, but they do not apprehend virtuous phenomena; they do not apprehend nonvirtuous, mundane, supramundane, conditioned, unconditioned, contaminated, or uncontaminated phenomena; they do not apprehend the perfection of wisdom; they do not apprehend the bodhisattvas; nor do they apprehend paying attention. It is in this way, by way of not apprehending anything, that bodhisattva great beings are said to be ‘mounted on the perfection of wisdom.’

8.253 “Moreover, Venerable Śāradvatīputra, bodhisattva great beings, [F.113.b] with an undivided<sup>424</sup> attention directed toward all-aspect omniscience, meditate on the emptiness of internal phenomena in order to cultivate meditation,<sup>425</sup> and do so by way of not apprehending anything; with an undivided attention directed toward all-aspect omniscience meditate on the emptiness of external phenomena in order to cultivate meditation, and do so by way of not apprehending anything; with an undivided attention directed toward all-aspect omniscience meditate on the emptiness of external and internal phenomena in order to cultivate meditation, and do so by way of not apprehending anything; with an undivided attention directed toward all-aspect omniscience meditate on the emptiness of emptiness in order to cultivate meditation, and do so by way of not apprehending anything; with an undivided attention directed toward all-aspect omniscience meditate on the emptiness of great extent in order to cultivate meditation, and do so by way of not apprehending anything; with an undivided attention directed toward all-aspect omniscience meditate on the emptiness of ultimate reality in order to cultivate meditation, and do so by way of not apprehending anything; with an undivided attention directed toward all-aspect omniscience meditate on the emptiness of conditioned phenomena in order to cultivate meditation, and do so by way of not apprehending anything; with an undivided attention directed toward all-aspect omniscience meditate on the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena in order to cultivate meditation, and do so by way of not apprehending anything; with an undivided attention directed toward all-aspect omniscience meditate on the emptiness of the unlimited in order to cultivate meditation, and do so by way of not apprehending anything; with an undivided attention directed toward all-aspect omniscience meditate on the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end in order to cultivate [F.114.a] meditation, and do so by way of not apprehending anything; with an undivided attention directed toward all-aspect omniscience meditate on the emptiness of nonexclusion in order to cultivate meditation, and do so by way of not apprehending anything; with an undivided attention directed toward all-aspect omniscience meditate on the emptiness of inherent nature in order to cultivate meditation, and do so by way of not apprehending anything; with an undivided attention directed toward all-aspect omniscience meditate on the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics in order to cultivate meditation, and do so by way of not apprehending anything; with an undivided attention directed toward all-aspect omniscience meditate on the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended in order to cultivate meditation, and do so by way of not apprehending anything; with an undivided attention directed toward all-aspect omniscience meditate on the emptiness of nonentities in order to cultivate meditation, and do so by way of not apprehending anything; with an undivided attention directed toward all-aspect omniscience meditate on the emptiness of essential nature in order to cultivate meditation, and do so by way of not apprehending anything; and with an undivided attention directed toward all-aspect omniscience meditate on the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities in order to cultivate meditation, and do so by way of not apprehending anything.

8.254 “Moreover, Venerable Śāradvatīputra, bodhisattva great beings, with an undivided attention directed toward all-aspect [F.114.b] omniscience, meditate on the four applications of mindfulness in order to cultivate meditation, and do so by way of not apprehending anything; with an undivided attention directed toward all-aspect omniscience meditate on the four correct exertions in order to cultivate meditation, and do so by way of not apprehending anything; with an undivided attention directed toward all-aspect omniscience meditate on the four supports for miraculous ability in order to cultivate meditation, and do so by way of not apprehending anything; with an undivided attention directed toward all-aspect omniscience meditate on the five faculties in order to cultivate meditation, and do so by way of not apprehending anything; with an undivided attention directed toward all-aspect omniscience meditate on the five powers in order to cultivate meditation, and do so by way of not apprehending anything; with an undivided attention directed toward all-aspect omniscience meditate on the seven branches of enlightenment in order to cultivate meditation, and do so by way of not apprehending anything; and with an undivided attention directed toward all-aspect omniscience meditate on the noble eightfold path in order to cultivate meditation, and do so by way of not apprehending anything; with an undivided attention directed toward all-aspect omniscience meditate on the four truths of the noble ones in order to cultivate meditation, and do so by way of not apprehending anything; with an undivided attention directed toward all-aspect omniscience meditate on the four meditative concentrations in order to cultivate meditation, and do so by way of not apprehending anything; with an undivided attention directed toward all-aspect omniscience meditate on the four immeasurable attitudes in order to cultivate meditation, and do so by way of not apprehending anything; [F.115.a] with an undivided attention directed toward all-aspect omniscience meditate on the four formless absorptions in order to cultivate meditation, and do so by way of not apprehending anything; with an undivided attention directed toward all-aspect omniscience meditate on the eight liberations in order to cultivate meditation, and do so by way of not apprehending anything; with an undivided attention directed toward all-aspect omniscience meditate on the nine serial steps of meditative absorption in order to cultivate meditation, and do so by way of not apprehending anything; with an undivided attention directed toward all-aspect omniscience meditate on emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness in order to cultivate meditation, and do so by way of not apprehending anything; with an undivided attention directed toward all-aspect omniscience meditate on the extrasensory powers in order to cultivate meditation, and do so by way of not apprehending anything; with an undivided attention directed toward all-aspect omniscience meditate on the meditative stabilities in order to cultivate meditation, and do so by way of not apprehending anything; with an undivided attention directed toward all-aspect omniscience meditate on the dhāraṇī gateways in order to cultivate meditation, and do so by way of not apprehending anything; with an undivided attention directed toward all-aspect omniscience meditate on the ten powers of the tathāgatas in order to cultivate meditation, and do so by way of not apprehending anything; with an undivided attention directed toward all-aspect omniscience meditate on the four fearlessnesses in order to [F.115.b] cultivate meditation, and do so by way of not apprehending anything; with an undivided attention directed toward all-aspect omniscience meditate on the four kinds of exact knowledge in order to cultivate meditation, and do so by way of not apprehending anything; with an undivided attention directed toward all-aspect omniscience meditate on great compassion in order to cultivate meditation, and do so by way of not apprehending anything; and with an undivided attention directed toward all-aspect omniscience meditate on the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas in order to cultivate meditation, and do so by way of not apprehending anything. It is in this way, Venerable Śāradvatīputra, that bodhisattva great beings are said to be ‘mounted on the Great Vehicle.’

8.255 “Moreover, Venerable Śāradvatīputra, bodhisattva great beings understand that because bodhisattvas cannot be found, this ‘bodhisattva’ is a mere conventional term. They understand that because physical forms cannot be found, this ‘physical forms’ is a mere name; because feelings cannot be found, this ‘feelings’ is a mere name; because perceptions cannot be found, this ‘perceptions’ is a mere name; because formative predispositions cannot be found, this ‘formative predispositions’ is a mere name; and because consciousness cannot be found, this ‘consciousness’ is a mere name.

8.256 “Because the eyes cannot be found, this ‘eyes’ is a mere name; because the ears cannot be found, this ‘ears’ is a mere name; because the nose cannot be found, this ‘nose’ is a mere name; because the tongue cannot be found, this ‘tongue’ [F.116.a] is a mere name; because the body cannot be found, this ‘body’ is a mere name; and because the mental faculty cannot be found, this ‘mental faculty’ is a mere name. Because sights cannot be found, this ‘sights’ is a mere name; because sounds cannot be found, this ‘sounds’ is a mere name; because odors cannot be found, this ‘odors’ is a mere name; because tastes cannot be found, this ‘tastes’ is a mere name; because tangibles cannot be found, this 'tangibles' is a mere name; and because mental phenomena cannot be found, this 'mental phenomena' is a mere name. Because visual consciousness cannot be found, this 'visual consciousness' is a mere name; because auditory consciousness cannot be found, this 'auditory consciousness' is a mere name; because olfactory consciousness cannot be found, this 'olfactory consciousness' is a mere name; because gustatory consciousness cannot be found, this 'gustatory consciousness' is a mere name; because tactile consciousness cannot be found, this 'tactile consciousness' is a mere name; and because mental consciousness cannot be found, this 'mental consciousness' is a mere name. Because visually compounded sensory contact cannot be found, this 'visually compounded sensory contact' is a mere name; because aurally compounded sensory contact cannot be found, this 'aurally compounded sensory contact' is a mere name; because nasally compounded sensory contact cannot be found, this 'nasally compounded sensory contact' [F.116.b] is a mere name; because lingually compounded sensory contact cannot be found, this 'lingually compounded sensory contact' is a mere name; because corporeally compounded sensory contact cannot be found, this 'corporeally compounded sensory contact' is a mere name; and because mentally compounded sensory contact cannot be found, this 'mentally compounded sensory contact' is a mere name. Because feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact cannot be found, this 'feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact' is a mere name; because feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact cannot be found, this 'feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact' is a mere name; because feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact cannot be found, this 'feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact' is a mere name; because feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact cannot be found, this 'feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact' is a mere name; because feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact cannot be found, this 'feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact' is a mere name; and because feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact cannot be found, this 'feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact' is a mere name.

8.257      "Because the earth element cannot be found, this 'earth element' is a mere name; because the water element cannot be found, this 'water element' is a mere name; because the fire element cannot be found, this 'fire element' is a mere name; because the wind element cannot be found, this 'wind element' is a mere name; because the space element cannot be found, this 'space [F.117.a] element' is a mere name; and because the consciousness element cannot be found, this 'consciousness element' is a mere name.

8.258 "Because ignorance cannot be found, this 'ignorance' is a mere name; because formative predispositions cannot be found, this 'formative predispositions' is a mere name; because consciousness cannot be found, this 'consciousness' is a mere name; because name and form cannot be found, this 'name and form' is a mere name; because the six sense fields cannot be found, this 'six sense fields' is a mere name; because sensory contact cannot be found, this 'sensory contact' is a mere name; because sensation cannot be found, this 'sensation' is a mere name; because craving cannot be found, this 'craving' is a mere name; because grasping cannot be found, this 'grasping' is a mere name; because the rebirth process cannot be found, this 'rebirth process' is a mere name; because birth cannot be found, this 'birth' is a mere name; and because aging and death cannot be found, this 'aging and death' is a mere name.

8.259 "Because the perfection of generosity cannot be found, this 'perfection of generosity' is a mere name; because the perfection of ethical discipline cannot be found, this 'perfection of ethical discipline' is a mere name; because the perfection of tolerance cannot be found, this 'perfection of tolerance' is a mere name; because the perfection of perseverance cannot be found, this 'perfection of perseverance' [F.117.b] is a mere name; because the perfection of meditative concentration cannot be found, this 'perfection of meditative concentration' is a mere name; and because the perfection of wisdom cannot be found, this 'perfection of wisdom' is a mere name.

8.260 "Because the emptiness of internal phenomena cannot be found, this 'emptiness of internal phenomena' is a mere name; because the emptiness of external phenomena cannot be found, this 'emptiness of external phenomena' is a mere name; because the emptiness of external and internal phenomena cannot be found, this 'emptiness of external and internal phenomena' is a mere name; because the emptiness of emptiness cannot be found, this 'emptiness of emptiness' is a mere name; because the emptiness of great extent cannot be found, this 'emptiness of great extent' is a mere name; because the emptiness of ultimate reality cannot be found, this 'emptiness of ultimate reality' is a mere name; because the emptiness of conditioned phenomena cannot be found, this 'emptiness of conditioned phenomena' is a mere name; because the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena cannot be found, this 'emptiness of unconditioned phenomena' is a mere name; because the emptiness of the unlimited cannot be found, this 'emptiness of the unlimited' is a mere name; because the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end cannot be found, this 'emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end' is a mere name; because the emptiness of nonexclusion' cannot be found, this 'emptiness of nonexclusion' is a mere name; because the emptiness of inherent nature cannot be found, this 'emptiness of inherent nature' is a mere name; because the emptiness of all phenomena cannot be found, [F.118.a] this 'emptiness of all phenomena' is a mere name; because the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics cannot be found, this 'emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics' is a mere name; because the emptiness of nonentities cannot be found, this 'emptiness of nonentities' is a mere name; because the emptiness of essential nature cannot be found, this 'emptiness of essential nature' is a mere name; and because the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities cannot be found, this 'emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities' is a mere name.

8.261 "Because the applications of mindfulness cannot be found, this 'four applications of mindfulness' is a mere name; because the correct exertions cannot be found, this 'four correct exertions' is a mere name; because the supports for miraculous ability cannot be found, this 'four supports for miraculous ability' is a mere name; because the faculties cannot be found, this 'five faculties' is a mere name; because the powers cannot be found, this 'five powers' is a mere name; because the branches of enlightenment cannot be found, this 'seven branches of enlightenment' is a mere name; and because the path cannot be found, this 'noble eightfold path' is a mere name.

8.262 "Because the truths of the noble ones cannot be found, this 'four truths of the noble ones' is a mere name; because the meditative concentrations cannot be found, [F.118.b] this 'four meditative concentrations' is a mere name; because the immeasurable attitudes cannot be found, this 'four immeasurable attitudes' is a mere name; because the formless absorptions cannot be found, this 'four formless absorptions' is a mere name; because the liberations cannot be found, this 'eight liberations' is a mere name; because the serial steps of meditative absorption cannot be found, this 'nine serial steps of meditative absorption' is a mere name; and because the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation cannot be found, this 'emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation' is a mere name.

8.263 "Because the extrasensory powers cannot be found, this 'extrasensory powers' is a mere name; because the meditative stabilities cannot be found, this 'meditative stabilities' is a mere name; and because the dhāraṇī gateways cannot be found, this 'dhāraṇī gateways' is a mere name; because the powers of the tathāgatas cannot be found, this 'ten powers of the tathāgatas' is a mere name; because the fearlessnesses cannot be found, this 'four fearlessnesses' is a mere name; because the kinds of exact knowledge cannot be found, this 'four kinds of exact knowledge' is a mere name; because great compassion cannot be found, this 'great compassion' is a mere name; and because the distinct qualities of the buddhas cannot be found, [F.119.a] this 'eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas' is a mere name.

8.264 "Because the real nature cannot be found, this 'real nature' is a mere name; because the unmistakable nature cannot be found, this 'unmistaken real nature' is a mere name; because the one and only nature cannot be found, this 'one and only real nature' is a mere name; because the reality of phenomena cannot be found, this 'reality of phenomena' is a mere name; because the realm of phenomena cannot be found, this 'realm of phenomena' is a mere name; because the abiding nature of phenomena cannot be found, this 'abiding nature of phenomena' is a mere name; because the maturity of phenomena cannot be found, this 'maturity of phenomena' is a mere name; because the very limit of reality cannot be found, this 'very limit of reality' is a mere name; because enlightenment cannot be found, this 'enlightenment' is a mere name; and because the buddhas cannot be found, this 'buddhas' is a mere name. It is in this way, Venerable Śāradvatīputra, that bodhisattva great beings are said to be 'mounted on the Great Vehicle.' [B9]

8.265 "Moreover, Venerable Śāradvatīputra, bodhisattva great beings, commencing from the time when they first set their mind on enlightenment until they are seated at the site of enlightenment, perfect all the extrasensory powers and bring beings to maturity. [F.119.b] In order to serve, respect, honor, and worship the lord buddhas by the appropriate means of worshiping and serving them, they proceed from buddhafiield to buddhafiield. They listen to just this doctrine of this Bodhisattva Vehicle, in the presence of those lord buddhas. Having mounted on this Bodhisattva Vehicle, they proceed from buddhafiield to buddhafiield. They refine a buddhafiield and bring beings to maturity, but they are without even the notion of a buddhafiield, they are without even the notion of beings, and they are without even the notion of a buddha. Abiding on the level of nonduality, they acquire at will as many bodily forms as will facilitate their appropriate acts for the welfare of beings. Until they attain the knowledge of one with all-aspect omniscience, they will never be separated from that vehicle. And having attained the knowledge of one with all-aspect omniscience, they also turn the wheel of the Dharma that cannot be turned by any śrāvakas or pratyekabuddhas, or by anyone in the world with its gods, nāgas, yakṣas, gandharvas, asuras, garuḍas, kinnaras, mahoragas, humans, or nonhumans.

8.266 "Having fully awakened to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment, the lord buddhas who are residing in the world systems of the eastern direction, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā, extol their good qualities, proclaiming their fame and shouting out loud that 'such and such a bodhisattva great being, in such and such a world system, mounted on the Great Vehicle, [F.120.a] the Unsurpassed Vehicle, the Supreme Vehicle, has attained all-aspect omniscience, and having attained all-aspect omniscience turns the wheel of the Dharma.' Having fully awakened to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment, the lord buddhas who are residing in the world systems of the southern direction, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā, extol their good qualities, proclaiming their fame and shouting out loud that 'such and such a bodhisattva great being, in such and such a world system, mounted on the Great Vehicle, the Unsurpassed Vehicle, the Supreme Vehicle, has attained all-aspect omniscience, and having attained all-aspect omniscience turns the wheel of the Dharma.' Having fully awakened to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment, the lord buddhas who are residing in the world systems of the western direction, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā, extol their good qualities, proclaiming their fame and shouting out loud that 'such and such a bodhisattva great being, in such and such a world system, mounted on the Great Vehicle, the Unsurpassed Vehicle, the Supreme Vehicle, has attained all-aspect omniscience, and having attained all-aspect omniscience turns the wheel of the Dharma.' Having fully awakened to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment, the lord buddhas who are residing in the world systems of the northern direction, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā, extol their good qualities, proclaiming their fame and shouting out loud that 'such and such a bodhisattva great being, in such and such a world system, mounted on [F.120.b] the Great Vehicle, the Unsurpassed Vehicle, the Supreme Vehicle, has attained all-aspect omniscience, and having attained all-aspect omniscience turns the wheel of the Dharma.' Having fully awakened to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment, the lord buddhas who are residing in the world systems of the intermediate northeastern direction, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā, extol their good qualities, proclaiming their fame and shouting out loud that 'such and such a bodhisattva great being, in such and such a world system, mounted on the Great Vehicle, the Unsurpassed Vehicle, the Supreme Vehicle, has attained all-aspect omniscience, and having attained all-aspect omniscience turns the wheel of the Dharma.' Having fully awakened to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment, the lord buddhas who are residing in the world systems of the intermediate southeastern direction, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā, extol their good qualities, proclaiming their fame and shouting out loud that 'such and such a bodhisattva great being, in such and such a world system, mounted on the Great Vehicle, the Unsurpassed Vehicle, the Supreme Vehicle, has attained all-aspect omniscience, and having attained all-aspect omniscience turns the wheel of the Dharma.’ Having fully awakened to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment, the lord buddhas who are residing in the world systems of the intermediate southwestern direction, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā, extol their good qualities, proclaiming their fame and shouting out loud that ‘such and such a bodhisattva great being, in such and such a world system, mounted on the Great Vehicle, the Unsurpassed Vehicle, the Supreme Vehicle, has attained all-aspect omniscience, [F.121.a] and having attained all-aspect omniscience turns the wheel of the Dharma.’ Having fully awakened to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment, the lord buddhas who are residing in the world systems of the intermediate northwestern direction, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā, extol their good qualities, proclaiming their fame and shouting out loud that ‘such and such a bodhisattva great being, in such and such a world system, mounted on the Great Vehicle, the Unsurpassed Vehicle, the Supreme Vehicle, has attained all-aspect omniscience, and having attained all-aspect omniscience turns the wheel of the Dharma.’ Having fully awakened to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment, the lord buddhas who are residing in the world systems in the direction of the nadir, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā, extol their good qualities, proclaiming their fame and shouting out loud that ‘such and such a bodhisattva great being, in such and such a world system, mounted on the Great Vehicle, the Unsurpassed Vehicle, the Supreme Vehicle, has attained all-aspect omniscience, and having attained all-aspect omniscience turns the wheel of the Dharma.’ Having fully awakened to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment, the lord buddhas who are residing in the world systems in the direction of the zenith, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā, extol their good qualities, proclaiming their fame and shouting out loud that ‘such and such a bodhisattva great being, in such and such a world system, mounted on the Great Vehicle, the Unsurpassed Vehicle, the Supreme Vehicle, has attained all-aspect omniscience, and having attained all-aspect omniscience [F.121.b] turns the wheel of the Dharma.’ It is in this way, venerable Śāradvatīputra, that bodhisattva great beings are said to be ‘mounted on the Great Vehicle.’ ”

8.267 Then Venerable Subhūti inquired of the Blessed One, “Blessed Lord, you say ‘they have donned great armor, they have donned the great armor.’ What, Blessed Lord, is the extent of the great armor that bodhisattva great beings have donned?”

8.268 The Blessed One then said to the venerable Subhūti, “Subhūti, here bodhisattva great beings, having donned the great armor of the Great Vehicle—that is, having donned the armor of the perfection of generosity, having donned armor of the perfection of ethical discipline, having donned the armor of the perfection of tolerance, having donned the armor of the perfection of perseverance, having donned the armor of the perfection of meditative concentration, and having donned the armor of the perfection of wisdom; having donned the armor of the emptiness of internal phenomena, having donned the armor of the emptiness of external phenomena, having donned the armor of the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, having donned the armor of the emptiness of emptiness, having donned the armor of the emptiness of great extent, having donned the armor of the emptiness of ultimate reality, having donned the armor of the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, having donned the armor of the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, having donned the armor of the emptiness of the unlimited, having donned the armor of the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, having donned the armor of the emptiness of nonexclusion, having donned the armor of the emptiness of inherent nature, having donned the armor of the emptiness of all phenomena, having donned the armor of the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, having donned the armor of the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, having donned the armor of the emptiness of nonentities, having donned the armor of the emptiness of essential nature, and having donned the armor of the emptiness of an essential nature of [F.122.a] nonentities; having donned the armor of the applications of mindfulness, having donned the armor of the correct exertions, having donned the armor of the supports for miraculous ability, having donned the armor of the faculties, having donned the armor of the powers, having donned the armor of the branches of enlightenment, and having donned the armor of the noble eightfold path; having donned the armor of the four truths of the noble ones, having donned the armor of the meditative concentrations, having donned the armor of the immeasurable attitudes, having donned the armor of the formless absorptions, having donned the armor of the liberations, having donned the armor of the serial steps of meditative absorption, having donned the armor of the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation, having donned the armor of the extrasensory powers, having donned the armor of the meditative stabilities, and having donned the armor of the dhāraṇī gateways; having donned the armor of the powers of the tathāgatas, having donned the armor of the fearlessnesses, having donned the armor of the kinds of exact knowledge, having donned the armor of great compassion, having donned the armor of the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas, and having donned the armor of all-aspect omniscience and donned the armor of the body of a buddha—expansively fill up the great billionfold world system with light. That is to say, they expansively fill up the world systems of the eastern direction, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā, with light; expansively fill up the world systems of the southern direction, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā, with light; expansively fill up the world systems of the western direction, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā, with light; expansively fill up the world systems of the northern direction, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā, with light; expansively fill up the world systems of the intermediate northeastern direction, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā, with light; expansively fill up the world systems of the intermediate southeastern direction, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā, with light; [F.122.b] expansively fill up the world systems of the intermediate southwestern direction, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā, with light; expansively fill up the world systems of the intermediate northwestern direction, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā, with light; expansively fill up the world systems in the direction of the nadir, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā, with light; and expansively fill up the world systems in the direction of the zenith, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā, with light.

8.269      “They cause this great billionfold world system to shake intensely in six ways.<sup>426</sup> That is to say, they cause the world systems of the eastern direction, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā, to shake intensely in six ways; cause the world systems of the southern direction, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā, to shake intensely in six ways; cause the world systems of the western direction, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā, to shake intensely in six ways; cause the world systems of the northern direction, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā, to shake intensely in six ways; cause the world systems of the intermediate northeastern direction, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā, to shake intensely in six ways; cause the world systems of the intermediate southeastern direction, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā, to shake intensely in six ways; cause the world systems of the intermediate southwestern direction, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā, to shake intensely in six ways; cause the world systems of the intermediate northwestern direction, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā, to shake intensely in six ways; cause the world systems in the direction of the nadir, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā, to shake intensely in six ways; and cause the world systems in the direction of the zenith, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā, to shake intensely in six ways.

8.270       “Having extinguished all the masses of fire in the hells, as many as there are, in this great billionfold world system they raise their voices and shout out loud, ‘Homage to the tathāgatas, arhats, [F.123.a] perfectly complete buddhas!’ At that time, when those denizens of the hells have heard the sound buddha, they find joy and happiness, and through their joy and happiness arise from those hells, and having arisen from those hells they are reborn in buddhafiels where the lord buddhas are residing and maintaining themselves. Having pacified all the sufferings of the animal world of the beings in the animal worlds, as many as there are, in this great billionfold world system they raise their voices and shout out loud, ‘Homage to the tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas!’ At that time, when those beings in the animal worlds have heard the sound buddha, they find joy and happiness, and through their joy and happiness arise from those animal worlds, and having arisen from those animal worlds they are reborn in buddhafiels where the lord buddhas are residing and maintaining themselves. Having pacified all the sufferings of the world of Yama of the beings in the worlds of Yama, as many as there are, in this great billionfold world system they raise their voices and shout out loud, ‘Homage to the tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas!’ At that time, when those beings in the worlds of Yama have heard the sound buddha, they find joy and happiness, and through their joy and happiness arise from those worlds of Yama, and having arisen [F.123.b] from those worlds of Yama they are reborn in buddhafiels where the lord buddhas are residing and maintaining themselves.

8.271       “Having extinguished all the masses of fire in the hells, as many as there are, in the world systems of the eastern direction, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā, they raise their voices and shout out loud, ‘Homage to the tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas!’ At that time, when those denizens of the hells have heard the sound buddha, they find joy and happiness, and through their joy and happiness arise from those hells, and having arisen from those hells they are reborn in buddhafiels where the lord buddhas are residing and maintaining themselves. Having extinguished all the masses of fire in the hells, as many as there are, in the world systems of the southern direction, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā, they raise their voices and shout out loud, ‘Homage to the tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas!’ At that time, when those denizens of the hells have heard the sound buddha, they find joy and happiness, and through their joy and happiness arise from those hells, and having arisen from those hells they are reborn in buddhafiels where the lord buddhas are residing and maintaining themselves. Having extinguished all the masses of fire in the hells, as many as there are, in the world systems of the western direction, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā, they raise their voices and shout out loud, 'Homage to the tathāgatas, [F.124.a] arhats, perfectly complete buddhas!' At that time, when those denizens of the hells have heard the sound buddha, they find joy and happiness, and through their joy and happiness arise from those hells, and having arisen from those hells they are reborn in buddhafiels where the lord buddhas are residing and maintaining themselves. Having extinguished all the masses of fire in the hells, as many as there are, in the world systems of the northern direction, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā, they raise their voices and shout out loud, 'Homage to the tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas!' At that time, when those denizens of the hells have heard the sound buddha, they find joy and happiness, and through their joy and happiness arise from those hells, and having arisen from those hells they are reborn in buddhafiels where the lord buddhas are residing and maintaining themselves. Having extinguished all the masses of fire in the hells, as many as there are, in the world systems of the intermediate northeastern direction, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā, they raise their voices and shout out loud, 'Homage to the tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas!' At that time, when those denizens of the hells have heard the sound buddha, they find joy and happiness, and through their joy and happiness arise from those hells, and having arisen [F.124.b] from those hells they are reborn in buddhafiels where the lord buddhas are residing and maintaining themselves. Having extinguished all the masses of fire in the hells, as many as there are, in the world systems of the intermediate southeastern direction, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā, they raise their voices and shout out loud, 'Homage to the tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas!' At that time, when those denizens of the hells have heard the sound buddha, they find joy and happiness, and through their joy and happiness arise from those hells, and having arisen from those hells they are reborn in buddhafiels where the lord buddhas are residing and maintaining themselves. Having extinguished all the masses of fire in the hells, as many as there are, in the world systems of the intermediate southwestern direction, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā, they raise their voices and shout out loud, 'Homage to the tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas!' At that time, when those denizens of the hells have heard the sound buddha, they find joy and happiness, and through their joy and happiness arise from those hells, and having arisen from those hells they are reborn in buddhafiels where the lord buddhas are residing and maintaining themselves. Having extinguished all the masses of fire in the hells, as many as there are, [F.125.a] in the world systems of the intermediate northwestern direction, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā, they raise their voices and shout out loud, 'Homage to the tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas!' At that time, when those denizens of the hells have heard the sound buddha, they find joy and happiness, and through their joy and happiness arise from those hells, and having arisen from those hells they are reborn in buddhafiels where the lord buddhas are residing and maintaining themselves. Having extinguished all the masses of fire in the hells, as many as there are, in the world systems in the direction of the nadir, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā, they raise their voices and shout out loud, 'Homage to the tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas!' At that time, when those denizens of the hells have heard the sound buddha, they find joy and happiness, and through their joy and happiness arise from those hells, and having arisen from those hells they are reborn in buddhafiels where the lord buddhas are residing and maintaining themselves. Having extinguished all the masses of fire in the hells, as many as there are, in the world systems in the direction of the zenith, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā, they raise their voices and shout out loud, 'Homage to the tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas!' At that time, when those denizens of the hells have heard [F.125.b] the sound buddha, they find joy and happiness, and through their joy and happiness arise from those hells, and having arisen from those hells they are reborn in buddhafiels where the lord buddhas are residing and maintaining themselves.

8.272      "Having pacified all the sufferings of the animal world and the world of Yama of the beings born in the animal world and in the world of Yama, as many as there are, in the world systems of the eastern direction, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā, they raise their voices and shout out loud, 'Homage to the tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas!' At that time, when those beings born in the animal world and in the world of Yama have heard the sound buddha, they find joy and happiness, and through their joy and happiness arise from those animal worlds and worlds of Yama, and having arisen from those animal worlds and worlds of Yama they are reborn in buddhafiels where the lord buddhas are residing and maintaining themselves. Having pacified all the sufferings of the animal world and the world of Yama of the beings born in the animal world and in the world of Yama, as many as there are, in the world systems of the southern direction, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā, they raise their voices and shout out loud, 'Homage to the tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas!' At that time, when those beings born in the animal world [F.126.a] and in the world of Yama have heard the sound buddha, they find joy and happiness, and through their joy and happiness arise from those animal worlds and worlds of Yama, and having arisen from those animal worlds and worlds of Yama they are reborn in buddhafiels where the lord buddhas are residing and maintaining themselves. Having pacified all the sufferings of the animal world and the world of Yama of the beings born in the animal world and in the world of Yama, as many as there are, in the world systems of the western direction, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā, they raise their voices and shout out loud, 'Homage to the tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas!' At that time, when those beings born in the animal world and in the world of Yama have heard the sound buddha, they find joy and happiness, and through their joy and happiness arise from those animal worlds and worlds of Yama, and having arisen from those animal worlds and worlds of Yama they are reborn in buddhafiels where the lord buddhas are residing and maintaining themselves. Having pacified all the sufferings of the animal world and the world of Yama of the beings born in the animal world and in the world of Yama, as many as there are, in the world systems of the northern direction, numerous as [F.126.b] the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā, they raise their voices and shout out loud, 'Homage to the tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas!' At that time, when those beings born in the animal world and in the world of Yama have heard the sound buddha, they find joy and happiness, and through their joy and happiness arise from those animal worlds and worlds of Yama, and having arisen from those animal worlds and worlds of Yama they are reborn in buddhafiels where the lord buddhas are residing and maintaining themselves. Having pacified all the sufferings of the animal world and the world of Yama of the beings born in the animal world and in the world of Yama, as many as there are, in the world systems of the intermediate northeastern direction, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā, they raise their voices and shout out loud, 'Homage to the tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas!' At that time, when those beings born in the animal world and in the world of Yama have heard the sound buddha, they find joy and happiness, and through their joy and happiness arise from those animal worlds and worlds of Yama, and having arisen from those animal worlds and worlds of Yama they are reborn in buddhafiels where the lord buddhas are residing and maintaining themselves. Having pacified all the sufferings of the animal world and the world of Yama [F.127.a] of the beings born in the animal world and in the world of Yama, as many as there are, in the world systems of the intermediate southeastern direction, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā, they raise their voices and shout out loud, 'Homage to the tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas!' At that time, when those beings born in the animal world and in the world of Yama have heard the sound buddha, they find joy and happiness, and through their joy and happiness arise from those animal worlds and worlds of Yama, and having arisen from those animal worlds and worlds of Yama they are reborn in buddhafiels where the lord buddhas are residing and maintaining themselves. Having pacified all the sufferings of the animal world and the world of Yama of the beings born in the animal world and in the world of Yama, as many as there are, in the world systems of the intermediate southwestern direction, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā, they raise their voices and shout out loud, 'Homage to the tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas!' At that time, when those beings born in the animal world and in the world of Yama have heard the sound buddha, they find joy and happiness, and through their joy and happiness arise from those animal worlds and worlds of Yama, and having arisen from those animal worlds and worlds of Yama they are reborn in buddhafiels [F.127.b] where the lord buddhas are residing and maintaining themselves. Having pacified all the sufferings of the animal world and the world of Yama of the beings born in the animal world and in the world of Yama, as many as there are, in the world systems of the intermediate northwestern direction, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā, they raise their voices and shout out loud, 'Homage to the tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas!' At that time, when those beings born in the animal world and in the world of Yama have heard the sound buddha, they find joy and happiness, and through their joy and happiness arise from those animal worlds and worlds of Yama, and having arisen from those animal worlds and worlds of Yama they are reborn in buddhafiels where the lord buddhas are residing and maintaining themselves. Having pacified all the sufferings of the animal world and the world of Yama of the beings born in the animal world and in the world of Yama, as many as there are, in the world systems in the direction of the nadir, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā, they raise their voices and shout out loud, 'Homage to the tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas!' At that time, when those beings born in the animal world and in the world of Yama have heard the sound buddha, they find joy and happiness, and through their joy and happiness arise from those animal worlds and worlds of Yama, and having arisen from [F.128.a] those animal worlds and worlds of Yama they are reborn in buddhafiels where the lord buddhas are residing and maintaining themselves. Having pacified all the sufferings of the animal world and of the world of Yama of the beings born in the animal world and in the world of Yama, as many as there are, in the world systems in the direction of the zenith, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā, they raise their voices and shout out loud, 'Homage to the tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas!’ At that time, when those beings born in the animal world and in the world of Yama have heard the sound buddha, they find joy and happiness, and through their joy and happiness arise from those animal worlds and worlds of Yama, and having arisen from those animal worlds and worlds of Yama they are reborn in buddhafi elds where the lord buddhas are residing and maintaining themselves.

8.273 “Subhūti, if, as an analogy, an illusionist or the apprentice of an illusionist, standing at a crossroads, in the presence of a large gathering of people, were to conjure up the hells, the animal realms, and the Yama worlds, and, having conjured them up in that manner, were to proclaim the word Buddha, proclaim the word Dharma, and proclaim the word San̄gha to those beings in those inferior realms, causing those they have conjured up to arise from the hells, the animal realms, and the Yama worlds through the word Buddha, the word Dharma, and the word San̄gha, [F.128.b] do you think, Subhūti, that this illusionist or the apprentice of an illusionist would have caused any beings to arise from the hells, the animal realms, or the Yama worlds?”

“No, Blessed Lord,” answered Subhūti.

8.274 “In the same way, Subhūti,” said the Blessed One, “although bodhisattva great beings have liberated immeasurable, countless beings in the world systems of the ten directions from the three inferior realms, there are no beings at all who have been liberated. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because this is just the way things are, given the illusory nature of phenomena. It is in this way, Subhūti, that bodhisattva great beings are said to have ‘donned the great armor.’

8.275 “Moreover, Subhūti, bodhisattva great beings who have donned the great armor dwell in the perfection of generosity and emanate a great billionfold world system made of beryl. Having emanated it made of beryl in that manner, they emanate the dominion of a wheel-turning emperor. Having emanated the dominion of an imperial monarch in that manner, they give food to those in need of nourishment, and they give drink to those in need of drink, give vehicles to those in need of vehicles, give clothing to those in need of clothing, give flowers to those in need of flowers, give garlands to those in need of garlands, give incense to those in need of incense, give unguents to those in need of unguents, [F.129.a] give lodgings to those in need of lodgings, give homes to those in need of homes, give sustenance to those in need of sustenance, give resources to those in need of resources, give medications to those in need of medications owing to ill health, and give gems, pearls, beryl, conch, quartz, coral, gold, and silver to those who need gems, pearls, beryl, conch, quartz, coral, gold, and silver, up to giving whatever resources might be needed. Having given food to those in need of nourishment, given drink to those in need of drink, given vehicles to those in need of vehicles, given clothing to those in need of clothing, given flowers to those in need of flowers, given garlands to those in need of garlands, given incense to those in need of incense, given unguents to those in need of unguents, given lodgings to those in need of lodgings, given homes to those in need of homes, given sustenance to those in need of sustenance, given resources to those in need of resources, given medications to those in need of medications owing to ill health, and given gems, pearls, beryl, conch, quartz, coral, gold, and silver to those who need gems, pearls, beryl, conch, quartz, coral, gold, and silver, up to having given whatever resources might be needed, they then teach those beings the Dharma—just this Dharma endowed with the six perfections. Those beings, too, on hearing this Dharma, will never be separated from the six perfections until they have fully awakened to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment.

8.276 “Subhūti, if, as an analogy, an illusionist or the apprentice of [F.129.b] an illusionist, standing at a crossroads, in the presence of a large gathering of people, were to conjure up a large group of people and were to give food to those in need of nourishment, give drink to those in need of drink, give vehicles to those in need of vehicles, give clothing to those in need of clothing, give flowers to those in need of flowers, give garlands to those in need of garlands, give incense to those in need of incense, give unguents to those in need of unguents, give lodgings to those in need of lodgings, give homes to those in need of homes, give sustenance to those in need of sustenance, give resources to those in need of resources, give medications to those in need of medications owing to ill health, and give gems, pearls, beryl, conch, quartz, coral, gold, and silver to those who need gems, pearls, beryl, conch, quartz, coral, gold, and silver, up to giving whatever resources might be needed, do you think, Subhūti, that this illusionist or the apprentice of an illusionist would actually have given anything to any being?”

“No, Blessed Lord!” answered Subhūti.

8.277 “In the same way, Subhūti,” said the Blessed One, “bodhisattva great beings, having emanated the dominion of an imperial monarch, give food to those in need of nourishment, give drink to those in need of drink, give vehicles to those in need of vehicles, give clothing to those in need of clothing, give flowers to those in need of flowers, give garlands to those in need of garlands, give incense to those in need of incense, give unguents to those in need of unguents, give lodgings to those in need of lodgings, give homes to those in need of homes, [F.130.a] give sustenance to those in need of sustenance, give resources to those in need of resources, give medications to those in need of medications owing to ill health, and give gems, pearls, beryl, conch, quartz, coral, gold, and silver to those who need gems, pearls, beryl, conch, quartz, coral, gold, and silver, up to giving whatever resources might be needed, but they have not given anything to any being. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because this is just the way things are, given the illusory nature of phenomena. It is in this way, Subhūti, that bodhisattva great beings are said to have ‘donned the great armor.’

8.278 “Moreover, Subhūti, bodhisattva great beings dwell in the perfection of ethical discipline and intentionally take birth in the family of an imperial monarch. Dwelling as mighty lords in the family of an imperial monarch, they establish beings on the path of the ten virtuous actions. They establish beings in the four meditative concentrations, the four immeasurable attitudes, the four formless absorptions, the five extrasensory powers, the four applications of mindfulness, the four correct exertions, the four supports for miraculous ability, the five faculties, the five powers, the seven branches of enlightenment, and the noble eightfold path; the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation, the eight liberations, the nine serial steps of meditative absorption, the four truths of the noble ones, the meditative stabilities, and the dhāraṇī gateways; and the ten powers of the tathāgatas, the four fearlessnesses, the four [F.130.b] kinds of exact knowledge, great compassion, and the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas. These beings, too, will never be separated from this teaching of the Dharma until they have fully awakened to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment.

8.279 “Subhūti, if, as an analogy, an illusionist or the apprentice of an illusionist, standing at a crossroads, in the presence of a large gathering of people, were to conjure up a large gathering of people and establish those beings on the path of the ten virtuous actions, or establish those beings in the four meditative concentrations, the four immeasurable attitudes, the four formless absorptions, the five extrasensory powers, the four applications of mindfulness, the four correct exertions, the four supports for miraculous ability, the five faculties, the five powers, the seven branches of enlightenment, and the noble eightfold path; the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation, the eight liberations, the nine serial steps of meditative absorption, the four truths of the noble ones, the meditative stabilities, and the dhāraṇī gateways; and the ten powers of the tathāgatas, the four fearlessnesses, the four kinds of exact knowledge, great compassion, and the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas, do you think, Subhūti, that this illusionist or the apprentice of an illusionist would have established any beings on the path of the ten virtuous actions, or would have established them in the four meditative concentrations, the four immeasurable attitudes, the four formless absorptions, the five extrasensory powers, the four applications of mindfulness, the four correct [F.131.a] exertions, the four supports for miraculous ability, the five faculties, the five powers, the seven branches of enlightenment, and the noble eightfold path; the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation, the eight liberations, the nine serial steps of meditative absorption, the four truths of the noble ones, the meditative stabilities, and the dhāraṇī gateways; and the ten powers of the tathāgatas, the four fearlessnesses, the four kinds of exact knowledge, great compassion, and the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas?”

“No, Blessed Lord,” answered Subhūti.

8.280 “In the same way, Subhūti,” said the Blessed One, “bodhisattva great beings establish immeasurable, countless beings on the path of the ten virtuous actions, and establish those beings in the four meditative concentrations, the four immeasurable attitudes, the four formless absorptions, the five extrasensory powers, the four applications of mindfulness, the four correct exertions, the four supports for miraculous ability, the five faculties, the five powers, the seven branches of enlightenment, and the noble eightfold path; the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation, the eight liberations, the nine serial steps of meditative absorption, the four truths of the noble ones, the meditative stabilities, and the dhāraṇī gateways; and the ten powers of the tathāgatas, the four fearlessnesses, the four kinds of exact knowledge, great compassion, and the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas, but they do not establish any beings in them at all. [F.131.b] If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because this is just the way things are, given the illusory nature of phenomena. It is in this way, Subhūti, that bodhisattva great beings are said to have ‘donned the great armor.’

8.281 “Moreover, Subhūti, bodhisattva great beings dwelling in the perfection of tolerance unite all beings with the perfection of tolerance and establish them in it. Subhūti, if you ask in what way bodhisattva great beings, dwelling in the perfection of tolerance, unite all beings with the perfection of tolerance and establish them in it, in this regard, Subhūti, commencing from the time when they first set their mind on enlightenment, bodhisattva great beings don their armor, thinking, ‘I should not let my mind become disturbed even just a bit, even once, even if all beings hit me with stones and sticks, or strike me with weapons,’ and they also establish all beings in such tolerance.

8.282 “Subhūti, if, as an analogy, an illusionist or the apprentice of an illusionist, standing at a crossroads, in the presence of a large gathering of people, were to conjure up a large gathering of people, uniting them with the perfection of tolerance and establishing them in it, do you think, Subhūti, that this illusionist or the apprentice of an illusionist would have established any beings in the perfection of tolerance?”

“No, Blessed Lord,” answered Subhūti.

- 8.283        “In the same way, Subhūti,” said the Blessed One, “bodhisattva great beings establish immeasurable, countless beings in the perfection of tolerance, but they do not establish any beings at all [F.132.a] in the perfection of tolerance. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because this is just the way things are, given the illusory nature of phenomena. It is in this way, Subhūti, that bodhisattva great beings are said to have ‘donned the great armor.’
- 8.284        “Moreover, Subhūti, bodhisattva great beings dwelling in the perfection of perseverance encourage, secure, and establish all beings in the perfection of perseverance. Subhūti, if you ask in what way bodhisattva great beings, dwelling in the perfection of perseverance, encourage, secure, and establish all beings in the perfection of perseverance, Subhūti, here those bodhisattva great beings, with their minds set on and directed toward all-aspect omniscience, encourage, secure, and establish all beings in physical and mental perseverance.
- 8.285        “Subhūti, if, as an analogy, an illusionist or the apprentice of an illusionist, standing at a crossroads, in the presence of a large gathering of people, were to conjure up a large gathering of people, and then encourage, secure, and establish them in physical and mental perseverance, do you think, Subhūti, that this illusionist or the apprentice of an illusionist would establish any beings in physical and mental perseverance?”
- “No, Blessed Lord,” answered Subhūti.
- 8.286        “In the same way, Subhūti,” said the Blessed One, “bodhisattva great beings establish immeasurable, countless beings in physical and mental perseverance, but they do not establish any beings at all in physical and mental [F.132.b] perseverance. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because this is just the way things are, given the illusory nature of phenomena. It is in this way, Subhūti, that bodhisattva great beings are said to have ‘donned the great armor.’
- 8.287        “Moreover, Subhūti, bodhisattva great beings dwelling in the perfection of meditative concentration encourage, secure, and establish all beings in the perfection of meditative concentration. Subhūti, if you ask in what way bodhisattva great beings dwelling in the perfection of meditative concentration encourage, secure, and establish all beings in the perfection of meditative concentration, Subhūti, if those bodhisattva great beings abide in just the way things are, in the reality of all phenomena, and do not observe any phenomena to be distracted or not distracted, they dwell in the perfection of meditative concentration. They encourage, secure, and establish all beings, too, in a perfection of meditative concentration like that, and those whom they thus encourage, until they have fully awakened to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment, will never become separated from the perfection of meditative concentration.

8.288 “Subhūti, if, as an analogy, an illusionist or the apprentice of an illusionist, standing at a crossroads, in the presence of a large gathering of people, were to conjure up a large gathering of people and then establish them in the perfection of meditative concentration, do you think, Subhūti, that this illusionist or the apprentice of an illusionist would establish any beings in the perfection of meditative concentration?” [F.133.a]

“No, Blessed Lord,” answered Subhūti.

8.289 “In the same way, Subhūti,” said the Blessed One, “bodhisattva great beings establish all beings in the perfection of meditative concentration, but they do not establish any beings at all in the perfection of meditative concentration. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because this is just the way things are, given the illusory nature of phenomena. It is in this way, Subhūti, that bodhisattva great beings are said to have ‘donned the great armor.’

8.290 “Moreover, Subhūti, bodhisattva great beings dwelling in the perfection of wisdom encourage, secure, and establish all beings in the perfection of wisdom. Subhūti, if you ask in what way bodhisattva great beings dwelling in the perfection of meditative concentration encourage, secure, and establish all beings in the perfection of wisdom, Subhūti, here, when those bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom, they do not apprehend any phenomena that may be arising or ceasing, defiled or purified, proximate or remote. That, Subhūti, is how bodhisattva great beings dwell in the perfection of wisdom, and they encourage, secure, and establish all beings, too, in a perfection of wisdom like that.

8.291 “Subhūti, if, as an analogy, an illusionist or the apprentice of an illusionist, standing at a crossroads, in the presence of a large gathering of people, were to conjure up a large gathering of people [F.133.b] and then encourage, secure, and establish them in the perfection of wisdom, do you think, Subhūti, that this illusionist or the apprentice of an illusionist would establish any beings in the perfection of wisdom?”

“No, Blessed Lord,” answered Subhūti.

8.292 “In the same way, Subhūti,” said the Blessed One, “bodhisattva great beings establish all beings in the perfection of wisdom, but they do not establish any beings at all in the perfection of wisdom. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because this is just the way things are, given the illusory nature of phenomena. It is in this way, Subhūti, that bodhisattva great beings are said to have ‘donned the great armor.’

8.293       “Moreover, Subhūti, bodhisattva great beings, having donned the great armor, proceed to the world systems of the eastern direction, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā, and, just as they themselves dwell in the perfection of generosity, they similarly encourage, secure, and establish all beings, as many as there are in those world systems, in the perfection of generosity; just as they themselves dwell in the perfection of ethical discipline, they similarly encourage, secure, and establish all beings, as many as there are in those world systems, in the perfection of ethical discipline; just as they themselves dwell in the perfection of tolerance, they similarly encourage, secure, and establish all beings, as many as there are in those world systems, in the perfection of tolerance; just as they themselves dwell in the perfection of perseverance, [F.134.a] they similarly encourage, secure, and establish all beings, as many as there are in those world systems, in the perfection of perseverance; just as they themselves dwell in the perfection of meditative concentration, they similarly encourage, secure, and establish all beings, as many as there are in those world systems, in the perfection of meditative concentration; and just as they themselves dwell in the perfection of wisdom, they similarly encourage, secure, and establish all beings, as many as there are in those world systems, in the perfection of wisdom. They teach the Dharma—that is to say, these very six perfections—and those beings, too, on hearing this Dharma, will never be separated from the six perfections until they have fully awakened to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment.

8.294       “Moreover, Subhūti, bodhisattva great beings, having donned the great armor, proceed to the world systems of the southern direction, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā, and, just as they themselves dwell in the perfection of generosity, they similarly encourage, secure, and establish all beings, as many as there are in those world systems, in the perfection of generosity; just as they themselves dwell in the perfection of ethical discipline, they similarly encourage, secure, and establish all beings, as many as there are in those world systems, in the perfection of ethical discipline; just as they themselves dwell in the perfection of tolerance, they similarly encourage, secure, and establish all beings, as many as there are in those world systems, in the perfection of tolerance; just as they themselves dwell [F.134.b] in the perfection of perseverance, they similarly encourage, secure, and establish all beings, as many as there are in those world systems, in the perfection of perseverance; just as they themselves dwell in the perfection of meditative concentration, they similarly encourage, secure, and establish all beings, as many as there are in those world systems, in the perfection of meditative concentration; and just as they themselves dwell in the perfection of wisdom, they similarly encourage, secure, and establish all beings, as many as there are in those world systems, in the perfection of wisdom. They teach the Dharma—that is to say, these very six perfections—and those beings, too, on hearing this Dharma, will never be separated from the six perfections until they have fully awakened to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment.

8.295 “They proceed to the world systems of the western direction, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā, and, just as they themselves dwell in the perfection of generosity, they similarly encourage, secure, and establish all beings, as many as there are in those world systems, in the perfection of generosity; just as they themselves dwell in the perfection of ethical discipline, they similarly encourage, secure, and establish all beings, as many as there are in those world systems, in the perfection of ethical discipline; just as they themselves dwell in the perfection of tolerance, they similarly encourage, secure, and establish all beings, as many as there are in those world systems, [F.135.a] in the perfection of tolerance; just as they themselves dwell in the perfection of perseverance, they similarly encourage, secure, and establish all beings, as many as there are in those world systems, in the perfection of perseverance; just as they themselves dwell in the perfection of meditative concentration, they similarly encourage, secure, and establish all beings, as many as there are in those world systems, in the perfection of meditative concentration; and just as they themselves dwell in the perfection of wisdom, they similarly encourage, secure, and establish all beings, as many as there are in those world systems, in the perfection of wisdom. They teach the Dharma—that is to say, these very six perfections—and those beings, too, on hearing this Dharma, will never be separated from the six perfections until they have fully awakened to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment.

8.296 “They proceed to the world systems of the northern direction, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā, and, just as they themselves dwell in the perfection of generosity, they similarly encourage, secure, and establish all beings, as many as there are in those world systems, in the perfection of generosity; just as they themselves dwell in the perfection of ethical discipline, they similarly encourage, secure, and establish all beings, as many as there are in those world systems, in the perfection of ethical discipline; just as they themselves dwell in the perfection of tolerance, they similarly encourage, secure, [F.135.b] and establish all beings, as many as there are in those world systems, in the perfection of tolerance; just as they themselves dwell in the perfection of perseverance, they similarly encourage, secure, and establish all beings, as many as there are in those world systems, in the perfection of perseverance; just as they themselves dwell in the perfection of meditative concentration, they similarly encourage, secure, and establish all beings, as many as there are in those world systems, in the perfection of meditative concentration; and just as they themselves dwell in the perfection of wisdom, they similarly encourage, secure, and establish all beings, as many as there are in those world systems, in the perfection of wisdom. They teach the Dharma—that is to say, these very six perfections—and those beings, too, on hearing this Dharma, will never be separated from the six perfections until they have fully awakened to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment.

8.297 “They proceed to the world systems of the intermediate northeastern direction, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā, and, just as they themselves dwell in the perfection of generosity, they similarly encourage, secure, and establish all beings, as many as there are in those world systems, in the perfection of generosity; just as they themselves dwell in the perfection of ethical discipline, they similarly encourage, secure, and establish all beings, as many as there are in those world systems, in the perfection of ethical discipline; just as they themselves dwell in the perfection of tolerance, [F.136.a] they similarly encourage, secure, and establish all beings, as many as there are in those world systems, in the perfection of tolerance; just as they themselves dwell in the perfection of perseverance, they similarly encourage, secure, and establish all beings, as many as there are in those world systems, in the perfection of perseverance; just as they themselves dwell in the perfection of meditative concentration, they similarly encourage, secure, and establish all beings, as many as there are in those world systems, in the perfection of meditative concentration; and just as they themselves dwell in the perfection of wisdom, they similarly encourage, secure, and establish all beings, as many as there are in those world systems, in the perfection of wisdom. They teach the Dharma—that is to say, these very six perfections—and those beings, too, on hearing this Dharma, will never be separated from the six perfections until they have fully awakened to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment.

8.298 “They proceed to the world systems of the intermediate southeastern direction, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā, and, just as they themselves dwell in the perfection of generosity, they similarly encourage, secure, and establish all beings, as many as there are in those world systems, in the perfection of generosity; just as they themselves dwell in the perfection of ethical discipline, they similarly encourage, secure, and establish all beings, as many as there are in those world systems, in the perfection of ethical discipline; just as [F.136.b] they themselves dwell in the perfection of tolerance, they similarly encourage, secure, and establish all beings, as many as there are in those world systems, in the perfection of tolerance; just as they themselves dwell in the perfection of perseverance, they similarly encourage, secure, and establish all beings, as many as there are in those world systems, in the perfection of perseverance; just as they themselves dwell in the perfection of meditative concentration, they similarly encourage, secure, and establish all beings, as many as there are in those world systems, in the perfection of meditative concentration; and just as they themselves dwell in the perfection of wisdom, they similarly encourage, secure, and establish all beings, as many as there are in those world systems, in the perfection of wisdom. They teach the Dharma—that is to say, these very six perfections—and those beings, too, on hearing this Dharma, will never be separated from the six perfections until they have fully awakened to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment.

8.299 “They proceed to the world systems of the intermediate southwestern direction, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā, and, just as they themselves dwell in the perfection of generosity, they similarly encourage, secure, and establish all beings, as many as there are in those world systems, in the perfection of generosity; just as they themselves dwell in the perfection of ethical discipline, they similarly encourage, secure, and establish all beings, as many as there are in those world systems, in the perfection of ethical discipline; just as they themselves dwell [F.137.a] in the perfection of tolerance, they similarly encourage, secure, and establish all beings, as many as there are in those world systems, in the perfection of tolerance; just as they themselves dwell in the perfection of perseverance, they similarly encourage, secure, and establish all beings, as many as there are in those world systems, in the perfection of perseverance; just as they themselves dwell in the perfection of meditative concentration, they similarly encourage, secure, and establish all beings, as many as there are in those world systems, in the perfection of meditative concentration; and just as they themselves dwell in the perfection of wisdom, they similarly encourage, secure, and establish all beings, as many as there are in those world systems, in the perfection of wisdom. They teach the Dharma—that is to say, these very six perfections—and those beings, too, on hearing this Dharma, will never be separated from the six perfections until they have fully awakened to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment.

8.300 “They proceed to the world systems of the intermediate northwestern direction, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā, and, just as they themselves dwell in the perfection of generosity, they similarly encourage, secure, and establish all beings, as many as there are in those world systems, in the perfection of generosity; just as they themselves dwell in the perfection of ethical discipline, they similarly encourage, secure, and establish all beings, as many as there are in those world systems, in the perfection of ethical discipline; just as they themselves dwell [F.137.b] in the perfection of tolerance, they similarly encourage, secure, and establish all beings, as many as there are in those world systems, in the perfection of tolerance; just as they themselves dwell in the perfection of perseverance, they similarly encourage, secure, and establish all beings, as many as there are in those world systems, in the perfection of perseverance; just as they themselves dwell in the perfection of meditative concentration, they similarly encourage, secure, and establish all beings, as many as there are in those world systems, in the perfection of meditative concentration; and just as they themselves dwell in the perfection of wisdom, they similarly encourage, secure, and establish all beings, as many as there are in those world systems, in the perfection of wisdom. They teach the Dharma—that is to say, these very six perfections—and those beings, too, on hearing this Dharma, will never be separated from the six perfections until they have fully awakened to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment.

8.301 “They proceed to the world systems in the direction of the nadir, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā, and, just as they themselves dwell in the perfection of generosity, they similarly encourage, secure, and establish all beings, as many as there are in those world systems, in the perfection of generosity; just as they themselves dwell in the perfection of ethical discipline, they similarly encourage, secure, and establish all beings, as many as there are in those world systems, in the perfection of ethical discipline; just as they themselves dwell in the perfection of tolerance, they similarly encourage, secure, and establish [F.138.a] all beings, as many as there are in those world systems, in the perfection of tolerance; just as they themselves dwell in the perfection of perseverance, they similarly encourage, secure, and establish all beings, as many as there are in those world systems, in the perfection of perseverance; just as they themselves dwell in the perfection of meditative concentration, they similarly encourage, secure, and establish all beings, as many as there are in those world systems, in the perfection of meditative concentration; and just as they themselves dwell in the perfection of wisdom, they similarly encourage, secure, and establish all beings, as many as there are in those world systems, in the perfection of wisdom. They teach the Dharma—that is to say, these very six perfections—and those beings, too, on hearing this Dharma, will never be separated from the six perfections until they have fully awakened to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment.

8.302 “And they proceed to the world systems in the direction of the zenith, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā, and, just as they themselves dwell in the perfection of generosity, they similarly encourage, secure, and establish all beings, as many as there are in those world systems, in the perfection of generosity; just as they themselves dwell in the perfection of ethical discipline, they similarly encourage, secure, and establish all beings, as many as there are in those world systems, in the perfection of ethical discipline; just as they themselves dwell in the perfection of tolerance, they similarly encourage, secure, and establish all beings, [F.138.b] as many as there are in those world systems, in the perfection of tolerance; just as they themselves dwell in the perfection of perseverance, they similarly encourage, secure, and establish all beings, as many as there are in those world systems, in the perfection of perseverance; just as they themselves dwell in the perfection of meditative concentration, they similarly encourage, secure, and establish all beings, as many as there are in those world systems, in the perfection of meditative concentration; and just as they themselves dwell in the perfection of wisdom, they similarly encourage, secure, and establish all beings, as many as there are in those world systems, in the perfection of wisdom. They teach the Dharma—that is to say, these very six perfections—and those beings, too, on hearing this Dharma, will never be separated from the six perfections until they have fully awakened to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment.

8.303 “Subhūti, if, as an analogy, an illusionist or the apprentice of an illusionist, standing at a crossroads, in the presence of a large gathering of people, were to conjure up a large gathering of people and then encourage, secure, and establish them in the six perfections, do you think, Subhūti, that this illusionist or the apprentice of an illusionist would encourage, secure, and establish any beings in the six perfections?”

“No, Blessed Lord,” answered Subhūti.

8.304 “In the same way, Subhūti,” said the Blessed One, “bodhisattva great beings, establish all beings—as many as there are in the world systems in the eastern direction, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā; as many as there are in the world systems in the southern direction, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā; as many as there are in the world systems [F.139.a] in the western direction, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā; as many as there are in the world systems in the northern direction, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā; as many as there are in the world systems in the intermediate northeastern direction, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā; as many as there are in the world systems in the intermediate southeastern direction, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā; as many as there are in the world systems in the intermediate southwestern direction, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā; as many as there are in the world systems in the intermediate northwestern direction, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā; as many as there are in the world systems in the direction of the nadir, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā; and as many as there are in the world systems in the direction of the zenith, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā—in the six perfections, but they do not establish any beings at all in the six perfections. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because this is just the way things are, given the illusory nature of phenomena. It is in this way, Subhūti, that bodhisattva great have are said to have donned the great armor. [B10]

8.305 “Moreover, Subhūti, bodhisattva great beings, having donned the great armor, with a mind directed toward all-aspect omniscience, do not allow an opportunity for the development of other settings of the mind, thinking, ‘I must establish just this many beings in the perfection of generosity; I do not need to establish this many beings in it. I must establish just this many beings in the perfection of ethical discipline; I do not need to establish this many beings in it. I must establish just this many beings in the perfection of tolerance; I do not need to establish this many beings in it. I must establish just this many beings in the perfection of perseverance; I do not need to establish [F.139.b] this many beings in it. I must establish just this many beings in the perfection of meditative concentration; I do not need to establish this many beings in it. And I must establish just this many beings in the perfection of wisdom; I do not need to establish this many beings in it.

8.306 “ ‘I must establish just this many beings in the emptiness of internal phenomena; I do not need to establish this many beings in it. I must establish just this many beings in the emptiness of external phenomena; I do not need to establish this many beings in it. I must establish just this many beings in the emptiness of external and internal phenomena; I do not need to establish this many beings in it. I must establish just this many beings in the emptiness of emptiness; I do not need to establish this many beings in it. I must establish just this many beings in the emptiness of great extent; I do not need to establish this many beings in it. I must establish just this many beings in the emptiness of ultimate reality; I do not need to establish this many beings in it. I must establish just this many beings in the emptiness of conditioned phenomena; I do not need to establish this many beings in it. I must establish just this many beings in the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena; I do not need to establish this many beings in it. I must establish just this many beings in the emptiness of the unlimited; I do not need to establish this many beings in it. I must establish just this many beings in the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end; I do not need to establish this many beings in it. I must establish just this many beings in the emptiness of nonexclusion; I do not need to establish this many beings in it. I must establish just this many beings in the emptiness of inherent nature; I do not need to establish this many beings in it. I must establish just this many [F.140.a] beings in the emptiness of all phenomena; I do not need to establish this many beings in it. I must establish just this many beings in the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics; I do not need to establish this many beings in it. I must establish just this many beings in the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended; I do not need to establish this many beings in it. I must establish just this many beings in the emptiness of nonentities; I do not need to establish this many beings in it. I must establish just this many beings in the emptiness of essential nature; I do not need to establish this many beings in it. And I must establish just this many beings in the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities; I do not need to establish this many beings in it.

8.307 “ I must establish just this many beings in the four applications of mindfulness; I do not need to establish this many beings in them. I must establish just this many beings in the four correct exertions; I do not need to establish this many beings in them. I must establish just this many beings in the four supports for miraculous ability; I do not need to establish this many beings in them. I must establish just this many beings in the five faculties; I do not need to establish this many beings in them. I must establish just this many beings in the five powers; I do not need to establish this many beings in them. I must establish just this many beings in the seven branches of enlightenment; I do not need to establish this many beings in them. And I must establish just this many beings in the noble eightfold path; I do not need to establish this many beings in it.

8.308 “ I must establish just this many beings in the four truths of the noble ones; I do not need to establish this many beings in them. I must establish just this many beings [F.140.b] in the four meditative concentrations; I do not need to establish this many beings in them. I must establish just this many beings in the four immeasurable attitudes; I do not need to establish this many beings in them. I must establish just this many beings in the four formless absorptions; I do not need to establish this many beings in them. I must establish just this many beings in the eight liberations; I do not need to establish this many beings in them. I must establish just this many beings in the nine serial steps of meditative absorption; I do not need to establish this many beings in them. I must establish just this many beings in the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation; I do not need to establish this many beings in them. I must establish just this many beings in the five extrasensory powers; I do not need to establish this many beings in them. I must establish just this many beings in the meditative stabilities; I do not need to establish this many beings in them. I must establish just this many beings in the dhāraṇī gateways; I do not need to establish this many beings in them. I must establish just this many beings in the ten powers of the tathāgatas; I do not need to establish this many beings in them. I must establish just this many beings in the four fearlessnesses; I do not need to establish this many beings in them. I must establish just this many beings in the four kinds of exact knowledge; I do not need to establish this many beings in them. I must establish just this many beings in great compassion; I do not need to establish this many beings in it. And I must establish just this many beings in the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas; I do not need [F.141.a] to establish this many beings in them.

8.309 “ I must establish just this many beings in the fruit of those who have entered the stream; I do not need to establish this many beings in it. I must establish just this many beings in the fruit of once-returners; I do not need to establish this many beings in it. I must establish just this many beings in the fruit of non-returners; I do not need to establish this many beings in it. I must establish just this many beings in arhatship; I do not need to establish this many beings in it. I must establish just this many beings in individual enlightenment; I do not need to establish this many beings in it. I must establish just this many beings in the knowledge of the aspects of the path; I do not need to establish this many beings in it. And I must establish just this many beings in all-aspect omniscience; I do not need to establish this many beings in it.’ They do not allow an opportunity for the mind to become set on those. Rather, they think, ‘I must establish immeasurable and countless beings in the perfection of generosity. I must establish them in the perfection of ethical discipline. I must establish them in in the perfection of tolerance. I must establish them in in the perfection of perseverance. I must establish them in in the perfection of meditative concentration. And I must establish them in in the perfection of wisdom.

8.310 “ I must establish them in the emptiness of internal phenomena. I must establish them in the emptiness of external phenomena. I must establish them in the emptiness of external and internal phenomena. I must establish them in the emptiness of emptiness. I must establish them in the emptiness of great extent. I must establish them in the emptiness of ultimate reality. I must establish them in the emptiness of conditioned phenomena. I must establish them in the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena. I must establish them in the emptiness of the unlimited. [F.141.b] I must establish them in the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end. I must establish them in the emptiness of nonexclusion. I must establish them in the emptiness of inherent nature. I must establish them in the emptiness of all phenomena. I must establish them in the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics. I must establish them in the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended. I must establish them in the emptiness of nonentities. I must establish them in the emptiness of essential nature. And I must establish them in the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities.

8.311 “ I must establish them in the four applications of mindfulness. I must establish them in the four correct exertions. I must establish them in the four supports for miraculous ability. I must establish them in the five faculties. I must establish them in the five powers. I must establish them in the seven branches of enlightenment. And I must establish them in the noble eightfold path.

8.312 “ I must establish them in the four truths of the noble ones. I must establish them in the four meditative concentrations. I must establish them in the four immeasurable attitudes. I must establish them in the four formless absorptions. I must establish them in the eight liberations. I must establish them in the nine serial steps of meditative absorption. I must establish them in the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation. I must establish them in the five extrasensory powers. I must establish them in all the meditative stabilities. I must establish them in the dhāraṇī gateways. I must establish them in the ten powers of the tathāgatas. I must establish them in the four fearlessnesses. I must establish them in the four kinds of exact knowledge. I must establish them in great compassion. And I must establish them in the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas.

8.313 “ I must establish them in the fruit of those who have entered the stream. I must establish them in the fruit of once-returners. I must establish them in the fruit of non-returners. I must establish them in arhatship. I must establish them [F.142.a] in individual enlightenment. I must establish them in the knowledge of the aspects of the path. And I must establish them in all-aspect omniscience.’ They set their mind on those.

8.314 “Subhūti, if, as an analogy, an illusionist or the apprentice of an illusionist, standing at a crossroads, in the presence of a large gathering of people, were to conjure up a large gathering of people, and set their mind, thinking, ‘I must establish immeasurable and countless beings in the six perfections. I must establish them in the eighteen emptinesses. I must establish them in the four applications of mindfulness. I must establish them in the four correct exertions. I must establish them in the four supports for miraculous ability. I must establish them in the five faculties. I must establish them in the five powers. I must establish them in the seven branches of enlightenment. I must establish them in the noble eightfold path. I must establish them in the four truths of the noble ones. I must establish them in the four meditative concentrations. I must establish them in the four immeasurable attitudes. I must establish them in the four formless absorptions. I must establish them in the eight liberations. I must establish them in the nine serial steps of meditative absorption. I must establish them in the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation. I must establish them in the five extrasensory powers. I must establish them in all the meditative stabilities. I must establish them in the dhāraṇī gateways. I must establish them in the ten powers of the tathāgatas. I must establish them in the four fearlessnesses. I must establish them in the four kinds of exact knowledge. I must establish them in great compassion. I must establish them in the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas. I must establish them in the fruit of those who have entered the stream. I must establish them in the fruit of once-returners. I must establish [F.142.b] them in the fruit of non-returners. I must establish them in arhatship. I must establish them in individual enlightenment. I must establish them in the knowledge of the aspects of the path. And I must establish them in all-aspect omniscience,’ do you think, Subhūti, that this illusionist or the apprentice of an illusionist would have established any beings in the six perfections, would have established them in the eighteen emptinesses,<sup>427</sup> would have established them in the four applications of mindfulness, would have established them in the four correct exertions, would have established them in the four supports for miraculous ability, would have established them in the five faculties, would have established them in the five powers, would have established them in the seven branches of enlightenment, would have established them in the noble eightfold path, would have established them in the four truths of the noble ones, would have established them in the four meditative concentrations, would have established them in the four immeasurable attitudes, would have established them in the four formless absorptions, would have established them in the eight liberations, would have established them in the nine serial steps of meditative absorption, would have established them in the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation, would have established them in the five extrasensory powers, would have established them in all the meditative stabilities, would have established them in the dhāraṇī gateways, would have established them in the ten powers of the tathāgatas, would have established them in the four fearlessnesses, would have established them in the four kinds of exact knowledge, would have established them in great compassion, would have established them [F.143.a] in the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas, would have established them in the fruit of those who have entered the stream, would have established them in the fruit of once-returners, would have established them in the fruit of non-returners, would have established them in arhatship, would have established them in individual enlightenment, would have established them in the knowledge of the aspects of the path, or would have established them in all-aspect omniscience?”

“No, Blessed Lord,” answered Subhūti.

8.315        “In the same way, Subhūti,” said the Blessed One, “bodhisattva great beings set their minds on establishing immeasurable, countless beings in the six perfections, set their minds on establishing them in the eighteen emptinesses, set their minds on establishing them in the four applications of mindfulness, set their minds on establishing them in the four correct exertions, set their minds on establishing them in the four supports for miraculous ability, set their minds on establishing them in the five faculties, set their minds on establishing them in the five powers, set their minds on establishing them in the seven branches of enlightenment, set their minds on establishing them in the noble eightfold path, set their minds on establishing them in the four truths of the noble ones, set their minds on establishing them in the four meditative concentrations, set their minds on establishing them in the four immeasurable attitudes, set their minds on establishing them in the four formless absorptions, set their minds on establishing them in the eight liberations, set their minds on establishing them in the nine serial steps of meditative absorption, set their minds on establishing them in the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation, set their minds on establishing them in the five extrasensory powers, set their minds on establishing them in all the meditative stabilities, set their minds on establishing [F.143.b] them in the dhāraṇī gateways, set their minds on establishing them in the ten powers of the tathāgatas, set their minds on establishing them in the four fearlessnesses, set their minds on establishing them in the four kinds of exact knowledge, set their minds on establishing them in great compassion, set their minds on establishing them in the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas, set their minds on establishing them in the fruit of those who have entered the stream, set their minds on establishing them in the fruit of once-returners, set their minds on establishing them in the fruit of non-returners, set their minds on establishing them in arhatship, set their minds on establishing them in individual enlightenment, set their minds on establishing them in the knowledge of the aspects of the path, or and set their minds on establishing them in all-aspect omniscience, but they do not set their minds [on those] for the sake of any beings at all. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because this is just the way things are, given the illusory nature of phenomena. It is in this way, Subhūti, that bodhisattva great beings are said to have ‘donned the great armor.’ ”

8.316        Subhūti then said, “As I understand the meaning of what the Blessed Lord has said, bodhisattva great beings should know that they have donned armor that is a nonexistent armor, on account of the emptiness of its intrinsic defining characteristics. If you ask why, Blessed Lord, it is because physical forms are empty of physical forms, feelings are empty of feelings, perceptions are empty of perceptions, formative predispositions are empty of formative predispositions, and consciousness is empty of consciousness.

8.317 “The eyes are empty of the eyes, the ears are empty of the ears, the nose is empty of the nose, the tongue is empty of the tongue, the body is empty of the body, and the mental faculty is empty of the mental faculty. Sights are empty of sights, sounds are empty of sounds, odors are empty of odors, tastes are empty of tastes, tangibles are empty of tangibles, and mental phenomena are empty of mental phenomena. [F.144.a] Visual consciousness is empty of visual consciousness, auditory consciousness is empty of auditory consciousness, olfactory consciousness is empty of olfactory consciousness, gustatory consciousness is empty of gustatory consciousness, tactile consciousness is empty of tactile consciousness, and mental consciousness is empty of mental consciousness. Visually compounded sensory contact is empty of visually compounded sensory contact, aurally compounded sensory contact is empty of aurally compounded sensory contact, nasally compounded sensory contact is empty of nasally compounded sensory contact, lingually compounded sensory contact is empty of lingually compounded sensory contact, corporeally compounded sensory contact is empty of corporeally compounded sensory contact, and mentally compounded sensory contact is empty of mentally compounded sensory contact. Feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact are empty of feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact. Feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact are empty of feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact. Feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact are empty of feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact. Feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact are empty of feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact. Feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact are empty of feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact. And feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact are empty of feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact.

8.318 “The earth element is empty of the earth element, the water element is empty of the water element, the fire element is empty of the fire element, the wind element is empty of the wind element, the space element is empty of the space element, and the consciousness element is empty of the consciousness element.

8.319 “Ignorance is empty of ignorance, formative predispositions are empty of formative predispositions, consciousness is empty of consciousness, name and form are empty of name and form, [F.144.b] the six sense fields are empty of the six sense fields, sensory contact is empty of sensory contact, sensation is empty of sensation, craving is empty of craving, grasping is empty of grasping, the rebirth process is empty of the rebirth process, birth is empty of birth, and aging and death are empty of aging and death.

8.320 “The perfection of generosity is empty of the perfection of generosity, the perfection of ethical discipline is empty of the perfection of ethical discipline, the perfection of tolerance is empty of the perfection of tolerance, the perfection of perseverance is empty of the perfection of perseverance, the perfection of meditative concentration is empty of the perfection of meditative concentration, and the perfection of wisdom is empty of the perfection of wisdom.

8.321 “The emptiness of internal phenomena is empty of the emptiness of internal phenomena, the emptiness of external phenomena is empty of the emptiness of external phenomena, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena is empty of the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, emptiness of great extent is empty of the emptiness of great extent, the emptiness of ultimate reality is empty of the emptiness of ultimate reality, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena is empty of the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena is empty of the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, the emptiness of the unlimited is empty of the emptiness of the unlimited, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end is empty of the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, the emptiness of nonexclusion is empty of the emptiness of nonexclusion, the emptiness of inherent nature is empty of the emptiness of inherent nature, the emptiness of all phenomena is empty of the emptiness of all phenomena, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics is empty of the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended is empty of the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, the emptiness of nonentities is empty of the emptiness of nonentities, the emptiness of essential nature [F.145.a] is empty of the emptiness of essential nature, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities is empty of the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities.

8.322 “The applications of mindfulness are empty of the applications of mindfulness, the correct exertions are empty of the correct exertions, the supports for miraculous ability are empty of the supports for miraculous ability, the faculties are empty of the faculties, the powers are empty of the powers, the branches of enlightenment are empty of the branches of enlightenment, and the noble eightfold path is empty of the noble eightfold path.

8.323 “The truths of the noble ones are empty of the truths of the noble ones, the meditative concentrations are empty of the meditative concentrations, the immeasurable attitudes are empty of the immeasurable attitudes, the formless absorptions are empty of the formless absorptions, the liberations are empty of the liberations, the serial steps of meditative absorption are empty of the serial steps of meditative absorption, the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation are empty of the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation, the extrasensory powers are empty of the extrasensory powers, the meditative stabilities are empty of the meditative stabilities, the dhāraṇī gateways are empty of the dhāraṇī gateways, the ten powers of the tathāgatas are empty of the ten powers of the tathāgatas, the fearlessnesses are empty of the fearlessnesses, the kinds of exact knowledge are empty of the kinds of exact knowledge, great compassion is [F.145.b] empty of great compassion, and the distinct qualities of the buddhas are empty of the distinct qualities of the buddhas. Blessed Lord, bodhisattvas are also empty of bodhisattvas. The great armor is also empty of the great armor. It is for that reason, Blessed Lord, that bodhisattva great beings should know that they have donned armor that is a nonexistent armor.”

8.324 “Subhūti, it is just as you have said,” replied the Blessed One. “It is so. It is so. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because all-aspect omniscience has neither been created, nor been developed, nor been composed. Even the beings for whom bodhisattva great beings have donned the great armor have neither been created, nor been developed, nor been composed.”

8.325 “Blessed Lord, for what reason has all-aspect omniscience neither been created, nor been developed, nor been composed? Why have the beings for whom bodhisattva great beings have donned the great armor neither been created, nor been developed, nor been composed?”

8.326 “Subhūti,” said the Blessed One, “you should know it is because there is no agent to be apprehended that all-aspect omniscience has neither been created, nor been developed, nor been composed. Those beings for whom bodhisattva great beings have donned the great armor, too, are neither created, nor developed, nor composed. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because physical forms neither create, nor develop, nor compose; feelings neither create, nor develop, nor compose; perceptions neither create, nor develop, nor compose; formative predispositions neither create, nor develop, nor compose; and consciousness neither creates, nor develops, nor composes. [F.146.a]

8.327 “Subhūti, the eyes neither create, nor develop, nor compose. The ears neither create, nor develop, nor compose; the nose neither creates, nor develops, nor composes; the tongue neither creates, nor develops, nor composes; the body neither creates, nor develops, nor composes; and the mental faculty neither creates, nor develops, nor composes.

8.328 “Subhūti, sights neither create, nor develop, nor compose. Sounds neither create, nor develop, nor compose; odors neither create, nor develop, nor compose; tastes neither create, nor develop, nor compose; tangibles neither create, nor develop, nor compose; and mental phenomena neither create, nor develop, nor compose.

8.329 “Subhūti, visual consciousness neither creates, nor develops, nor composes; auditory consciousness neither creates, nor develops, nor composes; olfactory consciousness neither creates, nor develops, nor composes; gustatory consciousness neither creates, nor develops, nor composes; tactile consciousness neither creates, nor develops, nor composes; and mental consciousness neither creates, nor develops, nor composes. Visually compounded sensory contact neither creates, nor develops, nor composes; aurally compounded sensory contact neither creates, nor develops, nor composes; nasally compounded sensory contact neither creates, nor develops, nor composes; lingually compounded sensory contact neither creates, nor develops, nor composes; corporeally compounded sensory contact neither creates, nor develops, nor composes; and mentally compounded sensory contact neither creates, nor develops, nor composes. Feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact neither create, nor develop, nor compose; [F.146.b] feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact neither create, nor develop, nor compose; feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact neither create, nor develop, nor compose; feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact neither create, nor develop, nor compose; feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact neither create, nor develop, nor compose; and feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact neither create, nor develop, nor compose.

8.330 “Subhūti, the self neither creates, nor develops, nor composes. If you ask why, it is because it absolutely cannot be apprehended. Subhūti, a being neither creates, nor develops, nor composes. If you ask why, it is because it absolutely cannot be apprehended. Subhūti, a life form neither creates, nor develops, nor composes. If you ask why, it is because it absolutely cannot be apprehended. Subhūti, a living being neither creates, nor develops, nor composes. If you ask why, it is because it absolutely cannot be apprehended. Subhūti, a life neither creates, nor develops, nor composes. If you ask why, it is because it absolutely cannot be apprehended. Subhūti, an individual neither creates, nor develops, nor composes. If you ask why, it is because it absolutely cannot be apprehended. Subhūti, a person neither creates, nor develops, nor composes. If you ask why, it is because it absolutely cannot be apprehended. Subhūti, one born of Manu neither creates, nor develops, nor composes. If you ask why, it is because it absolutely cannot be apprehended. Subhūti, a child of Manu neither creates, nor develops, nor composes. If you ask why, it is because it absolutely cannot be apprehended. Subhūti, an agent neither creates, nor develops, nor composes. If you ask why, it is because it absolutely cannot be apprehended. Subhūti, an experiencer neither creates, nor develops, nor composes. If you ask why, it is because it absolutely cannot be apprehended. Subhūti, a knower neither creates, nor develops, nor composes. If you ask why, it is because it absolutely cannot be apprehended. Subhūti, a viewer neither creates, nor develops, [F.147.a] nor composes. If you ask why, it is because it absolutely cannot be apprehended.

8.331 “Subhūti, dreams neither create, nor develop, nor compose. If you ask why, it is because they absolutely cannot be apprehended. Subhūti, illusions neither create, nor develop, nor compose. If you ask why, it is because they absolutely cannot be apprehended. Subhūti, echoes neither create, nor develop, nor compose. If you ask why, it is because they absolutely cannot be apprehended. Subhūti, optical aberrations neither create, nor develop, nor compose. If you ask why, it is because they absolutely cannot be apprehended. Subhūti, reflections neither create, nor develop, nor compose. If you ask why, it is because they absolutely cannot be apprehended. Subhūti, mirages neither create, nor develop, nor compose. If you ask why, it is because they absolutely cannot be apprehended. Subhūti, magical displays neither create, nor develop, nor compose. If you ask why, it is because they absolutely cannot be apprehended.

8.332 “Subhūti, the earth element neither creates, nor develops, nor composes. If you ask why, it is because it absolutely cannot be apprehended. Subhūti, the water element neither creates, nor develops, nor composes. If you ask why, it is because it absolutely cannot be apprehended. Subhūti, the fire element neither creates, nor develops, nor composes. If you ask why, it is because it absolutely cannot be apprehended. Subhūti, the wind element neither creates, nor develops, nor composes. If you ask why, it is because it absolutely cannot be apprehended. Subhūti, the space element neither creates, nor develops, nor composes. If you ask why, it is because it absolutely cannot be apprehended. Subhūti, the consciousness element neither creates, nor develops, nor composes. If you ask why, it is because it absolutely cannot be apprehended.

8.333 “Subhūti, ignorance neither creates, nor develops, nor composes. If you ask why, it is because it absolutely cannot be apprehended. [F.147.b] Subhūti, formative predispositions neither create, nor develop, nor compose. If you ask why, it is because they absolutely cannot be apprehended. Subhūti, consciousness neither creates, nor develops, nor composes. If you ask why, it is because it absolutely cannot be apprehended. Subhūti, name and form neither create, nor develop, nor compose. If you ask why, it is because they absolutely cannot be apprehended. Subhūti, the six sense fields neither create, nor develop, nor compose. If you ask why, it is because they absolutely cannot be apprehended. Subhūti, sensory contact neither creates, nor develops, nor composes. If you ask why, it is because it absolutely cannot be apprehended. Subhūti, sensation neither creates, nor develops, nor composes. If you ask why, it is because it absolutely cannot be apprehended. Subhūti, craving neither creates, nor develops, nor composes. If you ask why, it is because it absolutely cannot be apprehended. Subhūti, grasping neither creates, nor develops, nor composes. If you ask why, it is because it absolutely cannot be apprehended. Subhūti, the rebirth process neither creates, nor develops, nor composes. If you ask why, it is because it absolutely cannot be apprehended. Subhūti, birth neither creates, nor develops, nor composes. If you ask why, it is because it absolutely cannot be apprehended. Subhūti, aging and death neither create, nor develop, nor compose. If you ask why, it is because they absolutely cannot be apprehended.

8.334 “Subhūti, the perfection of generosity neither creates, nor develops, nor composes. If you ask why, it is because it absolutely cannot be apprehended. Subhūti, the perfection of ethical discipline neither creates, nor develops, nor composes. If you ask why, it is because it absolutely cannot be apprehended. Subhūti, the perfection of tolerance neither creates, nor develops, nor composes. If you ask why, it is because it absolutely cannot be apprehended. Subhūti, the perfection of perseverance neither creates, nor develops, nor composes. If you ask why, it is because it absolutely cannot be apprehended. Subhūti, the [F.148.a] perfection of meditative concentration neither creates, nor develops, nor composes. If you ask why, it is because it absolutely cannot be apprehended. Subhūti, the perfection of wisdom neither creates, nor develops, nor composes. If you ask why, it is because it absolutely cannot be apprehended.

8.335 “Subhūti, the emptiness of internal phenomena neither creates, nor develops, nor composes. If you ask why, it is because it absolutely cannot be apprehended. Subhūti, the emptiness of external phenomena neither creates, nor develops, nor composes. If you ask why, it is because it absolutely cannot be apprehended. Subhūti, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena neither creates, nor develops, nor composes. If you ask why, it is because it absolutely cannot be apprehended. Subhūti, the emptiness of emptiness neither creates, nor develops, nor composes. If you ask why, it is because it absolutely cannot be apprehended. Subhūti, the emptiness of great extent neither creates, nor develops, nor composes. If you ask why, it is because it absolutely cannot be apprehended. Subhūti, the emptiness of ultimate reality neither creates, nor develops, nor composes. If you ask why, it is because it absolutely cannot be apprehended. Subhūti, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena neither creates, nor develops, nor composes. If you ask why, it is because it absolutely cannot be apprehended. Subhūti, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena neither creates, nor develops, nor composes. If you ask why, it is because it absolutely cannot be apprehended. Subhūti, the emptiness of the unlimited neither creates, nor develops, nor composes. If you ask why, it is because it absolutely cannot be apprehended. Subhūti, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end neither creates, nor develops, nor composes. If you ask why, it is because it absolutely cannot be apprehended. Subhūti, the emptiness of nonexclusion neither creates, nor develops, nor composes. If you ask why, it is because it absolutely cannot be apprehended. Subhūti, the emptiness of inherent nature is neither created, nor developed, nor [F.148.b] composed. If you ask why, it is because it absolutely cannot be apprehended. Subhūti, the emptiness of all phenomena neither creates, nor develops, nor composes. If you ask why, it is because it absolutely cannot be apprehended. Subhūti, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics neither creates, nor develops, nor composes. If you ask why, it is because it absolutely cannot be apprehended. Subhūti, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended neither creates, nor develops, nor composes. If you ask why, it is because it absolutely cannot be apprehended. Subhūti, the emptiness of nonentities neither creates, nor develops, nor composes. If you ask why, it is because it absolutely cannot be apprehended. Subhūti, the emptiness of essential nature neither creates, nor develops, nor composes. If you ask why, it is because it absolutely cannot be apprehended. Subhūti, the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities neither creates, nor develops, nor composes. If you ask why, it is because it absolutely cannot be apprehended.

8.336      “Subhūti, the applications of mindfulness neither create, nor develop, nor compose. If you ask why, it is because they absolutely cannot be apprehended. Subhūti, the correct exertions neither create, nor develop, nor compose. If you ask why, it is because they absolutely cannot be apprehended. Subhūti, the supports for miraculous ability neither create, nor develop, nor compose. If you ask why, it is because they absolutely cannot be apprehended. Subhūti, the faculties neither create, nor develop, nor compose. If you ask why, it is because they absolutely cannot be apprehended. Subhūti, the powers neither create, nor develop, nor compose. If you ask why, it is because they absolutely cannot be apprehended. Subhūti, the branches of enlightenment neither create, nor develop, nor compose. If you ask why, it is because they absolutely cannot be apprehended. Subhūti, [F.149.a] the noble eightfold path neither creates, nor develops, nor composes. If you ask why, it is because it absolutely cannot be apprehended.

8.337 “Subhūti, the truths of the noble ones neither create, nor develop, nor compose. If you ask why, it is because they absolutely cannot be apprehended. Subhūti, the meditative concentrations neither create, nor develop, nor compose. If you ask why, it is because they absolutely cannot be apprehended. Subhūti, the immeasurable attitudes neither create, nor develop, nor compose. If you ask why, it is because they absolutely cannot be apprehended. Subhūti, the formless absorptions neither create, nor develop, nor compose. If you ask why, it is because they absolutely cannot be apprehended. Subhūti, the eight liberations neither create, nor develop, nor compose. If you ask why, it is because they absolutely cannot be apprehended. Subhūti, the nine serial steps of meditative absorption neither create, nor develop, nor compose. If you ask why, it is because they absolutely cannot be apprehended. Subhūti, the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation neither create, nor develop, nor compose. If you ask why, it is because they absolutely cannot be apprehended. Subhūti, the extrasensory powers neither create, nor develop, nor compose. If you ask why, it is because they absolutely cannot be apprehended. Subhūti, all the meditative stabilities neither create, nor develop, nor compose. If you ask why, it is because they absolutely cannot be apprehended. Subhūti, all the dhāraṇī gateways neither create, nor develop, nor compose. If you ask why, it is because they absolutely cannot be apprehended. Subhūti, the ten powers of the tathāgatas neither create, nor develop, nor compose. If you ask why, it is because they absolutely [F.149.b] cannot be apprehended. Subhūti, the fearlessnesses neither create, nor develop, nor compose. If you ask why, it is because they absolutely cannot be apprehended. Subhūti, the kinds of exact knowledge neither create, nor develop, nor compose. If you ask why, it is because they absolutely cannot be apprehended. Subhūti, great compassion neither creates, nor develops, nor composes. If you ask why, it is because it absolutely cannot be apprehended. Subhūti, the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas neither create, nor develop, nor compose. If you ask why, it is because they absolutely cannot be apprehended.

8.338 “Subhūti, the real nature neither creates, nor develops, nor composes. If you ask why, it is because it absolutely cannot be apprehended. Subhūti, the unmistakable real nature neither creates, nor develops, nor composes. If you ask why, it is because it absolutely cannot be apprehended. Subhūti, the one and only real nature neither creates, nor develops, nor composes. If you ask why, it is because it absolutely cannot be apprehended. Subhūti, the reality of phenomena neither creates, nor develops, nor composes. If you ask why, it is because it absolutely cannot be apprehended. Subhūti, the realm of phenomena neither creates, nor develops, nor composes. If you ask why, it is because it absolutely cannot be apprehended. Subhūti, the abiding nature of reality neither creates, nor develops, nor composes. If you ask why, it is because it absolutely cannot be apprehended. Subhūti, the maturity of phenomena neither creates, nor develops, nor composes. If you ask why, it is because it absolutely cannot be apprehended. Subhūti, the very limit of reality neither creates, nor develops, nor composes. If you ask why, it is because it absolutely cannot be apprehended. And, Subhūti, the realm of the inconceivable neither creates, nor develops, nor composes. If you ask why, it is because it absolutely cannot be [F.150.a] apprehended.

8.339 “Subhūti, enlightenment neither creates, nor develops, nor composes. If you ask why, it is because it absolutely cannot be apprehended. Subhūti, omniscience neither creates, nor develops, nor composes. If you ask why, it is because it absolutely cannot be apprehended. Subhūti, the knowledge of the aspects of the path neither creates, nor develops, nor composes. If you ask why, it is because it absolutely cannot be apprehended. Subhūti, all-aspect omniscience neither creates, nor develops, nor composes. If you ask why, it is because it absolutely cannot be apprehended. Subhūti, for these reasons, one should thus know that all-aspect omniscience is neither created, nor developed, nor composed. One should know the beings for whom bodhisattva great beings have donned the great armor are also neither created, nor developed, nor composed. It is in this way, Subhūti, that bodhisattva great beings who have donned the great armor are said to have ‘donned the great armor that is a nonexistent.’

8.340 “Blessed Lord, as I understand the meaning of what the Blessed Lord has said, physical forms, Blessed Lord, are neither fettered nor liberated. Feelings are neither fettered nor liberated, perceptions are neither fettered nor liberated, formative predispositions are neither fettered nor liberated, and consciousness is neither fettered nor liberated.

8.341 The venerable Pūrṇa Maitrāyaṇīputra then inquired of the venerable Subhūti, “Venerable Subhūti, are physical forms neither fettered nor liberated? Are feelings neither fettered nor liberated? Are perceptions neither fettered nor liberated? Are formative predispositions neither fettered nor liberated? And is consciousness neither fettered nor liberated?”

8.342 “Venerable Pūrṇa, it is so. Venerable Pūrṇa, [F.150.b] physical forms are neither fettered nor liberated. Feelings are neither fettered nor liberated, perceptions are neither fettered nor liberated, formative predispositions are neither fettered nor liberated, and consciousness is neither fettered nor liberated.

8.343 Then Venerable Pūrṇa asked, “Venerable Subhūti, what are those physical forms that are neither fettered nor liberated? What are those feelings that are neither fettered nor liberated? What are those perceptions that are neither fettered nor liberated? What are those formative predispositions that are neither fettered nor liberated? What is that consciousness that is neither fettered nor liberated?”

8.344 “Venerable Pūrṇa, physical forms that are like a dream are neither fettered nor liberated. Feelings that are like a dream are neither fettered nor liberated. Perceptions that are like a dream are neither fettered nor liberated. Formative predispositions that are like a dream are neither fettered nor liberated. Consciousness that is like a dream is neither fettered nor liberated. Physical forms that are like an illusion are neither fettered nor liberated. Feelings that are like an illusion are neither fettered nor liberated. Perceptions that are like an illusion are neither fettered nor liberated. Formative predispositions that are like an illusion are neither fettered nor liberated. Consciousness that is like an illusion is neither fettered nor liberated. Physical forms that are like an echo are neither fettered nor liberated. Feelings that are like an echo are neither fettered nor liberated. Perceptions that are like an echo are neither fettered nor liberated. Formative predispositions that are like an echo are neither fettered nor liberated. Consciousness that is like an echo is neither fettered nor liberated. Physical forms that are like an optical aberration are neither fettered nor liberated. Feelings that are like an optical aberration are neither fettered nor liberated. Perceptions that are like an optical aberration are neither fettered nor liberated. Formative predispositions that are like [F.151.a] an optical aberration are neither fettered nor liberated. Consciousness that is like an optical aberration is neither fettered nor liberated. Physical forms that are like a reflection are neither fettered nor liberated. Feelings that are like a reflection are neither fettered nor liberated. Perceptions that are like a reflection are neither fettered nor liberated. Formative predispositions that are like a reflection are neither fettered nor liberated. Consciousness that is like a reflection is neither fettered nor liberated. Physical forms that are like a mirage are neither fettered nor liberated. Feelings that are like a mirage are neither fettered nor liberated. Perceptions that are like a mirage are neither fettered nor liberated. Formative predispositions that are like a mirage are neither fettered nor liberated. Consciousness that is like a mirage is neither fettered nor liberated. Physical forms that are like a magical display are neither fettered nor liberated. Feelings that are like a magical display are neither fettered nor liberated. Perceptions that are like a magical display are neither fettered nor liberated. Formative predispositions that are like a magical display are neither fettered nor liberated. Consciousness that is like a magical display is neither fettered nor liberated.

8.345 “Physical forms of the past are neither fettered nor liberated. Feelings of the past are neither fettered nor liberated. Perceptions of the past are neither fettered nor liberated. Formative predispositions of the past are neither fettered nor liberated. Consciousness of the past is neither fettered nor liberated. Physical forms of the future are neither fettered nor liberated. Feelings of the future are neither fettered nor liberated. Perceptions of the future are neither fettered nor liberated. Formative predispositions of the future are neither fettered nor liberated. Consciousness of the future is neither fettered nor liberated. Physical forms [F.151.b] of the present are neither fettered nor liberated. Feelings of the present are neither fettered nor liberated. Perceptions of the present are neither fettered nor liberated. Formative predispositions of the present are neither fettered nor liberated. Consciousness of the present is neither fettered nor liberated. [B11]

8.346 “And why? Venerable Pūrṇa, physical forms are neither fettered nor liberated because physical forms are nonexistent. Feelings are neither fettered nor liberated because feelings are nonexistent. Perceptions are neither fettered nor liberated because perceptions are nonexistent. Formative predispositions are neither fettered nor liberated because formative predispositions are nonexistent. And consciousness is neither fettered nor liberated because consciousness is nonexistent.

8.347 “Physical forms are neither fettered nor liberated because physical forms are void. Feelings are neither fettered nor liberated because feelings are void. Perceptions are neither fettered nor liberated because perceptions are void. Formative predispositions are neither fettered nor liberated because formative predispositions are void. And consciousness is neither fettered nor liberated because consciousness is void.

8.348 “Physical forms are neither fettered nor liberated because physical forms are nonarising. Feelings are neither fettered nor liberated because feelings are nonarising. Perceptions are neither fettered nor liberated because perceptions are nonarising. Formative predispositions are neither fettered nor liberated because formative predispositions are nonarising. And consciousness is neither fettered nor liberated because consciousness is nonarising.

8.349 “Venerable Pūrṇa, virtuous physical forms are neither fettered nor liberated. Virtuous feelings are neither fettered nor liberated. Virtuous perceptions are neither fettered nor liberated. Virtuous formative predispositions are neither fettered nor liberated. And virtuous consciousness is neither fettered nor liberated. Venerable Pūrṇa, nonvirtuous physical forms are neither fettered nor liberated. Nonvirtuous feelings are neither fettered nor liberated. [F.152.a] Nonvirtuous perceptions are neither fettered nor liberated. Nonvirtuous formative predispositions are neither fettered nor liberated. And nonvirtuous consciousness is neither fettered nor liberated. Venerable Pūrṇa, indeterminate physical forms are neither fettered nor liberated. Indeterminate feelings are neither fettered nor liberated. Indeterminate perceptions are neither fettered nor liberated. Indeterminate formative predispositions are neither fettered nor liberated. And indeterminate consciousness is neither fettered nor liberated.

8.350 “Venerable Pūrṇa, mundane physical forms are neither fettered nor liberated. Mundane feelings are neither fettered nor liberated. Mundane perceptions are neither fettered nor liberated. Mundane formative predispositions are neither fettered nor liberated. And mundane consciousness is neither fettered nor liberated. Venerable Pūrṇa, supramundane physical forms are neither fettered nor liberated. Supramundane feelings are neither fettered nor liberated. Supramundane perceptions are neither fettered nor liberated. Supramundane formative predispositions are neither fettered nor liberated. And supramundane consciousness is neither fettered nor liberated.

8.351 “Venerable Pūrṇa, contaminated physical forms are neither fettered nor liberated. Contaminated feelings are neither fettered nor liberated. Contaminated perceptions are neither fettered nor liberated. Contaminated formative predispositions are neither fettered nor liberated. And contaminated consciousness is neither fettered nor liberated. Venerable Pūrṇa, uncontaminated physical forms are neither fettered nor liberated. Uncontaminated feelings are neither fettered nor liberated. Uncontaminated perceptions are neither fettered nor liberated. Uncontaminated formative predispositions are neither fettered nor liberated. [F.152.b] And uncontaminated consciousness is neither fettered nor liberated.

8.352 “And why? Venerable Pūrṇa, physical forms are neither fettered nor liberated because physical forms are nonexistent. Feelings are neither fettered nor liberated because feelings are nonexistent. Perceptions are neither fettered nor liberated because perceptions are nonexistent. Formative predispositions are neither fettered nor liberated because formative predispositions are nonexistent. And consciousness is neither fettered nor liberated because consciousness is nonexistent.

8.353 “Physical forms are neither fettered nor liberated because physical forms are void. Feelings are neither fettered nor liberated because feelings are void. Perceptions are neither fettered nor liberated because perceptions are void.

Formative predispositions are neither fettered nor liberated because formative predispositions are void. And consciousness is neither fettered nor liberated because consciousness is void.

8.354 “Physical forms are neither fettered nor liberated because physical forms are nonarising. Feelings are neither fettered nor liberated because feelings are nonarising. Perceptions are neither fettered nor liberated because perceptions are nonarising. Formative predispositions are neither fettered nor liberated because formative predispositions are nonarising. And consciousness is neither fettered nor liberated because consciousness is nonarising.

8.355 “Venerable Pūrṇa, all phenomena are neither fettered nor liberated. All phenomena are neither fettered nor liberated because they are nonexistent, they are neither fettered nor liberated because they are void, and they are neither fettered nor liberated because they are nonarising.

8.356 “Venerable Pūrṇa, the perfection of generosity is neither fettered nor liberated. The perfection of ethical discipline is neither fettered nor liberated, the perfection of tolerance is neither fettered nor liberated, the perfection of perseverance is neither fettered nor liberated, the perfection of meditative concentration is neither fettered nor liberated, and the perfection of wisdom is neither fettered nor liberated.

8.357 “Venerable Pūrṇa, the perfection of generosity is neither fettered nor liberated because it is nonexistent, the perfection of generosity is neither fettered [F.153.a] nor liberated because it is void, and the perfection of generosity is neither fettered nor liberated because it is nonarising. The perfection of ethical discipline is neither fettered nor liberated because it is nonexistent, the perfection of ethical discipline is neither fettered nor liberated because it is void, and the perfection of ethical discipline is neither fettered nor liberated because it is nonarising. The perfection of tolerance is neither fettered nor liberated because it is nonexistent, the perfection of tolerance is neither fettered nor liberated because it is void, and the perfection of tolerance is neither fettered nor liberated because it is nonarising. The perfection of perseverance is neither fettered nor liberated because it is nonexistent, the perfection of perseverance is neither fettered nor liberated because it is void, and the perfection of perseverance is neither fettered nor liberated because it is nonarising. The perfection of meditative concentration is neither fettered nor liberated because it is nonexistent, the perfection of meditative concentration is neither fettered nor liberated because it is void, and the perfection of meditative concentration is neither fettered nor liberated because it is nonarising. The perfection of wisdom is neither fettered nor liberated because it is nonexistent, the perfection of wisdom is neither fettered nor liberated because it is void, and the perfection of wisdom is neither fettered nor liberated because it is nonarising.

8.358 “Venerable Pūrṇa, the emptiness of internal phenomena is neither fettered nor liberated, the emptiness of external phenomena is neither fettered nor liberated, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena is neither fettered nor liberated, the emptiness of emptiness is neither fettered nor liberated, the emptiness of great extent is neither fettered nor liberated, the emptiness of ultimate reality is neither fettered nor liberated, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena is neither fettered nor liberated, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena is neither fettered nor liberated, the emptiness of the unlimited [F.153.b] is neither fettered nor liberated, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end is neither fettered nor liberated, the emptiness of nonexclusion is neither fettered nor liberated, the emptiness of inherent nature is neither fettered nor liberated, the emptiness of all phenomena is neither fettered nor liberated, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics is neither fettered nor liberated, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended is neither fettered nor liberated, the emptiness of nonentities is neither fettered nor liberated, the emptiness of essential nature is neither fettered nor liberated, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities is neither fettered nor liberated.

8.359 “The emptiness of internal phenomena is neither fettered nor liberated because it is nonexistent, the emptiness of internal phenomena is neither fettered nor liberated because it is void, and the emptiness of internal phenomena is neither fettered nor liberated because it is nonarising. The emptiness of external phenomena is neither fettered nor liberated because it is nonexistent, the emptiness of external phenomena is neither fettered nor liberated because it is void, and the emptiness of external phenomena is neither fettered nor liberated because it is nonarising. The emptiness of external and internal phenomena is neither fettered nor liberated because it is nonexistent, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena is neither fettered nor liberated because it is void, and the emptiness of external and internal phenomena is neither fettered nor liberated because it is nonarising. The emptiness of emptiness is neither fettered nor liberated because it is nonexistent, the emptiness of emptiness is neither fettered nor liberated because it is void, and the emptiness of emptiness is neither fettered nor liberated because it is nonarising. The emptiness of great extent is neither fettered nor liberated because it is nonexistent, the emptiness of great extent is neither fettered nor liberated because it is void, and the emptiness of great extent is neither fettered nor liberated because it is nonarising. The emptiness of ultimate reality is neither fettered nor liberated because it is nonexistent, the emptiness of ultimate reality is neither fettered nor liberated because it is void, and the emptiness of ultimate reality is neither fettered [F.154.a] nor liberated because it is nonarising. The emptiness of conditioned phenomena is neither fettered nor liberated because it is nonexistent, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena is neither fettered nor liberated because it is void, and the emptiness of conditioned phenomena is neither fettered nor liberated because it is nonarising. The emptiness of unconditioned phenomena is neither fettered nor liberated because it is nonexistent, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena is neither fettered nor liberated because it is void, and the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena is neither fettered nor liberated because it is nonarising. The emptiness of the unlimited is neither fettered nor liberated because it is nonexistent, the emptiness of the unlimited is neither fettered nor liberated because it is void, and the emptiness of the unlimited is neither fettered nor liberated because it is nonarising. The emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end is neither fettered nor liberated because it is nonexistent, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end is neither fettered nor liberated because it is void, and the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end is neither fettered nor liberated because it is nonarising. The emptiness of nonexclusion is neither fettered nor liberated because it is nonexistent, the emptiness of nonexclusion is neither fettered nor liberated because it is void, and the emptiness of nonexclusion is neither fettered nor liberated because it is nonarising. The emptiness of inherent nature is neither fettered nor liberated because it is nonexistent, the emptiness of inherent nature is neither fettered nor liberated because it is void, and the emptiness of inherent nature is neither fettered nor liberated because it is nonarising. The emptiness of all phenomena is neither fettered nor liberated because it is nonexistent, the emptiness of all phenomena is neither fettered nor liberated because it is void, and the emptiness of all phenomena is neither fettered nor liberated because it is nonarising. The emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics is neither fettered nor liberated because it is nonexistent, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics is neither fettered nor liberated because it is void, and the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics [F.154.b] is neither fettered nor liberated because it is nonarising. The emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended is neither fettered nor liberated because it is nonexistent, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended is neither fettered nor liberated because it is void, and the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended is neither fettered nor liberated because it is nonarising. The emptiness of nonentities is neither fettered nor liberated because it is nonexistent, the emptiness of nonentities is neither fettered nor liberated because it is void, and the emptiness of nonentities is neither fettered nor liberated because it is nonarising. The emptiness of essential nature is neither fettered nor liberated because it is nonexistent, the emptiness of essential nature is neither fettered nor liberated because it is void, and the emptiness of essential nature is neither fettered nor liberated because it is nonarising. The emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities is neither fettered nor liberated because it is nonexistent, the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities is neither fettered nor liberated because it is void, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities is neither fettered nor liberated because it is nonarising.

8.360 “Venerable Pūrṇa, the applications of mindfulness are neither fettered nor liberated, the correct exertions are neither fettered nor liberated, the supports for miraculous ability are neither fettered nor liberated, the faculties are neither fettered nor liberated, the powers are neither fettered nor liberated, the branches of enlightenment are neither fettered nor liberated, and the noble eightfold path is neither fettered nor liberated.

8.361 “Venerable Pūrṇa, the applications of mindfulness are neither fettered nor liberated because they are nonexistent, the applications of mindfulness are neither fettered nor liberated because they are void, and the applications of mindfulness are neither fettered nor liberated because they are nonarising. The correct exertions are neither fettered nor liberated because they are nonexistent, [F.155.a] the correct exertions are neither fettered nor liberated because they are void, and the correct exertions are neither fettered nor liberated because they are nonarising. The supports for miraculous ability are neither fettered nor liberated because they are nonexistent, the supports for miraculous ability are neither fettered nor liberated because they are void, and the supports for miraculous ability are neither fettered nor liberated because they are nonarising. The faculties are neither fettered nor liberated because they are nonexistent, the faculties are neither fettered nor liberated because they are void, and the faculties are neither fettered nor liberated because they are nonarising. The powers are neither fettered nor liberated because they are nonexistent, the powers are neither fettered nor liberated because they are void, and the powers are neither fettered nor liberated because they are nonarising. The branches of enlightenment are neither fettered nor liberated because they are nonexistent, the branches of enlightenment are neither fettered nor liberated because they are void, and the branches of enlightenment are neither fettered nor liberated because they are nonarising. The noble eightfold path is neither fettered nor liberated because it is nonexistent, the noble eightfold path is neither fettered nor liberated because it is void, and the noble eightfold path is neither fettered nor liberated because it is nonarising.

8.362 “Venerable Pūrṇa, the truths of the noble ones are neither fettered nor liberated, the meditative concentrations are neither fettered nor liberated, the immeasurable attitudes are neither fettered nor liberated, the formless absorptions are neither fettered nor liberated, the liberations are neither fettered nor liberated, the nine serial steps of meditative absorption are neither fettered nor liberated, the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation are neither fettered nor liberated, the extrasensory powers are neither fettered nor liberated, all the meditative stabilities are neither fettered nor liberated, and all the dhāraṇī [F.155.b] gateways are neither fettered nor liberated.

8.363 “Venerable Pūrṇa, the truths of the noble ones are neither fettered nor liberated because they are nonexistent, the truths of the noble ones are neither fettered nor liberated because they are void, and the truths of the noble ones are neither fettered nor liberated because they are nonarising. The meditative concentrations are neither fettered nor liberated because they are nonexistent, the meditative concentrations are neither fettered nor liberated because they are void, and the meditative concentrations are neither fettered nor liberated because they are nonarising. The immeasurable attitudes are neither fettered nor liberated because they are nonexistent, the immeasurable attitudes are neither fettered nor liberated because they are void, and the immeasurable attitudes are neither fettered nor liberated because they are nonarising. The formless absorptions are neither fettered nor liberated because they are nonexistent, the formless absorptions are neither fettered nor liberated because they are void, and the formless absorptions are neither fettered nor liberated because they are nonarising. The liberations are neither fettered nor liberated because they are nonexistent, the liberations are neither fettered nor liberated because they are void, and the liberations are neither fettered nor liberated because they are nonarising. The nine serial steps of meditative absorption are neither fettered nor liberated because they are nonexistent, the nine serial steps of meditative absorption are neither fettered nor liberated because they are void, and the nine serial steps of meditative absorption are neither fettered nor liberated because they are nonarising. The emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation are neither fettered nor liberated because they are nonexistent; the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation are neither fettered nor liberated because they are void; and the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation are neither fettered nor liberated because they are nonarising. [F.156.a] The extrasensory powers are neither fettered nor liberated because they are nonexistent, the extrasensory powers are neither fettered nor liberated because they are void, and the extrasensory powers are neither fettered nor liberated because they are nonarising. All the meditative stabilities are neither fettered nor liberated because they are nonexistent, all the meditative stabilities are neither fettered nor liberated because they are void, and all the meditative stabilities are neither fettered nor liberated because they are nonarising. All the dhāraṇī gateways are neither fettered nor liberated because they are nonexistent, all the dhāraṇī gateways are neither fettered nor liberated because they are void, and all the dhāraṇī gateways are neither fettered nor liberated because they are nonarising.

8.364 “Venerable Pūrṇa, the powers of the tathāgatas are neither fettered nor liberated, the fearlessnesses are neither fettered nor liberated, the kinds of exact knowledge are neither fettered nor liberated, great compassion is neither fettered nor liberated, and the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas are neither fettered nor liberated.

8.365 “Venerable Pūrṇa, the powers of the tathāgatas are neither fettered nor liberated because they are nonexistent, the powers of the tathāgatas are neither fettered nor liberated because they are void, and the powers of the tathāgatas are neither fettered nor liberated because they are nonarising. The fearlessnesses are neither fettered nor liberated because they are nonexistent, the fearlessnesses are neither fettered nor liberated because they are void, and the fearlessnesses are neither fettered nor liberated because they are nonarising. The kinds of exact knowledge are neither fettered nor liberated because they are nonexistent, the kinds of exact knowledge are neither fettered nor liberated because they are void, and the kinds of exact knowledge are neither fettered nor liberated because they are nonarising. [F.156.b] Great compassion is neither fettered nor liberated because it is nonexistent, great compassion is neither fettered nor liberated because it is void, and great compassion is neither fettered nor liberated because it is nonarising. The eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas are neither fettered nor liberated because they are nonexistent, the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas are neither fettered nor liberated because they are void, and the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas are neither fettered nor liberated because they are nonarising.

8.366 “Venerable Pūrṇa, omniscience is neither fettered nor liberated, the knowledge of the aspects of the path is neither fettered nor liberated, and all-aspect omniscience is neither fettered nor liberated.

8.367 “Venerable Pūrṇa, omniscience is neither fettered nor liberated because it is nonexistent, omniscience is neither fettered nor liberated because it is void, and omniscience is neither fettered nor liberated because it is nonarising. The knowledge of the aspects of the path is neither fettered nor liberated because it is nonexistent, the knowledge of the aspects of the path is neither fettered nor liberated because it is void, and the knowledge of the aspects of the path is neither fettered nor liberated because it is nonarising. All-aspect omniscience is neither fettered nor liberated because it is nonexistent, all-aspect omniscience is neither fettered nor liberated because it is void, and all-aspect omniscience is neither fettered nor liberated because it is nonarising.

8.368 “Venerable Pūrṇa, bodhisattvas also are neither fettered nor liberated. Buddhas also are neither fettered nor liberated.

8.369 “Venerable Pūrṇa, bodhisattvas are neither fettered nor liberated because they are nonexistent, bodhisattvas are neither fettered nor liberated because they are void, and bodhisattvas are neither fettered nor liberated because they are nonarising. Buddhas [F.157.a] are neither fettered nor liberated because they are nonexistent, buddhas are neither fettered nor liberated because they are void, and buddhas are neither fettered nor liberated because they are nonarising.

8.370 “Venerable Pūrṇa, the real nature is neither fettered nor liberated, the unmistakable real nature is neither fettered nor liberated, the one and only real nature is neither fettered nor liberated, the reality of phenomena is neither fettered nor liberated, the realm of phenomena is neither fettered nor liberated, the abiding nature of reality is neither fettered nor liberated, the maturity of phenomena is neither fettered nor liberated, and the very limit of reality is neither fettered nor liberated.

8.371 “Venerable Pūrṇa, the real nature is neither fettered nor liberated because it is nonexistent, the real nature is neither fettered nor liberated because it is void, and the real nature is neither fettered nor liberated because it is nonarising. The unmistakable real nature is neither fettered nor liberated because it is nonexistent, the unmistakable real nature is neither fettered nor liberated because it is void, and the unmistakable real nature is neither fettered nor liberated because it is nonarising. The one and only real nature is neither fettered nor liberated because it is nonexistent, the one and only real nature is neither fettered nor liberated because it is void, and the one and only real nature is neither fettered nor liberated because it is nonarising. The reality of phenomena is neither fettered nor liberated because it is nonexistent, the reality of phenomena is neither fettered nor liberated because it is void, and the reality of phenomena is neither fettered nor liberated because it is nonarising. The realm of phenomena is neither fettered nor liberated because it is nonexistent, the realm of phenomena is neither fettered nor liberated because it is void, and the realm of phenomena is neither fettered nor liberated because it is nonarising. The abiding nature of reality is neither fettered nor liberated because it is nonexistent, the abiding nature of reality is neither fettered nor liberated because it is void, [F.157.b] and the abiding nature of reality is neither fettered nor liberated because it is nonarising. The maturity of phenomena is neither fettered nor liberated because it is nonexistent, the maturity of phenomena is neither fettered nor liberated because it is void, and the maturity of phenomena is neither fettered nor liberated because it is nonarising. The very limit of reality is neither fettered nor liberated because it is nonexistent, the very limit of reality is neither fettered nor liberated because it is void, and the very limit of reality is neither fettered nor liberated because it is nonarising.

8.372 “Venerable Pūrṇa, the unconditioned is neither fettered nor liberated. The unconditioned is neither fettered nor liberated because it is nonexistent, the unconditioned is neither fettered nor liberated because it is void, and the unconditioned is neither fettered nor liberated because it is nonarising.

8.373 “Venerable Pūrṇa, this is the portal of the Dharma of bodhisattva great beings named neither fettered nor liberated. The perfection of generosity is neither fettered nor liberated, the perfection of ethical discipline is neither fettered nor liberated, the perfection of tolerance is neither fettered nor liberated, the perfection of perseverance is neither fettered nor liberated, the perfection of meditative concentration is neither fettered nor liberated, and the perfection of wisdom is neither fettered nor liberated; the emptiness of internal phenomena is neither fettered nor liberated, the emptiness of external phenomena is neither fettered nor liberated, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena is neither fettered nor liberated, the emptiness of emptiness is neither fettered nor liberated, the emptiness of great extent is neither fettered nor liberated, the emptiness of ultimate reality is neither fettered nor liberated, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena is neither fettered nor liberated, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena is neither fettered nor liberated, the emptiness of the unlimited is neither fettered nor liberated, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end is neither fettered nor liberated, the emptiness of nonexclusion is neither fettered [F.158.a] nor liberated, the emptiness of inherent nature is neither fettered nor liberated, the emptiness of all phenomena is neither fettered nor liberated, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics is neither fettered nor liberated, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended is neither fettered nor liberated, the emptiness of nonentities is neither fettered nor liberated, the emptiness of essential nature is neither fettered nor liberated, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities is neither fettered nor liberated; the applications of mindfulness are neither fettered nor liberated, the correct exertions are neither fettered nor liberated, the supports for miraculous ability are neither fettered nor liberated, the faculties are neither fettered nor liberated, the powers are neither fettered nor liberated, the branches of enlightenment are neither fettered nor liberated, and the path is neither fettered nor liberated; the truths of the noble ones are neither fettered nor liberated, the meditative concentrations are neither fettered nor liberated, the immeasurable attitudes are neither fettered nor liberated, the formless absorptions are neither fettered nor liberated, the liberations are neither fettered nor liberated, the serial steps of meditative absorption are neither fettered nor liberated, the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation are neither fettered nor liberated, the extrasensory powers are neither fettered nor liberated, the meditative stabilities are neither fettered nor liberated, the dhāraṇī gateways are neither fettered nor liberated, the powers of the tathāgatas are neither fettered nor liberated, the fearlessnesses are neither fettered nor liberated, the kinds of exact knowledge are neither fettered nor liberated, great compassion is neither fettered nor liberated, and the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas are neither fettered nor liberated; enlightenment is neither [F.158.b] fettered nor liberated, omniscience is neither fettered nor liberated, the knowledge of the aspects of the path is neither fettered nor liberated, and all-aspect omniscience is neither fettered nor liberated; bodhisattvas are neither fettered nor liberated; buddhas are neither fettered nor liberated; and the real nature is neither fettered nor liberated, the unmistakable real nature is neither fettered nor liberated, the one and only real nature is neither fettered nor liberated, the reality of phenomena is neither fettered nor liberated, the realm of phenomena is neither fettered nor liberated, the abiding nature of reality is neither fettered nor liberated, the maturity of phenomena is neither fettered nor liberated, the very limit of reality is neither fettered nor liberated, and the unconditioned is neither fettered nor liberated.

8.374 “Therefore,<sup>428</sup> [bodhisattva great beings] dwell in the unfettered and unliberated perfection of generosity, dwell in the unfettered and unliberated perfection of ethical discipline, dwell in the unfettered and unliberated perfection of tolerance, dwell in the unfettered and unliberated perfection of perseverance, dwell in the unfettered and unliberated perfection of meditative concentration, and dwell in the unfettered and unliberated perfection of wisdom; dwell in the emptiness of internal phenomena, dwell in the unfettered and unliberated emptiness of external phenomena, dwell in the unfettered and unliberated emptiness of external and internal phenomena, dwell in the unfettered and unliberated emptiness of emptiness, dwell in the unfettered and unliberated emptiness of great extent, dwell in the unfettered and unliberated emptiness of ultimate reality, dwell in the unfettered and unliberated emptiness of conditioned phenomena, dwell in the unfettered and unliberated emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, dwell in the unfettered and unliberated emptiness of the unlimited, dwell in the unfettered and unliberated emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, dwell in the unfettered and unliberated emptiness of

nonexclusion, dwell in [F.159.a] the unfettered and unliberated emptiness of inherent nature, dwell in the unfettered and unliberated emptiness of all phenomena, dwell in the unfettered and unliberated emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, dwell in the unfettered and unliberated emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, dwell in the unfettered and unliberated emptiness of nonentities, dwell in the unfettered and unliberated emptiness of essential nature, and dwell in the unfettered and unliberated emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities; dwell in the unfettered and unliberated applications of mindfulness, dwell in the unfettered and unliberated correct exertions, dwell in the unfettered and unliberated supports for miraculous ability, dwell in the unfettered and unliberated faculties, dwell in the unfettered and unliberated powers, dwell in the unfettered and unliberated branches of enlightenment, and dwell in the unfettered and unliberated noble eightfold path; dwell in the unfettered and unliberated truths of the noble ones, dwell in the unfettered and unliberated meditative concentrations, dwell in the unfettered and unliberated immeasurable attitudes, dwell in the unfettered and unliberated formless absorptions, dwell in the unfettered and unliberated liberations, dwell in the unfettered and unliberated serial steps of meditative absorption, dwell in the unfettered and unliberated emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation, dwell in the unfettered and unliberated extrasensory powers, dwell in the unfettered and unliberated meditative stabilities, dwell in the unfettered and unliberated dhāraṇī gateways, dwell in the eighteen unfettered and unliberated powers of the tathāgatas, dwell in the four unfettered and unliberated fearlessnesses, dwell in the four unfettered and unliberated kinds of exact knowledge, dwell [F.159.b] in unfettered and unliberated great compassion, and dwell in the eighteen unfettered and unliberated distinct qualities of the buddhas; dwell in unfettered and unliberated enlightenment, dwell in unfettered and unliberated omniscience, dwell in the unfettered and unliberated knowledge of the aspects of the path, and dwell in unfettered and unliberated all-aspect omniscience; dwell in the unfettered and unliberated real nature, dwell in the unfettered and unliberated unmistakable real nature, dwell in the unfettered and unliberated one and only real nature, dwell in the unfettered and unliberated reality of phenomena, dwell in the unfettered and unliberated realm of phenomena, dwell in the unfettered and unliberated abiding nature of reality, dwell in the unfettered and unliberated maturity of phenomena, dwell in the unfettered and unliberated very limit of reality, and dwell in the unfettered and unliberated unconditioned.

8.375 “Having dwelled there, being neither fettered nor liberated, they bring to maturity beings who are neither fettered nor liberated. Being neither fettered nor liberated, they refine buddhafi elds that are neither fettered nor liberated. Being neither fettered nor liberated, they venerate the lord buddhas who are neither fettered nor liberated. Being neither fettered nor liberated, they listen to the Dharma that is neither fettered nor liberated. Being neither fettered nor liberated, they will never be separated from the lord buddhas who are neither fettered nor liberated. Being neither fettered nor liberated, they will never be separated from the extrasensory powers that are neither fettered nor liberated. Being neither fettered nor liberated, they will never be separated from the five eyes that are neither fettered nor liberated. Being neither fettered nor liberated, they will never be separated from the dhāraṇīs that are neither fettered nor liberated. Being neither fettered nor liberated, they will never be separated from the meditative stabilities that are neither fettered nor liberated. Being neither fettered nor liberated, they will develop [F.160.a] the knowledge of the aspects of the path that is neither fettered nor liberated. Being neither fettered nor liberated, they will fully awaken to all-aspect omniscience that is neither fettered nor liberated. Being neither fettered nor liberated, they will turn the wheel of the Dharma that is neither fettered nor liberated. Being neither fettered nor liberated, they will establish<sup>429</sup> in the three vehicles those beings who are neither fettered nor liberated.

8.376 “Venerable Pūrṇa, so it is that bodhisattva great beings who are neither fettered nor liberated will comprehend all phenomena, because they are nonexistent, void, and nonarising, by means of the six perfections that are neither fettered nor liberated. Venerable Pūrṇa, one should know that it is in this way that bodhisattva great beings who are neither fettered nor liberated have donned the armor of the Great Vehicle.”

8.377 Then the venerable Subhūti inquired of the Blessed One, “Blessed Lord, what is the Great Vehicle of bodhisattva great beings? Blessed Lord, because of just what should bodhisattva great beings be known to have entered perfectly into the Great Vehicle?<sup>430</sup> From where does this Great Vehicle go forth?<sup>431</sup> Where does this vehicle come to rest? Who will go forth in this vehicle?”

8.378 The Blessed One said to Venerable Subhūti, “Subhūti, you have asked, ‘Lord, what is the Great Vehicle of bodhisattva great beings?’ Subhūti, the six perfections are the Great Vehicle of bodhisattva great beings. If you ask what these six are, they are the perfection of generosity, the perfection of ethical discipline, the perfection of tolerance, the perfection of perseverance, [F.160.b] the perfection of meditative concentration, and the perfection of wisdom.

8.379 “Subhūti, here bodhisattva great beings, with their attention directed toward all-aspect omniscience, give inner or outer objects as gifts to those who want them, and, making common cause with all beings, without apprehending anything, dedicate the merit to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. This is the perfection of generosity of bodhisattva great beings.”

8.380 “Blessed Lord, what is the perfection of ethical discipline of bodhisattva great beings?”

“Subhūti,” replied the Blessed One, “here bodhisattva great beings, with their mind set on and directed toward all-aspect omniscience, themselves adopt and maintain correctly the path of the ten virtuous actions. They also induce other beings to adopt the path of the ten virtuous actions, secure and establish them in that, and they do so without apprehending anything. This is the unblemished perfection of ethical discipline of bodhisattva great beings.”

8.381 “Blessed Lord, what is the perfection of tolerance of bodhisattva great beings?”

“Subhūti,” replied the Blessed One, “here bodhisattva great beings, with their mind set on and directed toward all-aspect omniscience, are themselves completely tolerant. They also induce others to become tolerant, and they do so without apprehending anything. This is the perfection of tolerance of bodhisattva great beings.”

8.382 “Blessed Lord, what is the perfection of perseverance of bodhisattva great beings?” [F.161.a]

“Subhūti,” replied the Blessed One, “here bodhisattva great beings, with their mind set on and directed toward all-aspect omniscience, do not themselves give up persevering at the six perfections. They also connect others with the six perfections, and they do so without apprehending anything. This is the perfection of perseverance of bodhisattva great beings.”

8.383 “Blessed Lord, what is the perfection of meditative concentration of bodhisattva great beings?”

“Subhūti,” replied the Blessed One, “here bodhisattva great beings, with their mind set on and directed toward all-aspect omniscience, are skillfully absorbed in the meditative concentrations but will not be subject to rebirth on account of them. They also induce others to become absorbed in the meditative concentrations, and they do so without apprehending anything. This is the perfection of meditative concentration of bodhisattva great beings.”

8.384 “Blessed Lord, what is the perfection of wisdom of bodhisattva great beings?”

“Subhūti,” replied the Blessed One,” here bodhisattva great beings, with their mind set on and directed toward all-aspect omniscience, themselves are without fixation with respect to all phenomena, and by way of not apprehending anything discern the nature of all phenomena. They also induce other beings to adopt nonfixation with respect to all phenomena and to discern the nature of all phenomena, they secure and establish them in that, and they do so by way of not apprehending anything. This is the perfection of wisdom of bodhisattva great beings. [F.161.b]

8.385 “This, Subhūti, is the Great Vehicle of bodhisattva great beings.

“Moreover, Subhūti, the Great Vehicle of bodhisattva great beings is this: the emptiness of internal phenomena, the emptiness of external phenomena, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, the emptiness of emptiness, the emptiness of great extent, the emptiness of ultimate reality, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, the emptiness of the unlimited, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, the emptiness of nonexclusion, the emptiness of inherent nature, the emptiness of all phenomena, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, the emptiness of nonentities, the emptiness of essential nature, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities.

8.386 “If, among them, you ask what is the emptiness of internal phenomena, the eyes, ears, nose, tongue, body, and mental faculty are called internal phenomena. Among these, the eyes are empty of the eyes because they do not endure and they do not disintegrate. If you ask why, it is because that is their nature.<sup>432</sup> The ears are empty of the ears because they do not endure and they do not disintegrate. If you ask why, it is because that is their nature. The nose is empty of the nose because it does not endure and it does not disintegrate. If you ask why, it is because that is its nature. The tongue is empty of the tongue because it does not endure and it does not disintegrate. If you ask why, it is because that is its nature. The body is empty of the body because it does not endure and it does not disintegrate. If you ask why, it is because that is its nature. And the mental faculty is empty of the mental faculty because it does not endure and it does not disintegrate. If you ask why, it is because that is its nature. This is called the emptiness of internal phenomena.

8.387 “If, among them, you ask what is the emptiness of external phenomena, sights, sounds, odors, tastes, tangibles, and mental phenomena are called external phenomena. Among these, sights are empty of sights because they do not endure and they do not disintegrate. If you ask why, it is because that is their nature. [F.162.a] Sounds are empty of sounds because they do not endure and they do not disintegrate. If you ask why, it is because that is their nature. Odors are empty of odors because they do not endure and they do not disintegrate. If you ask why, it is because that is their nature. Tastes are empty of tastes because they do not endure and they do not disintegrate. If you ask why, it is because that is their nature. Tangibles are empty of tangibles because they do not endure and they do not disintegrate. If you ask why, it is because that is their nature. And mental phenomena are empty of mental phenomena because they do not endure and they do not disintegrate. If you ask why, it is because that is their nature. This is called the emptiness of external phenomena.

8.388 “If, among them, you ask what is the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, the six inner sense fields and the six outer sense fields are called external and internal phenomena. Among these, inner phenomena are empty of outer phenomena because they do not endure and they do not disintegrate. If you ask why, it is because that is their very nature. Outer phenomena are also empty of inner phenomena because they do not endure and they do not disintegrate. If you ask why, it is because that is their nature. This is called the emptiness of external and internal phenomena.

8.389 “If, among them, you ask what is the emptiness of emptiness, the emptiness of that emptiness that is the emptiness of phenomena is an emptiness.<sup>433</sup> If you ask why, it is because that is its nature. This is called the emptiness of emptiness.

8.390 “If, among them, you ask what is the emptiness of great extent, the eastern direction is empty of the eastern direction, the southern direction is empty of the southern direction, the western direction is empty of the western direction, the northern direction is empty of the northern direction, the direction of the nadir is empty of the direction of the nadir, the direction of the zenith is empty of the direction of the zenith, and similarly the intermediate directions are empty of the intermediate directions because they do not endure and do not disintegrate. If you ask why, it is because that is their nature. This is called the emptiness of great extent.

8.391 “If, among them, you ask what is the emptiness of ultimate reality, the ultimate reality is nirvāṇa. [F.162.b] That nirvāṇa is also empty of nirvāṇa because it does not endure and does not disintegrate. If you ask why, it is because that is its nature. This is called the emptiness of ultimate reality.

8.392 “If, among them, you ask what is the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, the realm of desire, the realm of form, and the realm of formlessness are called conditioned phenomena. Among these, the realm of desire is empty of the realm of desire, the realm of form is empty of the realm of form, and the realm of formlessness is empty of the realm of formlessness

- because they do not endure and do not disintegrate. If you ask why, it is because that is their nature. This is called the emptiness of conditioned phenomena.
- 8.393 “If, among them, you ask what is the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, anything that does not arise, that does not cease, and that does not change into something else is called an unconditioned phenomenon. In this regard, unconditioned phenomena are empty of unconditioned phenomena because they do not endure and do not disintegrate. If you ask why, it is because that is their nature. This is called the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena.
- 8.394 “If, among them, you ask what is the emptiness of the unlimited, that of which a limit cannot be apprehended is unlimited. The unlimited is empty of the unlimited because it does not endure and does not disintegrate. If you ask why, it is because that is its nature. This is called the emptiness of the unlimited.
- 8.395 “If, among them, you ask what is the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, a ‘going’ cannot be apprehended and a ‘coming’ cannot be apprehended in that of which a beginning cannot be apprehended and an end cannot be apprehended. That which has neither beginning nor end is empty of that which has neither beginning nor end because it does not endure and does not disintegrate. If you ask why, it is because that is its nature. This is called the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end.
- 8.396 “If, among them, you ask what is the emptiness of nonexclusion, it is that in which there is no repudiating at all. [F.163.a] Nonexclusion is empty of nonexclusion because it does not endure and does not disintegrate. If you ask why, it is because that is its nature. This is called the emptiness of nonexclusion.
- 8.397 “If, among them, you ask what is the emptiness of inherent nature, that which is the inherent nature of all phenomena, whether conditioned or unconditioned, is not created by the śrāvakas, not created by the pratyekabuddhas, not created by the bodhisattva great beings, and not created by the tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas. Inherent nature is empty of inherent nature because it does not endure and does not disintegrate. If you ask why, it is because that is its nature. This is called the emptiness of inherent nature.
- 8.398 “If, among them, you ask what is the emptiness of all phenomena, physical forms, feelings, perceptions, formative predispositions, and consciousness; the eyes, the ears, the nose, the tongue, the body, and the mental faculty; sights, sounds, odors, tastes, tangibles, and mental phenomena; visual consciousness, auditory consciousness, olfactory consciousness, gustatory consciousness, tactile consciousness, and mental consciousness; visually compounded sensory contact, aurally compounded sensory contact, nasally compounded sensory contact, lingually compounded sensory contact, corporally compounded sensory contact, and mentally compounded sensory contact; feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact, feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact, feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact, feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact, feelings conditioned by corporally compounded sensory contact, and feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact; phenomena that have form and are formless; conditioned phenomena; and unconditioned phenomena—those are called all phenomena. [F.163.b] In that regard, all phenomena are empty of all phenomena because they do not endure and do not disintegrate. If you ask why, it is because that is their nature. This is called the emptiness of all phenomena.

8.399 “If, among them, you ask what is the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, the intrinsic defining characteristic of a physical form is disintegration,<sup>434</sup> the intrinsic defining characteristic of a feeling is emotional experience, the intrinsic defining characteristic of a perception is apprehending, the intrinsic defining characteristic of a formative predisposition is being the condition for something, and the intrinsic defining characteristic of consciousness is making something known; the intrinsic defining characteristic of an aggregate is suffering, the intrinsic defining characteristic of a sensory element is being poisonous,<sup>435</sup> and the intrinsic defining characteristic of a sense field is being a gateway to arising,<sup>436</sup> the intrinsic defining characteristic of the perfection of generosity is giving away, the intrinsic defining characteristic of the perfection of ethical discipline is relieving pain, the intrinsic defining characteristic of the perfection of tolerance is not getting angry, the intrinsic defining characteristic of the perfection of perseverance is not growing fainthearted,<sup>437</sup> the intrinsic defining characteristic of the perfection of meditative concentration is becoming completely collected,<sup>438</sup> and the intrinsic defining characteristic of the perfection of wisdom is nonattachment; the intrinsic defining characteristic of the meditative concentrations, immeasurable attitudes, and formless absorptions is not being upset; the intrinsic defining characteristic of the thirty-seven factors conducive to enlightenment is emergence;<sup>439</sup> the intrinsic defining characteristic of the emptiness gateway to liberation is being void, the intrinsic defining characteristic of the signlessness gateway to liberation is calm, and the intrinsic defining characteristic of the wishlessness gateway is relieving suffering; the intrinsic defining characteristic of a liberation is liberating;<sup>440</sup> the intrinsic defining characteristic of the powers is being well realized;<sup>441</sup> the intrinsic defining characteristic of the fearlessnesses is being extremely secure; the intrinsic defining characteristic of the kinds of exact knowledge is that they cannot be cut; the intrinsic defining characteristic of great loving kindness is supplying benefit; the intrinsic defining characteristic of great compassion is supplying protection; the intrinsic defining characteristic of great joy is delight; [F.164.a] the intrinsic defining characteristic of great equanimity is being unadulterated; the intrinsic defining characteristic of the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas is that they cannot be stolen; and the intrinsic defining characteristic of all-aspect omniscience is direct perception.<sup>442</sup> All those phenomena are empty of their respective intrinsic defining characteristics—the intrinsic defining characteristic of conditioned phenomena and the intrinsic defining characteristic of unconditioned phenomena—because they do not endure and do not disintegrate. If you ask why, it is because that is their nature. This is called the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics.

8.400 “If, among them, you ask what is the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, that which cannot be apprehended—that in which the past cannot be apprehended, the future cannot be apprehended, and the constancy of the present cannot be apprehended—is empty of that which cannot be apprehended because it does not endure and does not disintegrate. If you ask why, it is because that is its nature. This is called the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended.

8.401 “If, among them, you ask what is the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities, the essential nature of a union<sup>443</sup> does not exist, because all phenomena are dependently arisen. A union is empty of a union because it does not endure and does not disintegrate. If you ask why, it is because that is its nature. This is called the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities.

8.402 “Moreover, Subhūti, entity is empty of entity. Nonentity is empty of nonentity. Essential entity is empty of essential entity. Entity from something else is empty of entity from something else.<sup>444</sup>

8.403 “If, among them, you ask what the entity is that is called entity, it is the five aggregates. Those aggregates are empty of aggregates, and, in that way, entity is empty of entity.

8.404 “If you ask in what way nonentity is empty of nonentity, a nonentity is an unconditioned phenomenon, so, because an unconditioned phenomenon is empty of an unconditioned phenomenon, nonentity is empty of nonentity.

8.405 “If you ask in what way essential entity [F.164.b] is empty of essential entity, essential entity is unmistaken inherent nature,<sup>445</sup> and that which is the emptiness in it has not been created by knowing and has not been created by seeing. That is the emptiness of essential entity.

8.406 “If, among them, you ask what is the emptiness of entity from something else, whether the tathāgatas appear or whether the tathāgatas do not appear, the abiding nature of phenomena, the reality of phenomena, the realm of phenomena, the maturity of phenomena, the real nature, the unmistakable real nature, the one and only real nature, and the very limit of reality remain as they are. Thus, those phenomena are empty of something else. This is called the emptiness of entity from something else.

“This, Subhūti, is the Great Vehicle of bodhisattva great beings.” [B12]

8.407 “Moreover, Subhūti, the Great Vehicle of bodhisattva great beings is the meditative stability named heroic valor, the meditative stability named precious seal, the meditative stability named lion’s play, the meditative stability named beautiful moon, the meditative stability named crest of the moon’s victory banner, the meditative stability named surpassing all phenomena, the meditative stability named seal of all phenomena, the meditative stability named surveying the crown pinnacle, the meditative stability named certainty in the realm of phenomena, the meditative stability named crest of certainty’s victory banner, the meditative stability named vajra, the meditative stability named seal of entry into all phenomena, the meditative stability named well established as the king of meditative stabilities, the meditative stability named excellently well established, [F.165.a] the meditative stability named well-engaging king of meditative stabilities, the meditative stability named without mistakes, the meditative stability named because of the diffusion of light rays not making mistakes, the meditative stability named power of effort, the meditative stability named exalted, the meditative stability named engaging with certainty in lexical explanations, the meditative stability named entry into designations, the meditative stability named observation of spatial directions, the meditative stability named sealed with the seal, the meditative stability named unimpaired, the meditative stability named oceanic seal gathering all phenomena, the meditative stability named seal of the king, the meditative stability named permeation of space, the meditative stability named vajra maṇḍala, the meditative stability named purified of the three spheres, the meditative stability named shoulder ornament of the victory banner’s crest, the meditative stability named Indra’s crest, the meditative stability named pursued the stream, the meditative stability named yawning lion, the meditative stability named stretching lion, the meditative stability named stretching-out lion, the meditative stability named beyond sequence, the meditative stability named without attachment or impediment, the meditative stability named repudiation of afflicted mental states, the meditative stability named illumination, the meditative stability named unseeking, the meditative stability named no fixed abode, the meditative stability named free from mentation, the meditative stability named taming the four māras, the meditative stability named stainless lamplight, [F.165.b] the meditative stability named boundless light, the meditative stability named illuminator, the meditative stability named total illumination, the meditative stability named pure supremacy, the meditative stability named stainless light, the meditative stability named bringer of joy, the meditative stability named lightning lamp, the meditative stability named inexhaustible, the meditative stability named unvanquished, the meditative stability named majestic, the meditative stability named free from extinction, the meditative stability named unmoving, the meditative stability named calmed, the meditative stability named imperishable, abiding in the meditative stability named lamp of the sun, the meditative stability named immaculate moon, the meditative stability named clear-eyed, the meditative stability named lamp of wisdom, the meditative stability named clear appearance, the meditative stability named moon lamp, the meditative stability named illuminating, the meditative stability named does what needs to be done, the meditative stability named glory of transcendental knowledge, the meditative stability named vajra-like, the meditative stability named stability of mind, the meditative stability named total illumination, the meditative stability named well situated, the meditative stability named jewel cusp, the meditative stability named seal of the supreme phenomenon, the meditative stability named sameness of all phenomena, the meditative stability named renunciation of delight, the meditative stability named elevated by phenomena, the meditative stability named expanded on account of being elevated by phenomena, the meditative stability named jewel state, the meditative stability named forsaking fights, the meditative stability named dispersal, the meditative stability named [F.166.a] distinguishing the terms associated with all phenomena, the meditative stability named determination, the meditative stability named stainless performance, the meditative stability named arranging the sameness of letters, the meditative stability named devoid of letters, the meditative stability named cutting off the objective support, the meditative stability named unmodified, the meditative stability named aspectless, the meditative stability named entering into names and signs, the meditative stability named free from activity, the meditative stability named entering into the ascertainment of names, the meditative stability named a practitioner without a dwelling, the meditative stability named devoid of darkness, the meditative stability named endowed with practice, the meditative stability named unwavering, the meditative stability named transcendence of the range, the meditative stability named accumulation of all attributes, the meditative stability named abiding without mentation, the meditative stability named abiding with certainty, the meditative stability named blossoming and vibrance of the flowers of virtue, the meditative stability named endowed with the branches of enlightenment, the meditative stability named boundless eloquence, the meditative stability named boundless lamplight, the meditative stability named equal to the unequaled, the meditative stability named transcending all phenomena, the meditative stability named delineator, the meditative stability named dispelling doubt, the meditative stability named without settled focus, the meditative stability named single array, the meditative stability named manifest attainment of aspects, the meditative stability named single aspect, the meditative stability named nonexclusion of the aspect, the meditative stability named supreme performance, the meditative stability named [F.166.b] comprehension of all bases of existence through realization, the meditative stability named entrance to symbols and sounds, the meditative stability named jewel heart, the meditative stability named unattached to any phenomena, the meditative stability named array of flashes of lightning, the meditative stability named forsaking, the meditative stability named lamp of doctrine, the meditative stability named lamp of transcendental knowledge, the meditative stability named manifest attainment of the miraculous ability to not return, the meditative stability named devoid of vocalic syllables, the meditative stability named burning lamp, the meditative stability named purification of defining characteristics, the meditative stability named nondistinguished, the meditative stability named endowed with a distinct forbearance, the meditative stability named endowed with all finest aspects, the meditative stability named endowed with dhāraṇīs, the meditative stability named absence of joy with respect to all happiness and suffering, the meditative stability named inexhaustible cornucopia, the meditative stability named dhāraṇī intelligence, the meditative stability named perfect elimination of right and wrong, the meditative stability named perfect calming of all contradictions and refutations, the meditative stability named no harmony or disharmony, the meditative stability named taintless light, the meditative stability named endowed with the essence, the meditative stability named taintless light of the full moon, the meditative stability named lightning light, the meditative stability named great ornament, the meditative stability named illuminator in all respects, the meditative stability named protector of all worlds, the meditative stability named sameness of meditative stability, the meditative stability [F.167.a] named with a dustless and dust-free principle, the meditative stability named convergence in nonaffliction, the meditative stability named convergence of all afflicted mental states in nonaffliction, the meditative stability named intent on a dwelling that has not been apprehended, the meditative stability named abiding in the real nature without mentation, the meditative stability named self-originated from the vessel, the meditative stability named incinerating all afflicted mental states, the meditative stability named lamp of great transcendental knowledge, the meditative stability named origin of the ten powers, the meditative stability named opener of the gateways, the meditative stability named dispelling the defects of corporeality, the meditative stability named obliterating defects of speech, transforming them as if into space, the meditative stability named dispelling the defects of the mind, the meditative stability named thorough investigation, the meditative stability named space-like, and the meditative stability named space-like and without attachment, hence free and without blemish.

8.408 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named heroic valor, this meditative stability ranges over<sup>446</sup> the perceptual range of all meditative stabilities. This is the meditative stability named heroic valor.

8.409 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named precious seal, through this meditative stability all meditative stabilities are sealed. This is the meditative stability named precious seal.

8.410 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named lion’s play, abiding [F.167.b] in that meditative stability they play with all meditative stabilities. This is the meditative stability named lion’s play.

8.411 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named beautiful moon, abiding in that meditative stability they illuminate all meditative stabilities. This is the meditative stability named beautiful moon.

8.412 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named crest of the moon’s victory banner, this meditative stability upholds the victory banner of all meditative stabilities. This is the meditative stability named crest of the moon’s victory banner.

8.413 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named surpassing all phenomena, abiding in that meditative stability they become exalted on account of all meditative stabilities. This is the meditative stability named surpassing all phenomena.

8.414 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named seal of all phenomena, abiding in that meditative stability they hold the seal of all meditative stabilities.<sup>447</sup> This is the meditative stability named seal of all phenomena.

8.415 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named surveying the crown pinnacle, abiding in that meditative stability they survey the pinnacle of all meditative stabilities. This is the meditative stability named surveying the crown pinnacle.

8.416 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named certainty in the realm of phenomena, abiding in that meditative stability they move toward understanding concerning the realm of phenomena. This is the meditative stability named certainty in the realm of phenomena.

- 8.417 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named crest of certainty’s victory banner, abiding in that meditative stability one holds the victory banner indicative of certainty with respect to all meditative stabilities. This is the meditative stability named crest of certainty’s victory banner.
- 8.418 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named vajra, abiding in that meditative stability all meditative stabilities will not perish.<sup>448</sup> This is the meditative stability named vajra. [F.168.a]
- 8.419 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named seal of entry into all phenomena, abiding in that meditative stability one enters into the seal of all phenomena. This is the meditative stability named seal of entry into all phenomena.
- 8.420 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named well established as the king of meditative stabilities, abiding in that meditative stability they are well established in all meditative stabilities, like a king.<sup>449</sup> This is the meditative stability named well established as the king of meditative stabilities.
- 8.421 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named excellently well established, abiding in that meditative stability they take hold of and do not squander all the accumulations of merit. This is the meditative stability named excellently well established.<sup>450</sup>
- 8.422 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named the well-founded king of meditative stabilities,<sup>451</sup> abiding in that meditative stability, all the kings of meditative stabilities are well placed and founded. This is the meditative stability named the well-founded king of meditative stabilities.
- 8.423 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named diffusion of light rays, abiding in that meditative stability they diffuse the light rays of all meditative stabilities. This is the meditative stability named diffusion of light rays.
- 8.424 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named without mistakes, abiding in that meditative stability they cause the recollection and nondegeneration of all the perceptual ranges and practices of all absorptions. This is the meditative stability named without mistakes.<sup>452</sup>
- 8.425 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named because of the diffusion of light rays not making mistakes, abiding in that meditative stability they illuminate all the world systems of beings with the light rays of the meditative stabilities and cause the recollection of earlier practices. This is the meditative stability named because of the diffusion of light rays not making mistakes.
- 8.426 “If, among them, you ask what is [F.168.b] the meditative stability named power of effort, abiding in that meditative stability they cause the generation of the force of the effort of all meditative stabilities. This is the meditative stability named power of effort.

- 8.427 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named array of power, abiding in that meditative stability they array the power of all meditative stabilities. This is the meditative stability named array of power.
- 8.428 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named exalted, abiding in that meditative stability all meditative stabilities become exalted. This is the meditative stability named exalted.
- 8.429 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named engaging with certainty in lexical explanations, abiding in that meditative stability they engage in the exposition of the etymologies of all the meditative stabilities. This is the meditative stability named engaging with certainty in lexical explanations.
- 8.430 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named entry into designations, abiding in that meditative stability they enter into the designations of all the meditative stabilities. This is the meditative stability named entry into designations.
- 8.431 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named observation of spatial directions, abiding in that meditative stability they observe the spatial directions of all meditative stabilities. This is the meditative stability named observation of spatial directions.
- 8.432 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named sealed with the seal, abiding in that meditative stability they are sealed with the seal<sup>453</sup> of all meditative stabilities. This is the meditative stability named sealed with the seal.
- 8.433 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named unimpaired, abiding in that meditative stability none of the meditative stabilities becomes impaired. This is the meditative stability named unimpaired.
- 8.434 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named [F.169.a] oceanic seal gathering all phenomena, abiding in that meditative stability all meditative stabilities gather and go into being included in it. This is the meditative stability named oceanic seal gathering all phenomena.
- 8.435 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named seal of the king,<sup>454</sup> abiding in that meditative stability they definitely achieve all their purposes, just as the establishment of all one wants is caused by the seal of the king. This is the meditative stability named seal of the king.
- 8.436 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named permeation of space, abiding in that meditative stability space is permeated extensively with all the meditative stabilities.<sup>455</sup> This is the meditative stability named permeation of space.

- 8.437 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named vajra maṇḍala, abiding in that meditative stability they apprehend the maṇḍalas of all meditative stabilities.<sup>456</sup> This is the meditative stability named vajra maṇḍala.
- 8.438 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named purified of the three spheres, abiding in that meditative stability they do not grasp all the meditative stabilities, those in meditative stabilities, or the perceptual ranges of the meditative stabilities. This is the meditative stability named purified of the three spheres.<sup>457</sup>
- 8.439 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named shoulder ornament of the victory banner’s crest, abiding in that meditative stability they rise above all meditative concentrations, like the supreme victory banner. This is the meditative stability named shoulder ornament of the victory banner’s crest.
- 8.440 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named Indra’s crest, abiding in that meditative stability they obtain with certainty the supreme Indra of all meditative stabilities. This is the meditative stability named Indra’s crest.
- 8.441 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named pursuit of the stream, abiding in that meditative stability [F.169.b] one sets out without error in pursuit of all meditative stabilities. This is the meditative stability named pursuit of the stream.
- 8.442 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named yawning lion, abiding in that meditative stability, having become powerful with elimination of all dust and stains, on account of acquiring the supreme power, like the king of lions, they yawn, as it were. This is the meditative stability named yawning lion.
- 8.443 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named stretching lion, abiding in that meditative stability, on account of the acquisition of power over the supreme miraculous displays, they are without fear or trepidation, and slip into and destroy<sup>458</sup> the forces of all the māras. This is the meditative stability named stretching lion.
- 8.444 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named stretching-out lion, abiding in that meditative stability, endowed with supreme confidence, they feel no trepidation in the midst of many retinues and vanquish all the wrong views of the non-Buddhists. This is the meditative stability named stretching-out lion.
- 8.445 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named beyond sequence, abiding in that meditative stability they interrupt the continuity of the phenomena of saṃsāra. This is the meditative stability named beyond sequence.

- 8.446 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named without attachment or impediment, abiding in that meditative stability, in regard to all phenomena, there is no grasping or obstruction. This is the meditative stability named without attachment or impediment.<sup>459</sup>
- 8.447 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named repudiation of afflicted mental states, abiding in that meditative stability they dispel the stains of all afflicted mental states. This is the meditative stability named repudiation of afflicted mental states.
- 8.448 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named illumination, abiding in that meditative stability they illuminate, irradiate, and light up<sup>460</sup> all meditative stabilities. This is [F.170.a] the meditative stability named illumination.
- 8.449 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named unseeking, abiding in that meditative stability nothing at all is sought. This is the meditative stability named unseeking.
- 8.450 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named no fixed abode, abiding in that meditative stability they do not observe anything at all as an abode that is a basis. This is the meditative stability named no fixed abode.
- 8.451 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named free from mentation, for those abiding in that meditative stability mind does not arise, nor do mental factors occur.<sup>461</sup> This is the meditative stability named free from mentation.
- 8.452 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named taming the four māras, abiding in that meditative stability they subdue all four māras that are the enemies. This is the meditative stability named taming the four māras.<sup>462</sup>
- 8.453 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named stainless lamplight, abiding in that meditative stability they act as the stainless lamplight of all meditative stabilities. This is the meditative stability named stainless lamplight.
- 8.454 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named boundless light, abiding in that meditative stability they generate boundless light. This is the meditative stability named boundless light.
- 8.455 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named illuminator, immediately after this meditative stability has been attained they illuminate all meditative concentrations. This is the meditative stability named illuminator.
- 8.456 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named total illumination, immediately after that meditative stability has been attained they illuminate the gateways of all meditative concentrations. This is the meditative stability named total illumination.

- 8.457 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named pure supremacy, abiding in that meditative stability they acquire the purity that is the same for all meditative stabilities. [F.170.b] This is the meditative stability named pure supremacy.
- 8.458 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named stainless light, abiding in that meditative stability they dispel the stains of all meditative stabilities. This is the meditative stability named stainless light.
- 8.459 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named bringer of joy, abiding in that meditative stability they experience the joy of all meditative stabilities. This is the meditative stability named bringer of joy.
- 8.460 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named lightning lamp, abiding in that meditative stability they serve as a lamp for all meditative stabilities. This is the meditative stability named lightning lamp.
- 8.461 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named inexhaustible, abiding in that meditative stability they do not observe whether any meditative stabilities are exhaustible or inexhaustible. This is the meditative stability named inexhaustible.
- 8.462 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named unvanquished, abiding in that meditative stability they acquire power over all meditative stabilities. This is the meditative stability named unvanquished.
- 8.463 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named majestic, abiding in that meditative stability they blaze with the majesty and splendor and of all meditative stabilities. This is the meditative stability named majestic.
- 8.464 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named free from extinction, abiding in that meditative stability they observe that all meditative stabilities are inexhaustible and observe them such that they do not observe even the slightest atom. This is the meditative stability named free from extinction.
- 8.465 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named unmoving, abiding in that meditative stability they neither waver, nor vacillate, nor engage with or give rise to conceit about any meditative stability. This is the meditative stability named unmoving.
- 8.466 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability [F.171.a] named calmed, abiding in that meditative stability absorptions become calmed. This is the meditative stability named calmed.
- 8.467 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named imperishable, abiding in that meditative stability they do not observe any meditative stabilities to perish. This is the meditative stability named imperishable.

- 8.468 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named lamp of the sun, abiding in that meditative stability they illuminate the gateways of all meditative stabilities. This is the meditative stability named lamp of the sun.
- 8.469 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named immaculate moon, abiding in that meditative stability they lift the darkness of all meditative stabilities. This is the meditative stability named immaculate moon.
- 8.470 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named lamp of wisdom, abiding in that meditative stability they dispel all the darkness of ignorance with respect to all meditative stabilities. This is the meditative stability named lamp of wisdom.<sup>463</sup>
- 8.471 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named clear-eyed, abiding in that meditative stability they purify the five eyes. This is the meditative stability named clear-eyed.
- 8.472 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named clear appearance, abiding in that meditative stability they acquire the four kinds of exact knowledge of all meditative stabilities. This is the meditative stability named clear appearance.
- 8.473 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named moon lamp, abiding in that meditative stability they dispel the darkness of the ignorance of all beings and have become like the moon. This is the meditative stability named moon lamp.<sup>464</sup>
- 8.474 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named illuminating, abiding in that meditative stability they illuminate the gateways of all meditative stabilities. This is the meditative stability named [F.171.b] illuminating.
- 8.475 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named does what needs to be done, abiding in that meditative stability they do all that needs to be done by meditative stabilities. This is the meditative stability named does what needs to be done.
- 8.476 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named glory of transcendental knowledge, abiding in that meditative stability they observe the glorious transcendental knowledge with respect to all meditative stabilities. This is the meditative stability named glory of transcendental knowledge.
- 8.477 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named vajra-like, abiding in that meditative stability they cause the comprehension of all meditative stabilities without observing even the meditative stability itself. This is the meditative stability named vajra-like.
- 8.478 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named stability of mind, the mind of those abiding in that meditative stability neither wavers nor vacillates, nor does it turn back, nor does it become wearied, nor does it

- become unhappy at misfortune, and they do not think, 'This is the mind.'
This is the meditative stability named stability of mind.
- 8.479 "If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named total illumination,<sup>465</sup> abiding in that meditative stability they observe the illumination of all. This is the meditative stability named total illumination.
- 8.480 "If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named well situated, abiding in that meditative stability they are well situated in all meditative stabilities. This is the meditative stability named well situated.
- 8.481 "If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named jewel cusp, abiding in that meditative stability all meditative stabilities shine on all sides in the manner of a jewel cusp. This is the meditative stability named jewel cusp.
- 8.482 "If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named seal of the supreme phenomenon, abiding in that meditative stability all meditative stabilities are sealed, based on their being sealed with the absence [F.172.a] of a seal that is the very limit. This is the meditative stability named seal of the supreme phenomenon.
- 8.483 "If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named sameness of all phenomena, abiding in that meditative stability they observe that there is nothing at all that is excluded from sameness. This is the meditative stability named sameness of all phenomena.
- 8.484 "If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named renunciation of delight, abiding in that meditative stability they renounce delight in all meditative stabilities and all phenomena. This is the meditative stability named renunciation of delight.
- 8.485 "If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named elevated by phenomena, abiding in that meditative stability they dispel the darkness in regard to all phenomena and are elevated by all the meditative stabilities. This is the meditative stability named elevated by phenomena.
- 8.486 "If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named expanded on account of being elevated by phenomena, abiding in that meditative stability the qualities of the buddhas rise up and are complete. This is the meditative stability named expanded on account of being elevated by phenomena.<sup>466</sup>
- 8.487 "If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named jewel state, abiding in that meditative stability they become the source of all the infinite great jewel qualities. This is the meditative stability named jewel state.
- 8.488 "If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named forsaking fights, abiding in that meditative stability they forsake all the various mundane arguments and fights. This is the meditative stability named forsaking fights.

- 8.489 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named dispersal, abiding in that meditative stability they disperse all phenomena. This is the meditative stability named dispersal.
- 8.490 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named distinguishing the terms associated with all phenomena, abiding in that meditative [F.172.b] stability they distinguish between the terms associated with all meditative stabilities and all phenomena. This is the meditative stability named distinguishing the terms associated with all phenomena.
- 8.491 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named determination, abiding in that meditative stability they obtain certainty about the sameness of all phenomena. This is the meditative stability named determination.<sup>467</sup>
- 8.492 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named stainless performance, abiding in that meditative stability they generate purified, limitless performances. This is the meditative stability named stainless performance.
- 8.493 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named arranging the sameness of letters, abiding in that meditative stability they acquire the sameness of the letters for all meditative stabilities. This is the meditative stability named arranging the sameness of letters.
- 8.494 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named devoid of letters, abiding in that meditative stability they do not apprehend even a single letter for any meditative stability. This is the meditative stability named devoid of letters.
- 8.495 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named cutting off the objective support, abiding in that meditative stability the objective support for all meditative stabilities is cut off. This is the meditative stability named cutting off the objective support.
- 8.496 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named unmodified, abiding in that meditative stability they do not apprehend changes in any phenomenon. This is the meditative stability named unmodified.
- 8.497 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named aspectless, abiding in that meditative stability they do not apprehend even the mere aspect of any phenomenon. This is the meditative stability named aspectless.
- 8.498 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named entering into names and signs, abiding in that meditative stability entry into the names and the mental images of all phenomena causes the realization of the very limit of reality. This is the meditative stability named [F.173.a] entering into names and signs.<sup>468</sup>

- 8.499        “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named free from activity, abiding in that meditative stability they do not apprehend even the mere aspect of any phenomenon. This is the meditative stability named free from activity.
- 8.500        “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named entering into the ascertainment of names, abiding in that meditative stability they enter into the realization that all etymologies cannot be apprehended in reality and are merely contingent on conventional expressions. This is the meditative stability named entering into the ascertainment of names.
- 8.501        “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named a practitioner without a dwelling, abiding in that meditative stability they do not apprehend a fixed abode of any meditative stability. This is the meditative stability named a practitioner without a dwelling.
- 8.502        “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named devoid of darkness, abiding in that meditative stability they dispel the darkness of phenomena. This is the meditative stability named devoid of darkness.
- 8.503        “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named endowed with practice, abiding in that meditative stability they do not observe the practice<sup>469</sup> of any meditative stability. This is the meditative stability named endowed with practice.
- 8.504        “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named unwavering, abiding in that meditative stability they observe that all meditative stabilities are unwavering. This is the meditative stability named unwavering.
- 8.505        “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named transcendence of the range, abiding in that meditative stability they transcend the perceptual range of all meditative stabilities. This is the meditative stability named transcendence of the range.
- 8.506        “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named accumulation of all attributes, abiding in that meditative stability they subsequently acquire the accumulation of the good qualities of all phenomena and all meditative stabilities. This is the meditative stability named [F.173.b] accumulation of all attributes.
- 8.507        “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named abiding without mentation, abiding in that meditative stability they do not engage mentally with any meditative stabilities. This is the meditative stability named abiding without mentation.
- 8.508        “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named abiding with certainty, abiding in that meditative stability the mind abides with certainty in those meditative stabilities, but still they realize their defining characteristics cannot be apprehended. This is the meditative stability named abiding with certainty.<sup>470</sup>

8.509 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named blossoming and vibrance of the flowers of virtue, abiding in that meditative stability they acquire the blossoming and vibrancy of the flowers of virtue of all meditative stabilities. This is the meditative stability named blossoming and vibrance of the flowers of virtue.

8.510 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named endowed with the branches of enlightenment, abiding in that meditative stability they acquire the seven branches of enlightenment of all meditative stabilities. This is the meditative stability named endowed with the branches of enlightenment.

8.511 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named boundless eloquence, abiding in that meditative stability they acquire boundless eloquence with respect to all meditative stabilities. This is the meditative stability named boundless eloquence.

8.512 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named boundless lamplight, abiding in that meditative stability, like clear lamplight, they illuminate all phenomena. This is the meditative stability named boundless lamplight.<sup>471</sup>

8.513 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named equal to the unequaled, abiding in that meditative stability they acquire the state of being equal to the unequaled with respect to all meditative stabilities. This is the meditative stability named equal to the unequaled.

8.514 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named transcending all phenomena, [F.174.a] abiding in that meditative stability they transcend all three world systems. This is the meditative stability named transcending all phenomena.

8.515 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named delineator, abiding in that meditative stability they see the stretch<sup>472</sup> of all phenomena and of all meditative stabilities. This is the meditative stability named delineator.

8.516 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named dispelling doubt, abiding in that meditative stability they acquire the dispelling of doubt with respect to all meditative stabilities and all phenomena. This is the meditative stability named dispelling doubt.

8.517 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named without settled focus, abiding in that meditative stability they do not observe a location of any phenomena. This is the meditative stability named without settled focus.

- 8.518 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named single array, abiding in that meditative stability they do not observe anything at all in terms of duality. This is the meditative stability named single array.
- 8.519 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named manifest attainment of aspects, abiding in that meditative stability they do not observe the manifest attainment of an aspect of any phenomenon or any meditative stability. This is the meditative stability named manifest attainment of aspects.
- 8.520 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named single aspect, abiding in that meditative stability they do not observe an aspect of any meditative stability. This is the meditative stability named single aspect.
- 8.521 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named nonexclusion of the aspect, abiding in that meditative stability they observe [F.174.b] all as nondual. This is the meditative stability named nonexclusion of the aspect.
- 8.522 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named supreme performance, abiding in that meditative stability, even though they demonstrate various sorts of performance from those absorptions, they do not grasp anything at all. This is the meditative stability named supreme performance.<sup>473</sup>
- 8.523 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named comprehension of all bases of existence through realization, abiding in that meditative stability they enter into the transcendental knowledge that realizes all meditative stabilities and then, since that has been entered, there is nothing at all that has not been comprehended. This is the meditative stability named comprehension of all bases of existence through realization.
- 8.524 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named entrance to symbols and sounds, abiding in that meditative stability they enter into the symbols and sounds associated with all meditative stabilities. This is the meditative stability named entrance to symbols and sounds.
- 8.525 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named jewel heart, abiding in that meditative stability they accomplish the supreme cause, the jewel that does not change or perish and is endowed with immeasurable good qualities. This is the meditative stability named jewel heart.<sup>474</sup>
- 8.526 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named unattached to any phenomena, abiding in that meditative stability they are unattached to any phenomena because all phenomena are without mental images. This is the meditative stability named unattached to any phenomena.
- 8.527 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named array of flashes of lightning, abiding in that meditative stability they eliminate the pitch-black darkness with the scattering out of various light rays, and

- furthermore array a hundred immeasurable good qualities. This is the meditative stability named array of flashes of lightning.
- 8.528 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named forsaking, abiding in that meditative stability they abandon the propensities for infinite afflictive mental states. This is the meditative stability named [F.175.a] forsaking.
- 8.529 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named lamp of doctrine, abiding in that meditative stability they illuminate the specific and general defining characteristics of the meditative stabilities. This is the meditative stability named lamp of doctrine.
- 8.530 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named lamp of transcendental knowledge, abiding in that meditative stability they teach clearly the selflessness of persons and phenomena in reference to all phenomena. This is the meditative stability named lamp of transcendental knowledge.
- 8.531 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named manifest attainment of the miraculous ability to not return, abiding in that meditative stability they accomplish the supreme, inconceivable miraculous ability not to return that is not overcome by others. This is the meditative stability named manifest attainment of the miraculous ability to not return.
- 8.532 If you ask what is the meditative stability named devoid of vocalic syllables, abiding in that meditative stability they see that all meditative stabilities are devoid of syllables. This is the meditative stability named devoid of vocalic syllables.<sup>475</sup>
- 8.533 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named burning lamp, abiding in that meditative stability they illuminate, irradiate, and light up all meditative stabilities with splendor. This is the meditative stability named burning lamp.
- 8.534 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named purification of defining characteristics, abiding in that meditative stability the defining characteristics of all meditative stabilities are purified. This is the meditative stability named purification of defining characteristics.
- 8.535 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named nondistinguished, abiding in that meditative stability they observe that all meditative stabilities are imperceptible. This is the meditative stability named nondistinguished.
- 8.536 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named endowed with a distinct forbearance, abiding in [F.175.b] that meditative stability they acquire a distinct forbearance for all phenomena. This is the meditative stability named endowed with a distinct forbearance.<sup>476</sup>

- 8.537 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named endowed with all finest aspects, abiding in that meditative stability they become endowed with all the finest aspects of all meditative stabilities. This is the meditative stability named endowed with all finest aspects.
- 8.538 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named endowed with dhāraṇīs, abiding in that meditative stability they take hold of all of the seals of meditative stability. This is the meditative stability named endowed with dhāraṇīs.
- 8.539 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named absence of joy with respect to all happiness and suffering, abiding in that meditative stability they do not observe happiness or suffering in any meditative stability. This is the meditative stability named absence of joy with respect to all happiness and suffering.
- 8.540 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named inexhaustible cornucopia, abiding in that meditative stability they do not observe that any meditative stability is suitable to be extinguished. This is the meditative stability named inexhaustible cornucopia.
- 8.541 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named dhāraṇī intelligence,<sup>477</sup> abiding in that meditative stability they apprehend all dhāraṇīs. This is the meditative stability named dhāraṇī intelligence.
- 8.542 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named perfect elimination of right and wrong, abiding in that meditative stability they do not observe any meditative stabilities as right or wrong. This is the meditative stability named perfect elimination of right and wrong.
- 8.543 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named perfect calming of all contradictions and refutations, abiding in that meditative stability they do not observe [F.176.a] the contradiction or refutation of any meditative stability. This is the meditative stability named perfect calming of all contradictions and refutations.<sup>478</sup>
- 8.544 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named no harmony or disharmony, abiding in that meditative stability they do not observe harmony or disharmony with respect to any meditative stabilities. This is the meditative stability named no harmony or disharmony.
- 8.545 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named taintless light, abiding in that meditative stability they do not apprehend the circle of light of any meditative stability. This is the meditative stability named taintless light.
- 8.546 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named endowed with the essence, abiding in that meditative stability they do not observe the essence of any meditative stability. This is the meditative stability named endowed with the essence.

- 8.547 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named taintless light of the full moon, abiding in that meditative stability all meditative stabilities fully develop, like the disk of the full moon. This is the meditative stability named taintless light of the full moon.
- 8.548 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named lightning light,<sup>479</sup> abiding in that meditative stability pure and radiant light illuminates the groups of beings, and it dispels the pitch-black darkness and tormenting heat. This is the meditative stability named lightning light.
- 8.549 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named great ornament, abiding in that meditative stability they become endowed with the great array of all meditative stabilities. This is the meditative stability named great ornament.
- 8.550 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named illuminator in all respects, abiding in that meditative stability they illuminate all meditative stabilities. This is the meditative stability named illuminator in all respects.
- 8.551 “If, among them, you ask [F.176.b] what is the meditative stability named protector of all worlds, abiding in that meditative stability they protect from all the world’s suffering. This is the meditative stability named protector of all worlds.<sup>480</sup>
- 8.552 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named sameness of meditative stability, abiding in that meditative stability they do not apprehend agitation in any meditative stability, nor do they apprehend one-pointedness. This is the meditative stability named sameness of meditative stability.
- 8.553 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named with a dustless and dust-free principle, abiding in that meditative stability they understand that all dusty and dustless meditative stabilities and phenomena are in the same state. This is the meditative stability named with a dustless and dust-free principle.
- 8.554 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named convergence in nonaffliction, abiding in that meditative stability all meditative stabilities become free from afflicted mental states. This is the meditative stability named convergence in nonaffliction.
- 8.555 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named convergence of all afflicted mental states in nonaffliction, abiding in that meditative stability they acquire the convergence of all afflicted mental states in nonaffliction. This is the meditative stability named convergence of all afflicted mental states in nonaffliction.
- 8.556 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named intent on a dwelling that has not been apprehended, abiding in that meditative stability, they do not get at a basis-of-all<sup>481</sup> of all meditative stabilities. This is the meditative stability named intent on a dwelling that has not been apprehended.

8.557 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named abiding in the real nature without mentation, abiding in that meditative stability they are irreversible from the real nature of all meditative [F.177.a] stabilities. This is the meditative stability named abiding in the real nature without mentation.

8.558 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named self-originated from the vessel, abiding in that meditative stability, through the force of the meditative equipoise they generate many good qualities, just as the gods, through the force of their merits, have food come about self-originated in their vessels. This is the meditative stability named self-originated from the vessel.<sup>482</sup>

8.559 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named incinerating all afflicted mental states, abiding in that meditative stability they are the incinerator, totally, of all afflictive mental states. This is the meditative stability named incinerating all afflicted mental states.

8.560 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named lamp of great transcendental knowledge, abiding in that meditative stability the light of transcendental knowledge illuminates everything. This is the meditative stability named lamp of great transcendental knowledge.

8.561 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named origin of the ten powers, abiding in that meditative stability they quickly complete the ten powers of the tathāgatas. This is the meditative stability named origin of the ten powers.

8.562 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named opener of the gateways, abiding in that meditative stability, by opening up the gateways of good doctrines for the sake of beings, they quickly liberate beings from the great sufferings of saṃsāra. This is the meditative stability named opener of the gateways.

8.563 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named dispelling the defects of corporeality, abiding in that meditative stability they do not apprehend corporeality with respect to any meditative stability. This is the meditative stability named dispelling the defects of corporeality.

8.564 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named obliterating defects of speech, transforming them as if into space, abiding in that meditative stability they do not apprehend verbal actions with respect to any meditative stabilities. [F.177.b] This is the meditative stability named obliterating defects of speech, transforming them as if into space.<sup>483</sup>

8.565 “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named dispelling the defects of the mind, abiding in that meditative stability they do not apprehend mental actions with respect to any meditative stabilities. This is the meditative stability named dispelling the defects of the mind.<sup>484</sup>

- 8.566      “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named thorough investigation, abiding in that meditative stability they thoroughly investigate the particular faculties of beings and liberate them. This is the meditative stability named thorough investigation.
- 8.567      “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named space-like, abiding in that meditative stability they benefit beings impartially, like space. This is the meditative stability named space-like.
- 8.568      “If, among them, you ask what is the meditative stability named space-like and without attachment, hence free and without blemish, abiding in that meditative stability, they acquire the state in which all phenomena are space-like and without attachment, hence free and without blemish. This is the meditative stability named space-like and without attachment, hence free and without blemish.
- 8.569      “This, Subhūti, is the Great Vehicle of bodhisattva great beings who practice the perfection of wisdom.”
- 8.570      This completes the eighth chapter from The Perfection of Wisdom in One Hundred Thousand Lines.

9.

CHAPTER 9

9.1 “Moreover, Subhūti, the Great Vehicle of bodhisattva great beings is the four applications of mindfulness. If you ask what these four are, they are the application of mindfulness to the body, the application of mindfulness to feelings, the application of mindfulness to the mind, [F.178.a] and the application of mindfulness to phenomena.

9.2 “If you ask what the application of mindfulness to the body is, in this respect, Subhūti, bodhisattva great beings who are diligent, alert, and mindful, and have eliminated covetousness and unhappiness with respect to the world, practice observing the inner body, without apprehending anything and without forming conceptual thoughts to do with the body. Bodhisattva great beings who are diligent, alert, and mindful, and have eliminated covetousness and unhappiness with respect to the world, practice observing the outer body, without apprehending anything and without forming conceptual thoughts to do with the body. Bodhisattva great beings who are diligent, alert, and mindful, and have eliminated covetousness and unhappiness with respect to the world, practice observing the outer and inner body, without apprehending anything and without forming conceptual thoughts to do with the body.

9.3 “Bodhisattva great beings who are diligent, alert, and mindful, and have eliminated covetousness and unhappiness with respect to the world, practice observing inner feelings, without apprehending anything and without forming conceptual thoughts to do with feelings. Bodhisattva great beings who are diligent, alert, and mindful, and have eliminated covetousness and unhappiness with respect to the world, practice observing outer feelings, without apprehending anything and without forming conceptual thoughts to do with feelings. Bodhisattva great beings who are diligent, alert, and mindful, and have eliminated covetousness and unhappiness with respect to the world, practice [F.178.b] observing outer and inner feelings, without apprehending anything and without forming conceptual thoughts to do with feelings.

9.4 “Bodhisattva great beings who are diligent, alert, and mindful, and have eliminated covetousness and unhappiness with respect to the world, practice observing the inner mind, without apprehending anything and without forming conceptual thoughts to do with mind. Bodhisattva great beings who are diligent, alert, and mindful, and have eliminated covetousness and unhappiness with respect to the world, practice observing the outer mind, without apprehending anything and without forming conceptual thoughts to do with mind. Bodhisattva great beings who are diligent, alert, and mindful, and have eliminated covetousness and unhappiness with respect to the world, practice observing the outer and inner mind, without apprehending anything and without forming conceptual thoughts to do with mind.

9.5 “Bodhisattva great beings who are diligent, alert, and mindful, and have eliminated covetousness and unhappiness with respect to the world, practice observing inner phenomena, without apprehending anything and without forming conceptual thoughts to do with phenomena. Bodhisattva great beings who are diligent, alert, and mindful, and have eliminated covetousness and unhappiness with respect to the world, practice observing outer phenomena, without apprehending anything and without forming conceptual thoughts to do with phenomena. Bodhisattva great beings who are diligent, alert, and mindful, and have eliminated covetousness and unhappiness with respect to the world, practice observing outer and inner phenomena, [F.179.a] without apprehending anything and without forming conceptual thoughts to do with phenomena.

9.6 “Subhūti, if you ask how bodhisattva great beings practice observing the inner body, in this respect, Subhūti, when bodhisattva great beings are moving, they are fully aware that they are moving. When they are standing upright, they are fully aware that they are standing upright. When they are sitting, they are fully aware that they are sitting. When they are lying down, they are fully aware that they are lying down. When the body is comfortable or uncomfortable, and in whatever ways the body changes its posture, they are fully aware. Subhūti, it is in such ways that bodhisattva great beings who are diligent, alert, and mindful, and have eliminated covetousness and unhappiness with respect to the world, practice observing the inner body, without apprehending anything.

9.7 “Moreover, Subhūti, bodhisattva great beings dwell in a body observing the inner body without apprehending anything. They remain alert, whether they are going out or returning. They remain alert, whether they are looking or peering. They remain alert, whether they are bending in or stretching out. They remain alert, whether they are wearing an upper robe<sup>485</sup> or carrying an alms bowl. They remain alert, whether they are eating, drinking, chewing, or tasting. They remain alert, whether they are lying down or warding off the fatigue of sleep.<sup>486</sup> They remain alert, whether they are going or coming. They remain alert, whether they are standing or sitting. They remain alert, whether they are falling asleep or not falling asleep. They remain alert, whether they are speaking or not speaking. And they also remain alert inside, settled in meditation. Subhūti, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom, [F.179.b] it is in such ways that they are diligent, alert, and mindful, have eliminated covetousness and unhappiness with respect to the world, and practice observing the inner body, without apprehending anything.

9.8 “Moreover, Subhūti, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom, they are fully aware that when they breathe in mindfully, they are breathing in mindfully.<sup>487</sup> They are fully aware that when they breathe out mindfully, they are breathing out mindfully. They are fully aware that when they breathe in a long breath, they are breathing in a long breath. They are fully aware that when they breathe out a long breath, they are breathing out a long breath. They are fully aware that when they breathe in a short breath, they are breathing in a short breath. They are fully aware that when they breathe out a short breath, they are breathing out a short breath. Subhūti, this resembles, as an analogy, a skilled potter turning a wheel or a skilled apprentice of a potter turning a wheel. They are fully aware that when they are turning the wheel in a long whirl, they are turning the wheel in a long whirl, and they are fully aware that when they are turning the wheel in a short whirl, they are turning the wheel in a short whirl. Moreover, Subhūti, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom, they are fully aware that when they breathe in mindfully, they are breathing in mindfully. They are fully aware that when they breathe out mindfully, they are breathing out mindfully. They are fully aware that when they breathe in a long breath, they are breathing in a long breath. They are fully aware that when they breathe out a long breath, they are breathing out a long breath. They are fully aware that when they breathe in a short breath, they are breathing in a short breath. They are fully aware that when they breathe out a short breath, they are breathing out a short breath. Subhūti, when bodhisattva great beings practice [F.180.a] the perfection of wisdom, it is in such ways that they are diligent, alert, and mindful, have eliminated covetousness and unhappiness with respect to the world, and practice observing the inner body, without apprehending anything.

9.9       “Moreover, Subhūti, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom, they correctly examine how this body has various elements—how it has the element of earth, and also has the element of water, the element of fire, and the element of wind. Subhūti, as an analogy, just as a skilled butcher of bulls or a skilled apprentice of a butcher of bulls slays a bull with a sharp instrument, cuts it into four parts, and then examines the quartered carcass, as they stand or sit, in the same way bodhisattva great beings who practice the perfection of wisdom also examine how this same body has various elements—how it has the element of earth, the element of water, the element of fire, and the element of wind. Subhūti, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom, it is in such ways, as they stand or sit, that they are diligent, alert, and mindful, have eliminated covetousness and unhappiness with respect to the world, and practice observing the inner body, without apprehending anything.

9.10       “Moreover, Subhūti, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom, they correctly examine how this same body is full of manifold impurities, from the soles of the feet upward, from the hair and the brain downward, and from the nails, body hair, and skin inward. That is to say, they correctly examine how this body has the hairs of the head, [F.180.b] the hairs of the body, nails, epidermal skin, inner skin, flesh,<sup>488</sup> ligaments, blood, bones, marrow, heart, kidneys, liver, lungs, spleen, large intestine, small intestine, colon, viscera,<sup>489</sup> urinary tract, excrement, tears, sweat, fat, mucus, nasal mucus, pus, bile, phlegm, serum, saliva, filthy excretions,<sup>490</sup> brain tissue, cerebral secretions, eye mucus, and ear wax. Subhūti, this is just like when the grain bins of a farmer have been filled with sesame, mustard seeds, lentils, beans, barley, wheat, rice, and diverse grains, and an observant passer-by, on opening them and looking at the contents, would know that these are sesame, these are mustard seeds, these are lentils, these are beans, these are barley, these are wheat, these are rice, and these are grains other than those. Subhūti, in the same way, bodhisattva great beings correctly examine how this very body is full of manifold impurities, from the soles of the feet upward, from the hair and the crown of the head downward, and from the nails, body hair, and skin inward. That is to say, they correctly examine how this body has the hairs of the head, the hairs of the body, nails, epidermal skin, inner skin, flesh, ligaments, blood, bones, marrow, heart, kidneys, liver, lungs, spleen, large intestine, small intestine, colon, viscera, urinary tract, excrement, tears, sweat, fat, mucus, nasal mucus, pus, bile, phlegm, serum, saliva, filthy excretions, brain tissue, cerebral secretions, eye mucus, and ear wax. [F.181.a] [B13]

- 9.11 “Subhūti, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom, it is in such ways that they are diligent, alert, and mindful, have eliminated covetousness and unhappiness with respect to the world, and practice observing the inner body, without apprehending anything.
- 9.12 “Moreover, Subhūti, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom, on seeing corpses that have been discarded in a charnel ground—those lying on a bier; those that have been dead for one day, dead for two days, dead for three days, dead for four days, or dead for five days; and those that are bloated, blue-black, putrefied, chewed on, or dismembered—they compare these circumstances to their own bodies: ‘This body too has attributes such as these. It has a nature such as these. It does not go beyond this reality.’ Subhūti, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom, it is in such ways that they are diligent, alert, and mindful, have eliminated covetousness and unhappiness with respect to the world, and practice observing the outer body, without apprehending anything.
- 9.13 “Moreover, Subhūti, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom, on seeing corpses that have been discarded in a charnel ground, dead for six days, dead for seven days, being eaten by various sorts of wild creatures—ravens, crows, hawks, vultures, wolves, foxes, dogs, or any other of the various kinds of creatures—they compare these circumstances to their own bodies: ‘This body too has attributes such as these. [F.181.b] It has a nature such as these. It does not go beyond this reality.’ Subhūti, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom, it is in such ways that they are diligent, alert, and mindful, have eliminated covetousness and unhappiness with respect to the world, and practice observing the outer body, without apprehending anything.
- 9.14 “Moreover, Subhūti, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom, on seeing corpses that have been discarded in a charnel ground, chewed up, foul, festering, and rotten, they compare these circumstances to their own bodies: ‘This body too has attributes such as these. It has a nature such as these. It does not go beyond this reality.’ Subhūti, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom, it is in such ways that they are diligent, alert, and mindful, have eliminated covetousness and unhappiness with respect to the world, and practice observing the outer body, without apprehending anything.
- 9.15 “Moreover, Subhūti, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom, on seeing the bones in a charnel ground, complete skeletons with fragments of flesh, smears of blood, tenuously joined together by tendons, they compare these to the circumstances of their own bodies: ‘This body too has attributes such as these. It has a nature such as these. It does not go beyond this reality.’ Subhūti, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom, it is in such ways that they are diligent, alert, and mindful, have eliminated [F.182.a] covetousness and unhappiness with respect to the world, and practice observing the outer body, without apprehending anything.

9.16 “Moreover, Subhūti, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom, on seeing the skeletal bones in a charnel ground, devoid of flesh and blood, without the adhesion of tendons, the color of conch shells, they compare these to the circumstances of their own bodies: ‘This body too has attributes such as these. It has a nature such as these. It does not go beyond this reality.’ Subhūti, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom, it is in such ways that they are diligent, alert, and mindful, have eliminated covetousness and unhappiness with respect to the world, and practice observing the outer body, without apprehending anything.

9.17 “Moreover, Subhūti, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom, on seeing [F.182.b] the bones in a charnel ground, scattered in the cardinal and intermediate directions, in one the foot bones, in another the shin bones, in another the thigh bones, in another the hip bones, in another the wrist bones, in another the rib bones, in another the neck bones, and in another the skull bones, they compare these to the circumstances of their own bodies: ‘This body too has attributes such as these. It has a nature such as these. It does not go beyond this reality.’ Subhūti, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom, it is in such ways that they are diligent, alert, and mindful, have eliminated covetousness and unhappiness with respect to the world, and practice observing the outer body, without apprehending anything.

9.18 “Moreover, Subhūti, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom, on seeing the bones in a charnel ground, many years old, weathered by the wind and the sun, the color of conch shells, they compare these to the circumstances of their own bodies: ‘This body too has attributes such as these. It has a nature such as these. It does not go beyond this reality.’ Subhūti, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom, it is in such ways that they are diligent, alert, and mindful, have eliminated covetousness and unhappiness with respect to the world, and practice observing the outer body, without apprehending anything.

9.19 “Moreover, Subhūti, when bodhisattva great beings practice [F.183.a] the perfection of wisdom, on seeing the bones in a charnel ground, many years old, appearing indistinctly,<sup>491</sup> bluish grey like the color of a pigeon, scattered about in smelly small pieces, vying with the dust on the ground,<sup>492</sup> they

compare these to the circumstances of their own bodies: 'This body too has attributes such as these. It has a nature such as these. It does not go beyond this reality.'

9.20 "Subhūti, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom, it is in such ways that they are diligent, alert, and mindful, have eliminated covetousness and unhappiness with respect to the world, and practice observing the inner body, without apprehending anything. They are diligent, alert, and mindful, have eliminated covetousness and unhappiness with respect to the world, and practice observing the outer body, without apprehending anything. They are diligent, alert, and mindful, have eliminated covetousness and unhappiness with respect to the world, and practice observing the inner and outer body, without apprehending anything.

9.21 "They are diligent, alert, and mindful, have eliminated covetousness and unhappiness with respect to the world, and practice observing inner feelings, without apprehending anything. They are diligent, alert, and mindful, have eliminated covetousness and unhappiness with respect to the world, and practice observing outer feelings, without apprehending anything. They are diligent, alert, and mindful, have eliminated covetousness and unhappiness with respect to the world, [F.183.b] and practice observing inner and outer feelings, without apprehending anything.

9.22 "They are diligent, alert, and mindful, have eliminated covetousness and unhappiness with respect to the world, and practice observing the inner mind, without apprehending anything. They are diligent, alert, and mindful, have eliminated covetousness and unhappiness with respect to the world, and practice observing the outer mind, without apprehending anything. They are diligent, alert, and mindful, have eliminated covetousness and unhappiness with respect to the world, and practice observing the inner and outer mind, without apprehending anything.

9.23 "They are diligent, alert, and mindful, have eliminated covetousness and unhappiness with respect to the world, and practice observing inner phenomena, without apprehending anything. They are diligent, alert, and mindful, have eliminated covetousness and unhappiness with respect to the world, and practice observing outer phenomena, without apprehending anything. They are diligent, alert, and mindful, have eliminated covetousness and unhappiness with respect to the world, and practice observing inner and outer phenomena, without apprehending anything.

"This indeed, Subhūti, is the Great Vehicle of bodhisattva great beings.

9.24 "Moreover, Subhūti, the Great Vehicle of bodhisattva great beings is also the four correct exertions. If you ask what these four are, in this regard, Subhūti, when bodhisattva great beings [F.184.a] practice the perfection of wisdom, without apprehending anything, they resolve, endeavor, strive, develop tenacity, and rightly aspire to cause negative and nonvirtuous phenomena that have not yet arisen to not arise. Without apprehending anything, they resolve, endeavor, strive, develop tenacity, and rightly aspire to renounce negative and nonvirtuous phenomena that have previously arisen. Without apprehending anything, they resolve, endeavor, strive, develop tenacity, and rightly aspire to cause virtuous phenomena that have not yet arisen to arise. Without apprehending anything, they resolve, endeavor, strive, develop tenacity, and rightly aspire that virtuous phenomena that have previously arisen might remain stable, be repeatedly cultivated, be undiminished, and be fully completed. This too, Subhūti, is the Great Vehicle of bodhisattva great beings.

9.25 “Moreover, Subhūti, the Great Vehicle of bodhisattva great beings is also the four supports for miraculous ability. If you ask what these four are, in this regard, Subhūti, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom, they cultivate the resolve that is a support for miraculous ability endowed with meditative stability and the formative force of exertion based on seclusion, based on detachment, based on cessation, and maturing in release. They cultivate the perseverance that is a support for miraculous ability endowed with meditative stability and the formative force of exertion based on seclusion, based on detachment, based on cessation, and maturing in release. They cultivate the [F.184.b] mind that is a support for miraculous ability endowed with meditative stability and the formative force of exertion based on seclusion, based on detachment, based on cessation, and maturing in release. And they cultivate the scrutiny<sup>493</sup> that is a support for miraculous ability endowed with meditative stability and the formative force of exertion based on seclusion, based on detachment, based on cessation, and maturing in release. This too, Subhūti, by way of not apprehending anything, is the Great Vehicle of bodhisattva great beings.

9.26 “Moreover, Subhūti, the Great Vehicle of bodhisattva great beings is also the five faculties. If you ask what these five are, they are the faculty of faith, the faculty of perseverance, the faculty of mindfulness, the faculty of meditative stability, and the faculty of wisdom. This too, Subhūti, by way of not apprehending anything, is the Great Vehicle of bodhisattva great beings.

9.27 “Moreover, Subhūti, the Great Vehicle of bodhisattva great beings is also the five powers. If you ask what these five are, they are the power of faith, the power of perseverance, the power of mindfulness, the power of meditative stability, and the power of wisdom. This too, Subhūti, by way of not apprehending anything, is the Great Vehicle of bodhisattva great beings.

9.28 “Moreover, Subhūti, the Great Vehicle of bodhisattva great beings is also the seven branches of enlightenment. If you ask what these seven are, they are the correct mindfulness branch of enlightenment, the correct analysis of phenomena<sup>494</sup> branch of enlightenment, the correct perseverance branch of enlightenment, the correct delight branch of enlightenment, the correct pliability branch of enlightenment, the correct meditative stability branch of enlightenment, and the correct equanimity branch of enlightenment. [F.185.a]

9.29 “If you ask what the correct mindfulness branch of enlightenment is, in this regard, Subhūti, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom, they cultivate, by way of not apprehending it, the correct mindfulness branch of enlightenment based on seclusion, based on detachment, based on cessation, and maturing in release. If you ask what the correct analysis of phenomena branch of enlightenment is, in this regard, Subhūti, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom, they cultivate, by way of not apprehending it, the correct analysis of phenomena branch of enlightenment based on seclusion, based on detachment, based on cessation, and maturing in release. If you ask what the correct perseverance branch of enlightenment is, in this regard, Subhūti, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom, they cultivate, by way of not apprehending it, the correct perseverance branch of enlightenment based on seclusion, based on detachment, based on cessation, and maturing in release. If you ask what the correct delight branch of enlightenment is, in this regard, Subhūti, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom, they cultivate, by way of not apprehending it, the correct delight branch of enlightenment based on seclusion, based on detachment, based on cessation, and maturing in release. If you ask what the correct pliability branch of enlightenment is, in this regard, Subhūti, when bodhisattva great beings [F.185.b] practice the perfection of wisdom, they cultivate, by way of not apprehending it, the correct pliability branch of enlightenment based on seclusion, based on detachment, based on cessation, and maturing in release. If you ask what the correct meditative stability branch of enlightenment is, in this regard, Subhūti, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom, they cultivate, by way of not apprehending it, the correct meditative stability branch of enlightenment based on seclusion, based on detachment, based on cessation, and maturing in release. If you ask what the correct equanimity branch of enlightenment is, in this regard, Subhūti, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom, they cultivate, by way of not apprehending it, the correct equanimity branch of enlightenment based on seclusion, based on detachment, based on cessation, and maturing in release. This too, Subhūti, is the Great Vehicle of bodhisattva great beings.

9.30 “Moreover, Subhūti, the Great Vehicle of bodhisattva great beings is also the noble eightfold path. If you ask what the noble eightfold path is, it is correct view, correct thought, correct speech, correct action, correct livelihood, correct effort, correct mindfulness, and correct meditative stability. If, among them, you ask what correct view is, in this regard, Subhūti, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom, they cultivate, by way of not apprehending it, correct view based on seclusion, [F.186.a] based on detachment, based on cessation, and maturing in release. If, among them, you ask what correct thought is, in this regard, Subhūti, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom, they cultivate, by way of not apprehending it, correct thought based on seclusion, based on detachment, based on cessation, and maturing in release. If you ask what correct speech is, in this regard, Subhūti, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom, they cultivate, by way of not apprehending it, correct speech based on seclusion, based on detachment, based on cessation, and maturing in release. If you ask what correct action is, in this regard, Subhūti, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom, they cultivate, by way of not apprehending it, correct action based on seclusion, based on detachment, based on cessation, and maturing in release. If you ask what correct livelihood is, in this regard, Subhūti, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom, they cultivate, by way of not apprehending it, correct livelihood based on seclusion, based on detachment, based on cessation, and maturing in release. If you ask what correct effort is, in this regard, Subhūti, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom, [F.186.b] they cultivate, by way of not apprehending it, correct effort based on seclusion, based on detachment, based on cessation, and maturing in release. If you ask what correct mindfulness is, in this regard, Subhūti, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom, they cultivate, by way of not apprehending it, correct mindfulness based on seclusion, based on detachment, based on cessation, and maturing in release. If you ask what correct meditative stability is, in this regard, Subhūti, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom, they cultivate, by way of not apprehending it, correct meditative stability based on seclusion, based on detachment, based on cessation, and maturing in release. This too, Subhūti, is the Great Vehicle of bodhisattva great beings.

9.31 “Moreover, Subhūti, the Great Vehicle of bodhisattva great beings is also the three meditative stabilities. If you ask what these three are, they are the meditative stability of emptiness, the meditative stability of signlessness, and the meditative stability of wishlessness. In this regard, if you ask what the meditative stability of emptiness is, that stability of mind when all phenomena are understood analytically<sup>495</sup> to be empty of their own defining characteristics is the emptiness gateway to liberation called the meditative stability of emptiness. In this regard, if you ask what the meditative stability of signlessness is, that stability of mind when all phenomena are understood analytically to be devoid of signs is the signlessness gateway to liberation called the meditative stability of signlessness. In this regard, if you ask what the meditative stability of wishlessness is, that stability of mind when not conditioning any karma because ‘all phenomena cannot be conditioned by karma’ [F.187.a] is the wishlessness gateway to liberation called the meditative stability of wishlessness.<sup>496</sup> They should be mindful of these three gateways to liberation, without becoming discouraged. This too, Subhūti, by way of not apprehending anything, is the Great Vehicle of bodhisattva great beings.

9.32 “Moreover, Subhūti, the Great Vehicle of bodhisattva great beings is also the eleven knowledges. If you ask what these eleven are, they are knowledge of suffering, knowledge of the origin, knowledge of the cessation, knowledge of the path, knowledge of the extinction, knowledge that contaminants will not arise again, knowledge of phenomena, knowledge of phenomena that is subsequently realized,<sup>497</sup> knowledge of the conventional, knowledge of mastery, and knowledge in accord with sound.

9.33 “In this regard, if you ask what knowledge of suffering is, it is the knowledge that suffering does not arise. In this regard, if you ask what knowledge of the origin is, it is the knowledge that the origin has been eliminated. In this regard, if you ask what knowledge of the cessation is, it is the knowledge that suffering has ceased. In this regard, if you ask what knowledge of the path is, it is the knowledge of the noble eightfold path. In this regard, if you ask what knowledge of the extinction is, it is the knowledge that desire, hatred, and delusion have been extinguished. In this regard, if you ask what knowledge of nonregeneration is, it is the knowledge that the continuum of suffering existence<sup>498</sup> will not be regenerated. If you ask what knowledge of phenomena is, it is the knowledge that fully understands that the five aggregates are illusory.

9.34 “If you ask what knowledge of phenomena that is subsequently realized is, it is the knowledge that the eyes are impermanent, the knowledge that the ears are impermanent, the knowledge that the nose is impermanent, the knowledge that the tongue is impermanent, the knowledge that the body is impermanent, and the knowledge that the mental faculty is impermanent;

the knowledge that sights are impermanent, the knowledge that sounds are impermanent, the knowledge that odors are impermanent, the knowledge that tastes are impermanent, the knowledge that tangibles are impermanent, and the knowledge that mental phenomena are [F.187.b] impermanent; the knowledge that the sensory element of the eyes is impermanent, the knowledge that the sensory element of sights is impermanent, and the knowledge that the sensory element of visual consciousness is impermanent; the knowledge that the sensory element of the ears is impermanent, the knowledge that the sensory element of sounds is impermanent, and the knowledge that the sensory element of auditory consciousness is impermanent; the knowledge that the sensory element of the nose is impermanent, the knowledge that the sensory element of odors is impermanent, and the knowledge that the sensory element of olfactory consciousness is impermanent; the knowledge that the sensory element of the tongue is impermanent, the knowledge that the sensory element of tastes is impermanent, and the knowledge that the sensory element of gustatory consciousness is impermanent; the knowledge that the sensory element of the body is impermanent, the knowledge that the sensory element of tangibles is impermanent, and the knowledge that the sensory element of tactile consciousness is impermanent; the knowledge that the sensory element of the mental faculty is impermanent, the knowledge that the sensory element of phenomena is impermanent, and the knowledge that the sensory element of mental consciousness is impermanent; and the knowledge that ignorance is impermanent, the knowledge that formative predispositions are impermanent, the knowledge that consciousness is impermanent, the knowledge that name and form are impermanent, the knowledge that the six sense fields are impermanent, and the knowledge that contact is impermanent; the knowledge that sensation is impermanent, the knowledge that craving is impermanent, the knowledge that grasping is impermanent, the knowledge that the rebirth process is impermanent, [F.188.a] the knowledge that birth is impermanent, and the knowledge that aging and death are impermanent.

9.35 “If you ask what knowledge of the conventional is, it is the knowledge, through the mind, of the minds of other beings and of other persons. If you ask what knowledge that is masterful is, it is that by which there is knowledge of the path and knowledge of mastery.<sup>499</sup> If you ask what knowledge of semantics is, it is the transcendental knowledge<sup>500</sup> of an all-aspect omniscient one that the tathāgatas have. This too, Subhūti, by way of not apprehending anything, is the Great Vehicle of bodhisattva great beings.

- 9.36 “Moreover, Subhūti, the Great Vehicle of bodhisattva great beings is also the three faculties. If you ask what these three are, they are the faculty of coming to understand what one has not yet understood, the faculty of fully understanding, and the faculty of knowing one has fully understood.<sup>501</sup>
- 9.37 “If you ask what the faculty of coming to understand what one has not yet understood is, the faculty of faith, the faculty of perseverance, the faculty of mindfulness, the faculty of meditative stability, and the faculty of wisdom of those trainees who are individuals without realization—which have not appeared<sup>502</sup>—are called the faculty of coming to understand what one has not yet understood.
- 9.38 “If you ask what the faculty of fully understanding is, the faculty of faith, the faculty of perseverance, the faculty of mindfulness, the faculty of meditative stability, and the faculty of wisdom of those trainees who are individuals who have comprehension are called the faculty of fully understanding.
- 9.39 “If you ask what the faculty of knowing one has fully understood is, the faculty of faith, the faculty of perseverance, the faculty of mindfulness, the faculty of [F.188.b] meditative stability, and the faculty of wisdom of those not in training who are arhats, pratyekabuddhas, bodhisattvas, or tathāgatas, Subhūti, are called the faculty of knowing one has fully understood. This too, Subhūti, by way of not apprehending anything, is the Great Vehicle of bodhisattva great beings.
- 9.40 “Moreover, Subhūti, the Great Vehicle of bodhisattva great beings is also the three meditative stabilities. If you ask what these three are, they are the meditative stability with an initial mental application and with a sustained mental application, the meditative stability without an initial mental application but with just a sustained mental application, and the meditative stability without an initial mental application and without a sustained mental application.
- 9.41 “In this regard, Subhūti, if you ask what the meditative stability with an initial mental application and with a sustained mental application is, bodhisattva great beings achieve and then maintain the first meditative concentration that is detached from sense objects, detached from negative and nonvirtuous attributes, has an initial mental application and a sustained mental application, and is endowed with the joy and the bliss that arise from detachment. This is the meditative stability with an initial mental application and with a sustained mental application.
- 9.42 “In this regard, if you ask what the meditative stability without an initial mental application but with just a sustained mental application is, between the first meditative concentration and the second meditative concentration is the meditative stability without an initial mental application but with just a sustained mental application.

9.43 “In this regard, if you ask what the meditative stability without an initial mental application and without a sustained mental application is, the second meditative concentration, the third meditative concentration, the fourth meditative concentration, the meditative absorption into the sphere of infinite space, the meditative absorption into the sphere of infinite consciousness, the meditative absorption into the sphere of nothing-at-all, the meditative absorption into the sphere of neither perception nor nonperception, and the meditative absorption into the cessation of perceptions and feelings are called the meditative stability without an initial mental application and without a sustained mental application. This too, Subhūti, by way of not apprehending anything, is the Great Vehicle [F.189.a] of bodhisattva great beings.

9.44 “Moreover, Subhūti, the Great Vehicle of bodhisattva great beings is also the ten mindfulnesses. If you ask what these ten are, they are the mindfulness of the Buddha, mindfulness of the Dharma, mindfulness of the Saṅgha, mindfulness of ethical discipline, mindfulness of giving away, mindfulness of the gods, mindfulness of disillusionment, mindfulness of the inhalation and exhalation of breath, mindfulness of death, and mindfulness of the body. This too, Subhūti, by way of not apprehending anything, is the Great Vehicle of bodhisattva great beings.

9.45 “Moreover, Subhūti, the Great Vehicle of bodhisattva great beings is also the four meditative concentrations, the four immeasurable attitudes, the four formless absorptions, the eight liberations, and the nine serial steps of meditative absorption.

9.46 “If, among them, you ask what the four meditative concentrations are, in this regard, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom, they achieve and maintain the first meditative concentration that is detached from sense objects, detached from negative and nonvirtuous attributes, has an initial mental application and a sustained mental application, and is endowed with the joy and the bliss that arise from detachment. Having pacified the initial mental application and the sustained mental application, with inner serene confidence, which is to say, a mind that has become single-pointed, they achieve and maintain the second meditative concentration endowed with the joy and bliss that arise from meditative stability. On account of having no attachment to the joy, dwelling with mindfulness and alertness in equanimity they experience the bliss with their bodies and achieve and maintain the third meditative concentration devoid of joy, about which [F.189.b] the ārya beings say, ‘They are mindful, abiding in bliss, and equanimous.’ On account of having earlier abandoned the bliss, abandoned suffering, and caused mental happiness and mental unhappiness to subside, with equanimity and mindfulness they achieve and maintain, by way of not apprehending anything, the utterly pure fourth meditative concentration without bliss and suffering. These are the four meditative concentrations.

9.47 “If, among them, you ask what the four immeasurable attitudes are, in this regard, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom, they permeate the world systems in the ten directions, within the whole infinity of the realm of phenomena and the very reaches of space, with a mind endowed with loving kindness that is vast, extensive, nondual, immeasurable, without enmity, free from harm, without rivalry, perfected, and well cultivated, remaining intent on and maintaining it. They permeate the world systems in the ten directions, within the whole infinity of the realm of phenomena and the very reaches of space, with a mind endowed with compassion that is vast, extensive, nondual, immeasurable, without enmity, free from harm, without rivalry, perfected, and well cultivated, remaining intent on and maintaining it. They permeate the world systems in the ten directions, within the whole infinity of the realm of phenomena and the very reaches of space, with a mind endowed with empathetic joy that is vast, extensive, nondual, immeasurable, without enmity, free from harm, without rivalry, perfected, and well cultivated, remaining intent on and maintaining it. They permeate the world systems in the ten directions, within the whole infinity of the realm of phenomena and the very reaches of space, [F.190.a] with a mind endowed with equanimity that is vast, extensive, nondual, immeasurable, without enmity, free from harm, without rivalry, perfected, and well cultivated, remaining intent on and maintaining it, by way of not apprehending anything. These are the four immeasurable attitudes.

9.48 “If, among them, you ask what the four formless absorptions are, in this regard, Subhūti, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom, having completely transcended the perception of physical forms in all respects so that perceptions of obstruction have subsided, they do not direct their attention to diverse perceptions and achieve and maintain the sphere of infinite space, thinking, ‘Space is infinite.’ Having completely transcended the sphere of infinite space in all respects, they achieve and maintain the sphere of infinite consciousness, thinking, ‘Consciousness is infinite.’ Having completely transcended the sphere of infinite consciousness in all respects, they achieve and maintain the sphere of nothing-at-all, thinking, ‘There is nothing at all.’ Having completely transcended the sphere of nothing-at-all in all respects, they achieve and maintain the sphere of neither perception nor nonperception. These are the four formless absorptions.

9.49 “If, among them, you ask what the eight liberations are, those with physical forms observe physical forms.<sup>503</sup> This is the first liberation. Those with the perception of no internal physical forms observe external physical forms. This is the second liberation. They are intent on pleasant states. This is the third liberation. Having completely transcended the perception of physical forms in all respects [F.190.b] so that perceptions of obstruction have subsided, those who do not direct their attention to diverse perceptions achieve and maintain the sphere of infinite space, thinking, ‘Space is infinite.’ Having completely transcended the sphere of infinite space in all respects, they achieve and maintain the sphere of infinite consciousness, thinking, ‘Consciousness is infinite.’ Having completely transcended the sphere of infinite consciousness in all respects, they achieve and maintain the sphere of nothing-at-all, thinking, ‘There is nothing at all.’ Having completely transcended the sphere of nothing-at-all in all respects, they achieve and maintain the sphere of neither perception nor nonperception. Having completely transcended the sphere of neither perception nor nonperception in all respects, they achieve and maintain the cessation of perceptions and feelings, by way of not apprehending anything. Those are the eight liberations.

9.50 “If, among them, you ask what the nine serial steps of meditative absorption are, in this regard, Subhūti, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom, they achieve and maintain the first meditative concentration that is detached from sense objects, detached from negative and nonvirtuous attributes, has an initial mental application and a sustained mental application, and is endowed with the joy and the bliss that arise from detachment. Having pacified the initial mental application and the sustained mental application, with inner serene confidence—which is to say, a mind that has become single-pointed—they achieve and maintain the second meditative concentration endowed with the joy and bliss that arise from meditative stability. On account of having no attachment to the joy, dwelling with mindfulness and alertness [F.191.a] in equanimity they experience the bliss with their bodies and achieve and maintain the third meditative concentration devoid of joy about which the ārya beings say, ‘They are mindful, abiding in bliss, and equanimous.’ On account of having earlier abandoned the bliss, abandoned suffering, and caused mental happiness and mental unhappiness to subside, with equanimity and mindfulness they achieve and maintain the utterly pure fourth meditative concentration without bliss and suffering. Having completely transcended the perception of physical forms in all respects so that perceptions of obstruction have subsided, they do not direct their attention to diverse perceptions and achieve and maintain the sphere of infinite space, thinking, 'Space is infinite.' Having completely transcended the sphere of infinite space in all respects, they achieve and maintain the sphere of infinite consciousness, thinking, 'Consciousness is infinite.' Having completely transcended the sphere of infinite consciousness in all respects, they achieve and maintain the sphere of nothing-at-all, thinking, 'There is nothing at all.' Having completely transcended the sphere of nothing-at-all in all respects, they achieve and maintain the sphere of neither perception nor nonperception. Having completely transcended the sphere of neither perception nor nonperception in all respects, they achieve and maintain the cessation of perceptions and feelings, by way of not apprehending anything. Those are the nine serial steps of meditative absorption.

9.51 "Moreover, Subhūti, the Great Vehicle of bodhisattva great beings is also the ten powers of the tathāgatas. If you ask what these ten are, in this regard, Subhūti, [F.191.b] when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom, they have definitive knowledge that phenomena that are possible are indeed possible, and definitive knowledge that phenomena that are impossible are indeed impossible.

9.52 "They have definitive knowledge of the maturation, the aspect of location, and the aspect of cause of past, future, and present actions and the undertakings of action.<sup>504</sup>

9.53 "They have definitive knowledge that a world has a diversity of constituents, that a world has multiple constituents.<sup>505</sup>

9.54 "They have definitive knowledge of the diversity of inclinations<sup>506</sup> and the multiplicity of inclinations that other beings, other persons, have.

9.55 "They have definitive knowledge of the acumen<sup>507</sup> of other beings, other persons, which is to be known as superior or inferior.

9.56 "They have definitive knowledge of the paths, wherever they lead.<sup>508</sup>

9.57 "They have definitive knowledge of the faculties, powers, branches of enlightenment, meditative concentrations, liberations, meditative stabilities, and formless absorptions, and defiled and purified states.

9.58 "They recollect multiple past abodes. Recollecting one lifetime, they recollect a hundred lifetimes, a thousand lifetimes, a hundred thousand lifetimes, ten million<sup>509</sup> lifetimes, a hundred ten million lifetimes, a thousand ten million lifetimes, a hundred thousand ten million lifetimes, and a hundred thousand ten million billion<sup>510</sup> lifetimes. Recollecting one eon, they recollect a hundred eons, a thousand eons, a hundred thousand eons, up to a hundred thousand ten million billion eons. They recollect multiple past abodes: 'I was in [F.192.a] such-and-such a place, named so-and-so, in such-and-such a lineage, with such-and-such a birth status, following such-and-such a diet, with an allotted lifespan of such-and-such a duration, living for such-and-such a length of time. Thus, having died there I was born in such-and-such places, up to and having died there then I took birth here,' along with the conditions, the bare ground on which the corpses were laid, and the reasons.

9.59 “They know through their refined divine eye of clairvoyance surpassing that of humans those beings who are dying and those who are reborn; they know the extent to which they proceed in accord with their actions—those who are beautiful, those who are ugly, those who are excellent, those who are vile, those who dwell in blissful realms, and those who dwell in the lower realms. They know: ‘These beings have misconduct of body, these have misconduct of speech, these have misconduct of mind, these deprecate sublime beings, and these have wrong views, and, because of those causes and those conditions, when they have died they will be reborn in inferior realms, falling into the lower abodes, as denizens of the hells. These beings have noble conduct of body, these have noble conduct of speech, these have noble conduct of mind, these do not deprecate sublime beings, and these have correct views, and, because of those causes and those conditions, when they have died they will reborn among the gods of the blissful and exalted realms.’

9.60 “Through their own extrasensory powers they have actualized, achieved, and dwell in the liberation of mind and the liberation of wisdom in the state that is free of contaminants because all contaminants have ceased. They have definitive knowledge that, ‘My rebirths have come to an end. I have lived the holy life.<sup>511</sup> I have done what needed to be done. [F.192.b] I will experience no other rebirths apart from this one.’

9.61 “This too, Subhūti, by way of not apprehending anything, is the Great Vehicle of bodhisattva great beings.

9.62 “Moreover, Subhūti, the Great Vehicle of bodhisattva great beings is also the four fearlessnesses. If you ask what these four are, when I claim to have attained perfectly complete buddhahood, I observe no reason for any virtuous ascetic, brahmin, god, demon, Brahmā, or anyone else here in the world to argue in accordance with the Dharma that these are not manifestly enlightened qualities, and, because I do not see any reason, I dwell in a feeling of security about that, without trepidation, with fearlessness. I claim my exalted place as the great leader. I rightly roar the lion’s roar in the midst of the assembly. I turn the wheel of Brahmā<sup>512</sup> that no one in the world—no virtuous ascetic, brahmin, god, demon, Brahmā, or anyone else—can turn in accordance with the Dharma.

- 9.63 “When I claim that I am one whose contaminants have ceased, I observe no reason for any virtuous ascetic, brahmin, god, demon, Brahmā, or anyone else here in the world to argue with me in accordance with the Dharma that those contaminants have not ceased, and, because I do not see any reason, I dwell in a feeling of security about that, without trepidation, with fearlessness. I claim my exalted place as the great leader. I rightly roar the lion’s roar in the midst of the assembly. I turn the wheel of Brahmā that no one [F.193.a] in the world—no virtuous ascetic, brahmin, god, demon, Brahmā, or anyone else—can turn in accordance with the Dharma.
- 9.64 “For any of those phenomena I have explained to be obstacles, it is impossible that, having resorted to them, such phenomena as those would not become obstacles. Therefore, I observe no reason for any virtuous ascetic, brahmin, god, demon, Brahmā, or anyone else here in the world to argue about that with me in accordance with the Dharma, and, because I do not see any reason, I dwell in a feeling of security about that, without trepidation, with fearlessness. I claim my exalted place as the great leader. I rightly roar the lion’s roar in the midst of the assembly. I turn the wheel of Brahmā that no one in the world—no virtuous ascetic, brahmin, god, demon, Brahmā, or anyone else—can turn in accordance with the Dharma.
- 9.65 “For those paths of the noble ones that I have taught, conducive to emancipation and realization and the genuine cessation of suffering, it is impossible to say that it will not be the case that suffering will genuinely cease for those who have practiced them. Therefore, I observe no reason for any virtuous ascetic, brahmin, god, demon, Brahmā, or anyone else here in the world to argue about that with me in accordance with the Dharma, and, because I do not see any reason, I dwell in a feeling of security about that, without trepidation, with fearlessness. I claim my exalted place as the great leader. I rightly roar the lion’s roar in the midst of the assembly. I turn the wheel of Brahmā [F.193.b] that no one in the world—no virtuous ascetic, brahmin, god, demon, Brahmā, or anyone else—can turn in accordance with the Dharma.
- 9.66 “This too, Subhūti, by way of not apprehending anything, is the Great Vehicle of bodhisattva great beings.
- 9.67 “Moreover, Subhūti, the Great Vehicle of bodhisattva great beings is also the four kinds of exact knowledge. If you ask what these four are, they are the exact knowledge of meanings, the exact knowledge of dharmas,<sup>513</sup> the exact knowledge of lexical explanations, and the exact knowledge of inspired eloquence. This too, Subhūti, by way of not apprehending anything, is the Great Vehicle of bodhisattva great beings.

9.68 “Moreover, Subhūti, the Great Vehicle of bodhisattva great beings is the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas. If you ask what these eighteen are, from the night when the tathāgatas fully awaken to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment until when—having taught the path whereby living creatures, including gods, demons, Brahmās, virtuous ascetics, and brahmins, along with gods, humans, and asuras, put an end to suffering—they attain final nirvāṇa in the expanse of nirvāṇa with no residual aggregates, the tathāgatas are without clumsiness; they are not noisy; their memory does not degenerate; they are without differentiating perceptions; they are without uncomposed minds; they are without the indifference that lacks discernment; they do not degenerate in their resolution; they do not degenerate in their perseverance; [F.194.a] they do not degenerate in their mindfulness; they do not degenerate in their meditative stability; they do not degenerate in their wisdom; they do not degenerate in their liberation nor do they degenerate in their knowledge and seeing of liberation;<sup>514</sup> all the activities of their bodies are preceded by transcendental knowledge and informed by transcendental knowledge;<sup>515</sup> all the activities of their speech are preceded by transcendental knowledge and informed by transcendental knowledge; all the activities of their minds are preceded by transcendental knowledge and informed by transcendental knowledge; their unobstructed and unimpeded transcendental knowledge and seeing engages with the past; their unobstructed and unimpeded transcendental knowledge and seeing engages with the future; and their unobstructed and unimpeded transcendental knowledge and seeing engages with the present.

9.69 “This too, Subhūti, by way of not apprehending anything, is the Great Vehicle of bodhisattva great beings.

9.70 “Moreover, Subhūti, the Great Vehicle of bodhisattva great beings is the dhāraṇī gateways—that is to say, the sameness of letters,<sup>516</sup> the sameness of explanations, the letters as gateways, and the entrance through letters. Among them, if you ask what the letters as gateways and entrance through letters are, the a is the gateway to all phenomena, because they have not arisen (anutpannatvād). The ra is the gateway to all phenomena, because they are without dirt (rajas). The pa is the gateway to all phenomena, because it indicates the ultimate (paramārtha). The tsa is the gateway to all phenomena, because death (cyavana) and rebirth are not apprehended so all phenomena do not die and are not reborn. The na is the gateway to all phenomena, because they are separated from names (nāman) and an intrinsic nature of names is not acquired or lost. The la is the gateway to all phenomena, because they are supramundane (lokottara) and [F.194.b] the causes and conditions giving rise to the creeping vine (latā) of craving are utterly destroyed. The da is the gateway to all phenomena, because being disciplined (dānta) and disciplined abiding (damatha) are determined.<sup>517</sup> The ba is the gateway to all phenomena, because they are free from bondage (bandhana). The ḍa is the gateway to all phenomena, because they are free from agitation (ḍamara). The ṣa<sup>518</sup> is the gateway to all phenomena, because there is no attachment (saṅga) and no bondage because attachment cannot be apprehended. The va<sup>519</sup> is the gateway to all phenomena, because the pathway and sounds of speech (vākpatha) have been interrupted. The ta is the gateway to all phenomena, because they do not waver from the real nature (tathatā). The ya is the gateway to all phenomena, because they cannot be apprehended definitively (yathāvat). The sta<sup>520</sup> is the gateway to all phenomena, because boasting (stambha) is not apprehended. The ka is the gateway to all phenomena, because agents (kāraka) are not apprehended. The sa is the gateway to all phenomena, because they have not transgressed sameness (samatā) because sameness is not apprehended. The ma is the gateway to all phenomena, because the notion of 'mine' (mamakāra) is not apprehended. The ga is the gateway to all phenomena, because motion (gamana) is not apprehended. The [s]tha is the gateway to all phenomena, because abodes ([s]thāna) are not apprehended. The dza is the gateway to all phenomena, because birth (jāti) is not apprehended. The shva<sup>521</sup> is the gateway to all phenomena, because the life breath (śvāsa) is not apprehended. The dha is the gateway to all phenomena, because the realm of phenomena (dharma) is not apprehended. The sha is the gateway to all phenomena, because calm abiding (śamatha) is not apprehended. The kha is the gateway to all phenomena, because phenomena are not apprehended owing to the sameness of space (kha). The kṣa is the gateway to all phenomena, because extinction (kṣaya) is not apprehended. The sta is the gateway to all phenomena, [F.195.a] because eulogies (stotra) are not apprehended.<sup>522</sup> The dznya is the gateway to all phenomena, because transcendental knowledge (jñāna) is not apprehended. The rta is the gateway to all phenomena, because afflictive mental states (artī) are not apprehended.<sup>523</sup> The ha<sup>524</sup> is the gateway to all phenomena, because causes (hetu) are not apprehended. The bha is the gateway to all phenomena, because there is no fear (bhaya).<sup>525</sup> The cha is the gateway to all phenomena, because a complexion (chavi) is not apprehended. The sma<sup>526</sup> is the gateway to all phenomena, because memory (smaraṇa) is not apprehended. The hva is the gateway to all phenomena, because appellations (āhvāna) are not apprehended. The tsa is the gateway to all phenomena, because resolution (utsāha) is not apprehended. The gha is the gateway to all phenomena, because density (ghana) is not apprehended. The tha<sup>527</sup> is the gateway to all phenomena, because fabrications (viñhapaṇa) are not apprehended. The ṇa is the gateway to all phenomena, because, since there is no conflict (raṇa), nothing goes or comes, stands or sits, or rests, or thinks conceptually. The pha is the gateway to all phenomena, because fruits (phala) are not apprehended. The ska is the gateway to all phenomena, because the aggregates (skandha) are not apprehended. The ysa is the gateway to all phenomena, because unhappiness (yskara)<sup>528</sup> is not apprehended. The tsa is the gateway to all phenomena, because conduct (carāṇa) is not apprehended. The ḍa is the gateway to all phenomena, because suffering (**ḍadakara*)<sup>529</sup> is not apprehended. The ḍha is the gateway to all phenomena, because, since a covering (ḍhakana)<sup>530</sup> is not apprehended, ultimately there is neither death and transmigration nor rebirth.

9.71 “There is no conventional usage of letters above these. If you ask why, it is because there exist no sorts of names at all by which anything could be conventionally designated, by which anything could be expressed, by which anything could be taught, by which anything could be written, by which anything could be seen, [F.195.b] or by which anything could be recited aloud.

9.72 “Subhūti, all phenomena should be understood to resemble space. Subhūti, this is the entrance through the dhāraṇī gateways, the entrance through the explanation of the letters, beginning with a. Subhūti, if any bodhisattva great beings comprehend this expertise with respect to the letters, beginning with a, they will not be attached to any sounds, they will accomplish all as the reality of phenomena, and they will acquire skill in the cognition of sounds.

9.73 “Subhūti, you should know there are twenty advantages for those bodhisattva great beings who have heard this seal of entrance through the letters a and so on, and these words that are the seal of entrance through the letters a and so on, and who, having heard them, also take them up, hold them in mind, recite them aloud, and master and demonstrate them to others with the proper understanding. If you ask what these twenty are, they are as follows:<sup>531</sup>

9.74 “They will be mindful, intelligent, understanding, clever, joyful, modest, and inspired. They will acquire this dhāraṇī gateway without feeling afflicted and will not be hesitant, will not be attached upon hearing the sweet words of others, and they will not be angered upon hearing harsh words, so that they will dwell in the correct way, neither high nor low. They will be skilled in words. They will be skilled with respect to the aggregates. They will be skilled with respect to the sensory elements. They will be skilled with respect to the sense fields. They will be skilled with respect to the truths. They will be skilled with respect to dependent origination, which is to say, skilled with respect to causes and skilled with respect to conditions. They will be skilled with respect to the reality of phenomena. They will be skilled in knowledge [F.196.a] of those of high and low acumen. They will be skilled in knowledge of death and rebirth. They will be skilled in knowledge of clairaudience. They will be skilled in knowledge of others' minds. They will be skilled in knowledge of recollecting past lives. They will be skilled in knowledge of miraculous abilities. They will be skilled in knowledge of the extinction of contaminants. They will be skilled in knowledge of that which is possible and that which is impossible. They will be skilled in going out and skilled in returning. They will be skilled in conduct. They will also acquire skill in matters of shame and conscience.

9.75        “This too, Subhūti, this entrance through the dhāraṇī gateways—the letters a and so on—by way of not apprehending anything, is the Great Vehicle of bodhisattva great beings.”

9.76        This completes the ninth chapter from The Perfection of Wisdom in One Hundred Thousand Lines. [B14]

10.

CHAPTER 10

- 10.1 “Subhūti, you have asked, ‘How<sup>532</sup> have bodhisattva great beings entered perfectly into the Great Vehicle?’ In this regard, Subhūti, bodhisattva great beings practice the six perfections and progress from level to level. Subhūti, if you ask how bodhisattva great beings practice the six perfections and progress from level to level, it is like this: no phenomenon changes place, so no phenomenon at all goes or comes, changes place, or draws near. However, while they do not give rise to conceits [F.196.b] or think about the level of any phenomena, it is not that they do not refine the levels, it is that they do not observe those levels.
- 10.2 “If you ask what the bodhisattva great beings’ refinement of a level is, Subhūti, bodhisattva great beings who dwell on the first level should make ten refinements to that level. If you ask what these ten are, they are the refinement of sincere resolve, and so on,<sup>533</sup> without apprehending them; the refinement of beneficial states by not apprehending signs, and the refinement of the sameness of attitude to all beings by not apprehending beings; the refinement of giving things away by not apprehending a gift, a giver, or a recipient; the refinement of the service to spiritual mentors by the lack of conceit about it; the refinement of the search for the Dharma by not apprehending any Dharma; the refinement of going forth to homelessness again and again by not apprehending a home; the refinement of the wish for the body of a buddha by not apprehending the major and minor marks; the refinement of the exposition of the Dharma by not apprehending divisions of Dharma; the refinement of the elimination of pride and arrogance by not apprehending the true existence of phenomena;<sup>534</sup> and the refinement of words of truth by not apprehending words. Subhūti, these are the ten refinements that should be made by bodhisattva great beings dwelling on the first level.

- 10.3       “Moreover, Subhūti, bodhisattva great beings who dwell on the second level should pay repeated attention to eight attributes and apply themselves to them earnestly. If you ask what these eight are, they are purity of ethical discipline, [F.197.a] gratitude and thankfulness, being grounded in the power of tolerance, experiencing delight and joy, not forsaking any being, actualizing great compassion, serving spiritual teachers and venerating them with faith, and striving and seeking for the perfections. Subhūti, these are the eight attributes to which bodhisattva great beings dwelling on the second level should pay attention and earnestly apply themselves.
- 10.4       “Moreover, Subhūti, bodhisattva great beings who dwell on the third level should maintain five attributes. If you ask what these five are, they should maintain an insatiable thirst for erudition but without a fixation on letters; the elucidation of the gift of the Dharma without expectations, but without giving rise to conceit about it; the generation and dedication of the roots of virtue for the refinement of a buddhafield but without giving rise to conceit about it; indefatigability in the face of the immeasurable cycles of rebirth but without giving rise to conceit about it; and a sense of shame and conscience but without giving rise to conceit about them. Subhūti, these are the five attributes that bodhisattva great beings dwelling on the third level should maintain.
- 10.5       “Moreover, Subhūti, bodhisattva great beings who dwell on the fourth level should adopt and maintain ten attributes, without forsaking them. If you ask what these ten are, they are dwelling in a forest,<sup>535</sup> a paucity of desires, contentment, not forsaking the restrictions associated with asceticism, not forsaking the training, spurning the desirable attributes of the senses, developing a mindset [F.197.b] associated with nirvāṇa, forsaking all property,<sup>536</sup> undauntedness, and disregard for all entities. Subhūti, these are the ten attributes that bodhisattva great beings dwelling on the fourth level should not forsake, but that they should adopt and maintain.
- 10.6       “Moreover, Subhūti, bodhisattva great beings dwelling on the fifth level should avoid six things. If you ask what these six are, they should avoid intimacy with householders, intimacy with nuns, being envious of families, places of social intercourse, bearing malice, self-praise, and disparagement of others. These are the six things that should be avoided. There are eighteen further things they should avoid.<sup>537</sup> They should avoid the paths of the ten nonvirtuous actions, pride in being superior, haughtiness,<sup>538</sup> distorted views, doubt, and not rejecting patience<sup>539</sup> for desire, hatred, and delusion. These are the eighteen further things that bodhisattva great beings dwelling on the fifth level should avoid.

- 10.7       “Moreover, Subhūti, bodhisattva great beings dwelling on the sixth level should perfect six things, namely, the six perfections. They should, moreover, avoid six things. If you ask what these six are, they should avoid the mindset of the śrāvakas; they should avoid the mindset of the pratyekabuddhas; they should avoid a mind that has craving;<sup>540</sup> they should not feel discouraged when they see beggars—that is to say, they should avoid a mind that is discouraged; they should avoid feeling unhappy on account of having renounced all material things—that is to say, [F.198.a] they should avoid unhappiness; and they should not feel disturbed when they see beggars—that is to say, they should avoid a mind that is disturbed. Subhūti, these are the six things that bodhisattva great beings dwelling on the sixth level should avoid.
- 10.8       “Moreover, Subhūti, bodhisattva great beings dwelling on the seventh level should not do twenty things. If you ask what these twenty are, they should not grasp at a self, should not grasp at a being, should not grasp at an individual, and should not grasp at a person, they should not grasp at nihilism, and should not grasp at eternalism; they should not perceive signs, hold views about causes, be attached to name and form, be attached to the aggregates, be attached to the sensory elements, be attached to the sense fields, be attached to the three realms, be fixated on the three realms, rely on the three realms, or have the three realms as a foundation; and they should not be attached to the view of relying on the Buddha, be attached to the view of relying on the Dharma, be attached to the view of relying on the Saṅgha, be attached to the view of relying on ethical discipline, be discouraged by the fact that all phenomena are empty, or contradict emptiness. Subhūti, these are the twenty things that bodhisattva great beings dwelling on the seventh level should not do.
- 10.9       “Therefore, there are also twenty things that they should perfect. If you ask what these twenty are, they are the completion of emptiness; the actualizing of signlessness; the understanding of wishlessness; the purity of the three spheres; compassion and pity for all beings; not feeling contempt [F.198.b] for those beings; the view of the sameness of all phenomena; the penetrating understanding of the principle of reality<sup>541</sup> without giving rise to conceit because of that; tolerance for nonarising; knowledge of nonarising; the teaching about the single principle of all phenomena; the perfect elimination of ideation; the reversal of views; the reversal of afflictive mental states; the level of stilling and higher insight; a disciplined mind; a peaceful mind; unimpeded transcendental knowledge;<sup>542</sup> understanding of the appropriate circumstances for loving kindness; going to any buddhafiield at - will; and the displaying of their identities to all.<sup>543</sup> Subhūti, these are the twenty things that bodhisattva great beings dwelling on the seventh level should perfect.

- 10.10 “Moreover, Subhūti, bodhisattva great beings who dwell on the eighth level should perfect four attributes. If you ask what these four are, they are comprehending the minds of all beings, playing with the extrasensory powers, seeing buddhafiels and actualizing these buddhafiels just as they have seen them, and venerating the buddhas along with definitive contemplation of the buddha bodies as they really are. Subhūti, these are the four attributes that bodhisattva great beings dwelling on the eighth level should perfect.
- 10.11 “Moreover, Subhūti, bodhisattva great beings dwelling on the eighth level should perfect four other attributes. If you ask what these four are, they are the knowledge of those of higher and lower acumen, refinement of a buddhafiels, continuous absorption in illusion-like meditative stability, and intentionally taking rebirth in order to assume a body commensurate with the roots of virtue of beings. Subhūti, [F.199.a] these are the four other attributes that bodhisattva great beings dwelling on the eighth level should perfect.
- 10.12 “Moreover, Subhūti, bodhisattva great beings dwelling on the ninth level should perfect twelve attributes. If you ask what these twelve are, they are the acquisition of infinite aspirations and excellently accomplishing whatever aspirations they have; knowledge of the languages of the gods, nāgas, yakṣas, gandharvas, asuras, garuḍas, kinnaras, and mahoragas; knowledge of expositions based on perfect inspired speech; excellence of the entry into the mother’s womb; excellence of family; excellence of class; excellence of clan; excellence of entourage; excellence of life; excellence of departure from home; excellence of the ornaments of the tree of enlightenment; and excellence of the completion of all good qualities. Subhūti, these are the twelve attributes that bodhisattva great beings dwelling on the ninth level should perfect.
- 10.13 “Moreover, Subhūti, bodhisattva great beings who dwell on the tenth level are said to be just tathāgatas.”
- 10.14 The Blessed One having said this, the venerable Subhūti then asked him, “Blessed Lord, for bodhisattva great beings who dwell on the first level, what is the refinement of sincere resolve and so on?”
- 10.15 “Subhūti,” replied the Blessed One, “bodhisattva great beings correctly gather many roots of virtue [F.199.b] by developing the intention connected with all-aspect omniscience. This is the refinement of the sincere resolve of bodhisattva great beings.

- 10.16 “If, among them, you ask what, for bodhisattva great beings, is the refinement of beneficial states, it is the bodhisattva great beings’ search for, and achievement of, the knowledge of the Great Vehicle for the sake of all beings. For bodhisattva great beings, this is the refinement of beneficial states.
- 10.17 “If, among them, you ask what, for bodhisattva great beings, is the refinement of the sameness of attitude with regard to all beings, it is the actualization of the four immeasurable attitudes—loving kindness, compassion, empathetic joy, and equanimity— by developing the intention connected with all-aspect omniscience. For bodhisattva great beings, this is the refinement of the sameness of attitude with regard to all beings.
- 10.18 “If, among them, you ask what, for bodhisattva great beings, is the refinement of giving things away, it is the undertaking of acts of generosity for all beings without discrimination. For bodhisattva great beings, this is the refinement of giving things away.
- 10.19 “If, among them, you ask what, for bodhisattva great beings, is the refinement of the service to spiritual mentors, it is serving, respecting, honoring, and worshiping those spiritual mentors of bodhisattva great beings who encourage, establish, and secure them in all-aspect omniscience. For bodhisattva great beings, this is the refinement of the service to spiritual mentors.
- 10.20 “If, among them, you ask what, for bodhisattva great beings, is the refinement of the search for the Dharma, it is that by developing the intention connected with all-aspect omniscience, they search for the Dharma and do not fall to the level of the śrāvakas or the level of the pratyekabuddhas. For bodhisattva great beings, this is the refinement of the search for [F.200.a] the Dharma.
- 10.21 “If, among them, you ask what, for bodhisattva great beings, is the refinement of going forth to homelessness again and again, it is that throughout all their lives they avoid social intercourse, go forth to homelessness in the teaching of the tathāgatas, and indeed there is nothing at all that impedes them. For bodhisattva great beings, this is the refinement of going forth to homelessness again and again.
- 10.22 “If, among them, you ask what, for bodhisattva great beings, is the refinement of the wish for the body of a buddha, it is that, having seen the body of a buddha, they will never be separated from attentiveness to the buddhas until they attain all-aspect omniscience. For bodhisattva great beings, this is the refinement of the wish for the body of a buddha.
- 10.23 “If, among them, you ask what, for bodhisattva great beings, is the refinement of the exposition of the Dharma, it is that whether the tathāgatas are present or when they have passed into nirvāṇa, bodhisattva great beings teach beings the Dharma that is virtuous in the beginning, virtuous in the middle, and virtuous at the end, excellent in wording and excellent in meaning, distinct, complete, pure, refined, and about a holy life. That is to say, they correctly teach the discourses, the sayings in prose and verse, the prophetic declarations, the verses, the statements made for a purpose, the introductions, the accounts, the tales of past lives, the most extensive teachings, the marvelous events, the narratives, and the established instructions. For bodhisattva great beings, this is the refinement of the exposition of the Dharma.

10.24 “If, among them, you ask what, for bodhisattva great beings, is the refinement of the elimination of pride [F.200.b] and arrogance, it is that, on account of their elimination of pride and arrogance, they are never born in a lower-status family. For bodhisattva great beings, this is the refinement of the elimination of pride and arrogance.<sup>544</sup>

10.25 “If, among them, you ask what, for bodhisattva great beings, is the refinement of words of truth, it is that they do as they say. For bodhisattva great beings, this is the refinement of words of truth.

10.26 “Subhūti, these are the ten refinements of bodhisattva great beings who dwell on the first level.

10.27 “If, among them, you ask what, for bodhisattva great beings, is the purity of ethical discipline, it is not paying attention to the mindsets of the śrāvakas or pratyekabuddhas, and, besides that, not paying attention to disciplines that would lead to immorality and impede the way to enlightenment. For bodhisattva great beings, this is the purity of ethical discipline.

10.28 “If, among them, you ask what, for bodhisattva great beings, is gratitude and thankfulness, it is that, when bodhisattva great beings practice the conduct of a bodhisattva, until saṃsāra has come to an end, they never squander any benefit done for them, however small, let alone a major one. For bodhisattva great beings, this is gratitude and thankfulness.

10.29 “If, among them, you ask what, for bodhisattva great beings, is being grounded in the power of tolerance, it is the absence of malice and inimical thoughts directed toward any being. For bodhisattva great beings, this is being grounded in the power of tolerance.

10.30 “If, among them, you ask what, for bodhisattva great beings, is the experience of delight and joy, it is that they bring all beings [F.201.a] to maturation in the three vehicles. For bodhisattva great beings, this is the experience of delight and joy.

10.31 “If, among them, you ask what, for bodhisattva great beings, is not forsaking any being, it is providing sanctuary to all beings. For bodhisattva great beings, this is not forsaking any being.

- 10.32 “If, among them, you ask what, for bodhisattva great beings, is the actualizing of great compassion, it is that, when bodhisattva great beings practice the conduct of a bodhisattva, they think, ‘For the sake of each being I will remain among the denizens of the hells for eons numbering as many as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā, and until all beings are established in the transcendental knowledge of the buddhas, I will experience in these domains being cut, pierced, beaten, roasted, burned, and so on,’ all the while with delight and indefatigability for the sake of all beings. For bodhisattva great beings, this is the actualizing of great compassion.
- 10.33 “If, among them, you ask what, for bodhisattva great beings, is serving spiritual teachers and venerating them with faith, it is perceiving their spiritual teachers as buddhas. For bodhisattva great beings, this is serving spiritual teachers and venerating them with faith.
- 10.34 “If, among them, you ask what, for bodhisattva great beings, is striving and seeking for the perfections, it is that, in order to bring all beings to maturation, without doing anything else they search for the perfections, with no other activity. For bodhisattva great beings, this is striving and seeking for the perfections.<sup>545</sup>
- 10.35 “If, among them, [F201.b] you ask what, for bodhisattva great beings, is the insatiable thirst for erudition, it is the insatiability of thinking, ‘I will retain in mind all that the blessed lord buddhas have taught in this world system and in the world systems of all the ten directions.’ For bodhisattva great beings, this is the insatiable thirst for erudition.
- 10.36 “If, among them, you ask what, for bodhisattva great beings, is the elucidation of the gift of the Dharma without expectations, it is that when bodhisattva great beings teach the Dharma, they do not hope even in the slightest for enlightenment through that gift of the Dharma. For bodhisattva great beings, this is the elucidation of the gift of the Dharma without expectations.
- 10.37 “If, among them, you ask what, for bodhisattva great beings, is the generation and dedication of the roots of virtue for the refinement of a buddhfield, it is the dedication, when purifying the roots of virtue for a buddhfield, of those roots of virtue with which they purify the fields of their own and others’ minds. For bodhisattva great beings, this is the generation and dedication of the roots of virtue for the refinement of a buddhfield.
- 10.38 “If, among them, you ask what, for bodhisattva great beings, is indefatigability in the face of the immeasurable cycles of rebirth, it is that they never tire until they perfect all-aspect omniscience with the support of those roots of virtue that are the roots of virtue that, when they are relied on,

- bring beings to maturation and refine a buddhafiield. For bodhisattva great beings, this is indefatigability in the face of the immeasurable cycles of rebirth.
- 10.39 “If, among them, you ask what, [F.202.a] for bodhisattva great beings, is a sense of conscience and shame, it is spurning the mindsets of the śrāvakas and pratyekabuddhas. For bodhisattva great beings, this is a sense of conscience and shame.<sup>546</sup>
- 10.40 “If, among them, you ask what, for bodhisattva great beings, is the refusal to give up dwelling in a forest, it is going beyond the levels of the śrāvakas and the pratyekabuddhas. For bodhisattva great beings, this is the refusal to give up dwelling in a forest.
- 10.41 “If, among them, you ask what, for bodhisattva great beings, is the paucity of desires, it is that bodhisattva great beings do not have the desire even for enlightenment. For bodhisattva great beings, this is the paucity of desires.
- 10.42 “If, among them, you ask what, for bodhisattva great beings, is contentment, it is attaining all-aspect omniscience but without giving rise to conceit about it. For bodhisattva great beings, this is contentment.
- 10.43 “If, among them, you ask what, for bodhisattva great beings, is not forsaking the restrictions associated with asceticism, it is tolerance for placing realization on the profound phenomena. For bodhisattva great beings, this is not forsaking the restrictions associated with asceticism.
- 10.44 “If, among them, you ask what, for bodhisattva great beings, is not forsaking the training, it is being unwavering in the training. For bodhisattva great beings, this is not forsaking the training.
- 10.45 “If, among them, you ask what, for bodhisattva great beings, is spurning the desirable attributes of the senses, it is not setting their minds on the objects of the senses. For bodhisattva great beings, this is spurning the desirable attributes of the senses.
- 10.46 “If, among them, [F.202.b] you ask what, for bodhisattva great beings, is developing a mindset associated with nirvāṇa, it is not engaging in the conditioning of any phenomena.<sup>547</sup> For bodhisattva great beings, this is developing a mindset associated with nirvāṇa.
- 10.47 “If, among them, you ask what, for bodhisattva great beings, is the forsaking of all property, it is not grasping any external or internal phenomena. For bodhisattva great beings, this is the forsaking of all property.
- 10.48 “If, among them, you ask what, for bodhisattva great beings, is undauntedness, it is that their minds do not dwell on states of consciousness. For bodhisattva great beings, this is undauntedness.

- 10.49 “If, among them, you ask what, for bodhisattva great beings, is disregard for all entities, it is that they do not pay attention to any entities. For bodhisattva great beings, this is disregard for all entities.<sup>548</sup>
- 10.50 “If, among them, you ask what, for bodhisattva great beings, is the avoidance of intimacy with householders, it is that they proceed from buddhafiield to buddhafiield, take birth miraculously, have shaved heads, and wear saffron robes. For bodhisattva great beings, this is the avoidance of intimacy with householders.
- 10.51 “If, among them, you ask what, for bodhisattva great beings, is the avoidance of intimacy with nuns, it is that they do not stay with a nun, even for the duration of a finger snap, and they do not have thoughts that thirst for them on that account. For bodhisattva great beings, this is the avoidance of intimacy with nuns.
- 10.52 “If, among them, [F.203.a] you ask what, for bodhisattva great beings, is the avoidance of being envious of families, in this regard, Subhūti, it is that bodhisattva great beings should think, ‘I should work for the happiness of all beings, and, given that these beings are happy on account of their own merits, I should not have thoughts of envy toward them.’<sup>549</sup> For bodhisattva great beings, this is the avoidance of being envious of families.
- 10.53 “If, among them, you ask how bodhisattva great beings should avoid places of social intercourse, bodhisattva great beings should not frequent any places of social intercourse where śrāvakas or pratyekabuddhas are present, or where discussions might take place connected with them, or where their associated mindsets might arise. For bodhisattva great beings, this is the avoidance of places of social intercourse.
- 10.54 “If, among them, you ask how bodhisattva great beings should avoid malice, they provide no opportunity for thoughts of malice or harm, and no occasion for thinking about fighting or strife. For bodhisattva great beings, this is the avoidance of malice.
- 10.55 “If, among them, you ask what, for bodhisattva great beings, is the avoidance of self-praise, it is not observing internal or external phenomena.<sup>550</sup> For bodhisattva great beings, this is the avoidance of self-praise.
- 10.56 “If, among them, you ask what, for bodhisattva great beings, [F.203.b] is the avoidance of disparaging others, it is not observing external phenomena. For bodhisattva great beings, this is the avoidance of disparaging others.
- 10.57 “If, among them, you ask how bodhisattva great beings should avoid the paths of the ten nonvirtuous actions, they avoid them since they should be avoided because they obstruct progress to the higher realms, not to mention

- to the path of the noble ones, and not to mention to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. For bodhisattva great beings, this is the avoidance of the paths of the ten nonvirtuous actions.
- 10.58 “If, among them, you ask how bodhisattva great beings should avoid pride in being superior, they do not feel pride because they do not observe anything at all, let alone a superiority on account of which they would feel pride. For bodhisattva great beings, this is the avoidance of pride in being superior.
- 10.59 “If, among them, you ask how bodhisattva great beings should avoid haughtiness, they do not observe any entity with respect to which haughtiness might arise. For bodhisattva great beings, this is the avoidance of haughtiness.
- 10.60 “If, among them, you ask how bodhisattva great beings should avoid distorted views, they do not apprehend entities. For bodhisattva great beings, this is the avoidance of distorted views.
- 10.61 “If, among them, you ask how bodhisattva great beings should avoid being of two minds, it is because they see all phenomena free from doubts. For bodhisattva great beings, [F.204.a] this is the avoidance of being of two minds.<sup>551</sup>
- 10.62 “If, among them, you ask how bodhisattva great beings do not reject<sup>552</sup> patience for desire, hatred, and delusion, it is because they do not observe desire, hatred, or delusion. For bodhisattva great beings, this is not rejecting patience for desire, hatred, and delusion.<sup>553</sup>
- 10.63 “If, among them, you ask what are the six attributes that should be perfected on the sixth level, they are the six perfections—that is to say, the perfection of generosity, the perfection of ethical discipline, the perfection of tolerance, the perfection of perseverance, the perfection of meditative concentration, and the perfection of wisdom should be perfected. If you ask why, it is because, while abiding in these six perfections, the blessed lord buddhas, the śrāvakas, and the pratyekabuddhas have gone, are going, and will go to the other shore of the five oceans of objects of knowledge.<sup>554</sup>
- 10.64 “If you ask what are these five, they are the past, the future, the present, the inexpressible, and the unconditioned. So it is that bodhisattva great beings should perfect the six perfections.
- 10.65 “If, among them, you ask how bodhisattva great beings should avoid the six attributes, it is that they should avoid the mindset of the śrāvakas because it is not the path to enlightenment; they should avoid the mindset of the pratyekabuddhas because it is not the path to enlightenment; they should avoid a mind that has craving because it is not the path to enlightenment; they should not feel discouraged when they see beggars because it is not the path to enlightenment; they should not be unhappy on account of having renounced all material things because it is not the path to enlightenment; and that [F.204.b] from generating the first mind set on enlightenment they should undertake acts of generosity but should not be in a greedy state of mind<sup>555</sup> because it is not the path to enlightenment. So it is that bodhisattva great beings should avoid these six attributes.<sup>556</sup>

- 10.66 “If, among them, you ask how bodhisattva great beings should not grasp at a self, it is because the self is absolutely nonexistent. If you ask how they should not grasp at a being, it is because a being is absolutely nonexistent. If you ask how they should not grasp at an individual, it is because an individual is absolutely nonexistent. If you ask how they should not grasp at a person, it is because a person is absolutely nonexistent.
- 10.67 “If, among them, you ask how bodhisattva great beings should not grasp at nihilism, it is because no phenomenon at all is annihilated since all phenomena have absolutely not arisen.
- 10.68 “If, among them, you ask how bodhisattva great beings should not grasp at eternalism, it is because any phenomenon that has not arisen is not eternal, nor is it annihilated.
- 10.69 “If, among them, you ask how bodhisattva great beings should not perceive signs, it is because defilement is absolutely nonexistent.
- 10.70 “If, among them, you ask how bodhisattva great beings should not hold views about causes, it is because they do not observe those views.
- 10.71 “If, among them, you ask how bodhisattva great beings should not be attached to name and form, it is because they do not observe that entity.
- 10.72 “If, among them, you ask how bodhisattva great beings should not be attached to the aggregates, it is because the aggregates are absolutely nonexistent. So it is that bodhisattva great beings should not be attached to the aggregates. [F.205.a]
- 10.73 “If, among them, you ask how bodhisattva great beings should not be attached to the sensory elements, it is because the sensory elements are absolutely nonexistent. So it is that bodhisattva great beings should not be attached to the sensory elements.
- 10.74 “If, among them, you ask how bodhisattva great beings should not be attached to the sense fields, it is because the sense fields are absolutely nonexistent. So it is that bodhisattva great beings should not be attached to the sense fields.
- 10.75 “If, among them, you ask how bodhisattva great beings should not be attached to the three realms, it is because their essential nature is nonexistent. So it is that bodhisattva great beings should not be attached to the three realms.

- 10.76 “If, among them, you ask how bodhisattva great beings should not be fixated on the three realms, it is because their entity does not exist and cannot be apprehended. So it is that bodhisattva great beings should not be fixated on the three realms.
- 10.77 “If, among them, you ask how bodhisattva great beings should not rely on the three realms, it is because their entity does not exist and cannot be apprehended. So it is that bodhisattva great beings should not rely on the three realms.
- 10.78 “If, among them, you ask how bodhisattva great beings should not have the three realms as a foundation, it is because their entity does not exist and cannot be apprehended. So it is that bodhisattva great beings should not have the three realms as a foundation.
- 10.79 “If, among them, you ask how bodhisattva great beings should not be attached to the view of relying on the Buddha, it is because, by resorting to a view of the Buddha [F.205.b] they will not see the Buddha. So it is that bodhisattva great beings should not be attached to the view of relying on the Buddha.
- 10.80 “If, among them, you ask how bodhisattva great beings should not be attached to the view of relying on the Dharma, it is because, by resorting to a view of the Dharma they will not see the Dharma. So it is that bodhisattva great beings should not be attached to the view of relying on the Dharma.
- 10.81 “If, among them, you ask how bodhisattva great beings should not be attached to the view of relying on the Saṅgha, it is because, by resorting to a view of the Saṅgha they will not see the Saṅgha. So it is that bodhisattva great beings should not be attached to the view of relying on the Saṅgha.
- 10.82 “If, among them, you ask how bodhisattva great beings should not be attached to the view of relying on ethical discipline, it is because, by resorting to a view of ethical discipline, ethical discipline will not be purified. So it is that bodhisattva great beings should not be attached to the view of relying on ethical discipline.
- 10.83 “If, among them, you ask how bodhisattva great beings should not be discouraged by the fact that all phenomena are empty, it is because all phenomena are not empty of emptiness but empty of their own defining characteristics. So it is that bodhisattva great beings should not be discouraged by emptiness.
- 10.84 “If, among them, you ask how bodhisattva great beings should not contradict emptiness, it is because all phenomena are empty and therefore emptiness does not contradict emptiness. [F.206.a] So it is that bodhisattva great beings should not contradict emptiness.<sup>557</sup>

- 10.85 “If, among them, you ask how bodhisattva great beings should perfect emptiness, the perfection of the emptiness of its own defining characteristics is, for bodhisattva great beings, the perfection of emptiness.
- 10.86 “If, among them, you ask how bodhisattva great beings should actualize signlessness, it is because they do not pay attention to any signs.<sup>558</sup>
- 10.87 “If, among them, you ask how bodhisattva great beings understand wishlessness, it is that they do not engage the mind in any of the three realms.
- 10.88 “If, among them, you ask how bodhisattva great beings purify the three spheres, it is that they perfect the path of the ten virtuous actions.
- 10.89 “If, among them, you ask how bodhisattva great beings perfect compassion and pity for all beings, it is that they acquire great compassion.
- 10.90 “If, among them, you ask how bodhisattva great beings do not feel contempt for all beings, it is that they perfect loving kindness.
- 10.91 “If, among them, you ask what, for bodhisattva great beings, is the view of the sameness of all phenomena, it is that phenomena neither increase nor decrease.
- 10.92 “If, among them, you ask what, for bodhisattva great beings, is the penetrating understanding of the principle of reality, it is that even though they understand all phenomena in a single principle, there is no understanding.
- 10.93 “If, among them, you ask what, for bodhisattva great beings, is tolerance for nonarising, it is tolerance for all phenomena that are nonarising, not ceasing, [F.206.b] and not conditioned.
- 10.94 “If, among them, you ask what, for bodhisattva great beings, is knowledge of nonarising, it is the knowledge that name and form do not arise. For bodhisattva great beings, this is knowledge of nonarising.
- 10.95 “If, among them, you ask what, for bodhisattva great beings, is the teaching about the single principle of all phenomena, it is the absence of habitual ideas about duality.<sup>559</sup> For bodhisattva great beings, this is the teaching about the single principle of all phenomena.
- 10.96 “If, among them, you ask what, for bodhisattva great beings, is the perfect elimination of ideation, it is the absence of conceptual thought with respect to all phenomena.
- 10.97 “If, among them, you ask what, for bodhisattva great beings, is the reversal of views, it is that they have abandoned the level of the śrāvakas and the level of the pratyekabuddhas.
- 10.98 “If, among them, you ask what, for bodhisattva great beings, is the reversal of afflictive mental states, it is that they have put an end to all the propensities for afflicted mental states that cause linking up.<sup>560</sup>

- 10.99 “If, among them, you ask what, for bodhisattva great beings, is the level of stilling and higher insight, it is the transcendental knowledge of one with all-aspect omniscience.
- 10.100 “If, among them, you ask what, for bodhisattva great beings, is a disciplined mind, it is feeling no delight for the three realms.
- 10.101 “If, among them, you ask what, for bodhisattva great beings, is a peaceful mind, it is when the six sense faculties are gathered in together.
- 10.102 “If, among them, you ask what, for bodhisattva great beings, is unimpeded transcendental knowledge, it is that they acquire the eye of the buddhas.
- 10.103 “If, among them, you ask what, for bodhisattva great beings, is understanding the appropriate circumstances for loving kindness, it is an equanimity with regard to the six sense fields.
- 10.104 “If, among them, you ask what, for bodhisattva great beings, is going to any buddhafiield [F.207.a] at will, it is, without moving from any one buddhafiield, being seen in all buddhafiields.<sup>561</sup>
- 10.105 “If, among them, you ask what, for bodhisattva great beings, is the displaying of their identities to all, it is that they display to their respective entourages what they delight in—this or that identity as whatever is delightful.
- 10.106 “If, among them, you ask what, for bodhisattva great beings, is the comprehension of the minds of all beings, it is that with a single mind they cognize the minds and mental factors of all beings.
- 10.107 “If, among them, you ask what, for bodhisattva great beings, is playing with the extrasensory powers, it is playing with their extrasensory powers and moving from buddhafiield to buddhafiield in order to behold the buddhas, but not having any notion of a buddha.
- 10.108 “If, among them, you ask what, for bodhisattva great beings, is seeing buddhafiields, it is that they may be present in one buddhafiield and see inestimable buddhafiields, but they do not have any notion of a buddhafiield.
- 10.109 “If, among them, you ask what, for bodhisattva great beings, is the actualization of the buddhafiields just as they have seen them, it is that they dwell on the level of a wheel-turning emperor, or a ruler of a great billionfold world system, but they renounce the great billionfold world system and give rise to no conceit about it.
- 10.110 “If, among them, you ask what, for bodhisattva great beings, is the veneration of the buddhas, it is that they venerate the Dharma in order to benefit all beings.
- 10.111 “If, among them, you ask what, for bodhisattva great beings, is the definitive contemplation of the buddha bodies as they really are, it is the definitive contemplation of the Dharma body as it really is.

- 10.112 “If, among them, you ask what, for bodhisattva great beings, is the knowledge of those with higher and lower acumen, it is maintaining the ten powers and knowing the perfection of the acumen of all beings. [F.207.b]
- 10.113 “If, among them, you ask what, for bodhisattva great beings, is the refinement of a buddhafiield, it is the refinement of the minds of all beings by way of not apprehending anything.
- 10.114 “If, among them, you ask what, for bodhisattva great beings, is illusion-like meditative stability, it is that meditative stability by maintaining which bodhisattva great beings perform all the activities but without their minds engaging with any phenomenon.
- 10.115 “If, among them, you ask what, for bodhisattva great beings, is continuous meditative absorption, it is the meditative stability that has arisen from the maturation of bodhisattva great beings.<sup>562</sup>
- 10.116 “If, among them, you ask what, for bodhisattva great beings, is assuming a body commensurate with the roots of virtue that beings establish, it is bodhisattva great beings intentionally assuming a body commensurate with the maturation of beings.
- 10.117 “If, among them, you ask what, for bodhisattva great beings, is intentionally taking rebirth, it is in order to bring beings to maturation.<sup>563</sup>
- 10.118 “If, among them, you ask how it is that whatever aspirations bodhisattva great beings have, they excellently accomplish them, here, because bodhisattva great beings have perfected the six perfections there is an excellent accomplishment of whatever aspirations they have.
- 10.119 “If, among them, you ask how bodhisattva great beings comprehend the languages of the gods, nāgas, yakṣas, gandharvas, asuras, garuḍas, kinnaras, and mahoragas that are to be known, it is that they comprehend them by means of the exact knowledge of lexical [F.208.a] explanations.
- 10.120 “If, among them, you ask how it is that bodhisattva great beings understand the expositions based on perfect inspired speech that are to be known, they comprehend them with their exact knowledge of inspired eloquence.
- 10.121 “If, among them, you ask what, for bodhisattva great beings, is the excellence of the entry into the mother’s womb, here, it is that bodhisattva great beings are born miraculously in all their lives. For bodhisattva great beings, this is the excellence of the entry into the mother’s womb.
- 10.122 “If, among them, you ask what, for bodhisattva great beings, is the excellence of family, it is that bodhisattva great beings are born into great families. For bodhisattva great beings, this is the excellence of family.
- 10.123 “If, among them, you ask what, for bodhisattva great beings, is the excellence of class, it is that bodhisattva great beings are born in a great and lofty royal family or in a great and lofty priestly family. For bodhisattva great - beings, this is the excellence of class.

- 10.124 “If, among them, you ask what, for bodhisattva great beings, is the excellence of clan, it is that bodhisattva great beings are born into the families in which bodhisattva great beings of the past have appeared. For bodhisattva great beings, this is the excellence of clan.
- 10.125 “If, among them, you ask what, for bodhisattva great beings, is the excellence of entourage, it is that bodhisattva great beings have established beings in enlightenment and have just an entourage of bodhisattvas. For bodhisattva great beings, this is [F.208.b] the excellence of entourage.
- 10.126 “If, among them, you ask what, for bodhisattva great beings, is the excellence of life, it is that immediately after their birth, bodhisattva great beings fill the world systems with their effulgence, causing them to shake in six ways. For bodhisattva great beings, this is the excellence of life.
- 10.127 “If, among them, you ask what, for bodhisattva great beings, is the excellence of departure from home, it is that bodhisattva great beings leave home along with many one hundred thousand hundred million billion beings in order to become those who have gone forth to homelessness, and that those beings also become assured<sup>564</sup> in the three vehicles. For bodhisattva great beings, this is the excellence of departure from home.
- 10.128 “If, among them, you ask what, for bodhisattva great beings, is the excellence of the ornaments of the tree of enlightenment, it is that the roots of the tree of enlightenment of bodhisattva great beings are made of gold, the trunk is made of beryl, the branches are made of the seven precious things, and the leaves are made of everything precious, while the fragrance of that tree and its exquisite radiance extensively permeate infinite world systems. For bodhisattva great beings, this is the excellence of the ornaments of the tree of enlightenment.
- 10.129 “If, among them, you ask what, for bodhisattva great beings, is the perfect excellence of the completion of all good qualities, it is that the buddhafi elds of bodhisattva great beings are pure and the beings they are to bring to maturation are pure. For bodhisattva great beings, this is the perfect excellence of the completion of all good qualities.<sup>565</sup> [F.209.a]
- 10.130 “If, among them, you ask how it is that bodhisattva great beings abiding on the tenth level are said to be just tathāgatas, it is on account of all the perfections that bodhisattva great beings have perfected, and the ten powers of the tathāgatas, the four fearlessnesses, the four kinds of exact knowledge, the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas, the transcendental knowledge of an all-aspect omniscient one, the elimination of all the propensities for afflicted mental states that cause linking up, great compassion, and all the attributes of the buddhas that they have perfected. So it is, Subhūti, that bodhisattva great beings abiding on the tenth level are said to be just tathāgatas.

10.131 “Subhūti, if, among them, you ask what the ten levels of bodhisattva great beings are, Subhūti, here, when bodhisattva great beings who are expert in skillful means practice the perfection of generosity, practice the perfection of ethical discipline, practice the perfection of tolerance, practice the perfection of perseverance, practice the perfection of meditative concentration, and practice the perfection of wisdom; practice the emptiness of internal phenomena, practice the emptiness of external phenomena, practice the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, practice the emptiness of emptiness, practice the emptiness of great extent, practice the emptiness of ultimate reality, practice the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, practice the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, practice the emptiness of the unlimited, practice the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, practice the emptiness of nonexclusion, practice the emptiness of inherent [F.209.b] nature, practice the emptiness of all phenomena, practice the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, practice the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, practice the emptiness of nonentities, practice the emptiness of essential nature, and practice the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities; practice the applications of mindfulness, practice the correct exertions, practice the supports for miraculous ability, practice the faculties, practice the powers, practice the branches of enlightenment, and practice the noble eightfold path; practice the truths of the noble ones, practice the meditative concentrations, practice the immeasurable attitudes, practice the formless absorptions, practice the eight liberations, practice the nine serial steps of meditative absorption, practice the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation, practice the extrasensory powers, practice the meditative stabilities, practice the dhāraṇī gateways, practice the ten powers of the tathāgatas, practice the four fearlessnesses, practice the four kinds of exact knowledge, practice great compassion, and practice the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas, they transcend the level of bright insight, transcend the level of the spiritual family, transcend the eighth level, transcend the level of insight, transcend the level of attenuated refinement, transcend the level of no attachment, transcend the level of the realization of achievement,<sup>566</sup> transcend the level of the śrāvakas, [F.210.a] transcend the level of the pratyekabuddhas, and transcend the level of the bodhisattvas. Subhūti, bodhisattva great beings, having thus transcended those nine levels, stand on the level of a buddha. Subhūti, these are the ten levels of bodhisattva great beings. You should know it is in this way, Subhūti, that bodhisattva great beings enter perfectly into the Great Vehicle. [B15]

10.132 “Subhūti, in regard to what you have asked—‘From where does this Great Vehicle go forth?’—by way of not apprehending anything it will attain emancipation from the three realms and rest in all-aspect omniscience.<sup>567</sup> If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because both that which is the Great Vehicle and that which is all-aspect omniscience are neither conjoined nor disjoined, do not have a form, cannot be pointed out, and are not impeded. That is to say, they thus have the single intrinsic defining characteristic of having no intrinsic defining characteristic.

10.133 “If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because phenomena that have no intrinsic defining characteristics do not attain emancipation, will not attain emancipation, and have not attained emancipation. Subhūti, those who want phenomena without intrinsic defining characteristics to attain emancipation simply want the realm of phenomena to attain emancipation. Subhūti, those who want phenomena without intrinsic defining characteristics to attain emancipation simply want the real nature to attain emancipation. Subhūti, those who want phenomena without intrinsic defining characteristics to attain emancipation simply want the very limit of reality to attain emancipation. Subhūti, those who want phenomena without intrinsic defining characteristics to attain emancipation simply want [F.210.b] the realm of the inconceivable to attain emancipation. Subhūti, those who want phenomena without intrinsic defining characteristics to attain emancipation simply want the realm of space to attain emancipation. Subhūti, those who want phenomena without intrinsic defining characteristics to attain emancipation simply want the realm of the exhaustion of desire to attain emancipation. Subhūti, those who want phenomena without intrinsic defining characteristics to attain emancipation simply want the realm of renunciation<sup>568</sup> to attain emancipation. Subhūti, those who want phenomena without intrinsic defining characteristics to attain emancipation simply want the realm of freedom from desire to attain emancipation. Subhūti, those who want phenomena without intrinsic defining characteristics to attain emancipation simply want the realm of cessation to attain emancipation.

10.134 “Subhūti, those who want phenomena without intrinsic defining characteristics to attain emancipation simply want the emptiness of physical forms to attain emancipation. Subhūti, those who want phenomena without intrinsic defining characteristics to attain emancipation simply want the emptiness of feelings to attain emancipation. Subhūti, those who want phenomena without intrinsic defining characteristics to attain emancipation simply want the emptiness of perceptions to attain emancipation. Subhūti, those who want phenomena without intrinsic defining characteristics to attain emancipation simply want the emptiness of formative predispositions to attain emancipation. Subhūti, those who want phenomena without intrinsic defining characteristics to attain emancipation simply want the emptiness of consciousness to attain emancipation.

10.135 “If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the emptiness of physical forms does not attain emancipation from the three realms and does not rest in all-aspect omniscience. The emptiness of feelings does not attain emancipation from the three realms and does not rest in all-aspect omniscience. The emptiness of perceptions does not attain emancipation from the three realms and does not rest in all-aspect omniscience. The emptiness [F.211.a] of formative predispositions does not attain emancipation from the three realms and does not rest in all-aspect omniscience. The emptiness of consciousness does not attain emancipation from the three realms and does not rest in all-aspect omniscience.

10.136 “If you ask why, it is because physical forms are empty of physical forms, because feelings are empty of feelings, because perceptions are empty of perceptions, because formative predispositions are empty of formative predispositions, and because consciousness is empty of consciousness.

10.137 “Subhūti, those who want phenomena without intrinsic defining characteristics to attain emancipation simply want the emptiness of the eyes to attain emancipation. Subhūti, those who want phenomena without intrinsic defining characteristics to attain emancipation simply want the emptiness of the ears to attain emancipation. Subhūti, those who want phenomena without intrinsic defining characteristics to attain emancipation simply want the emptiness of the nose to attain emancipation. Subhūti, those who want phenomena without intrinsic defining characteristics to attain emancipation simply want the emptiness of the tongue to attain emancipation. Subhūti, those who want phenomena without intrinsic defining characteristics to attain emancipation simply want the emptiness of the body to attain emancipation. Subhūti, those who want phenomena without intrinsic defining characteristics to attain emancipation simply want the emptiness of the mental faculty to attain emancipation.

10.138 “If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the emptiness of the eyes does not attain emancipation from the three realms and does not rest in all-aspect omniscience. The emptiness of the ears does not attain emancipation from the three realms and does not rest in all-aspect omniscience. The emptiness of the nose does not attain emancipation from the three realms and does not rest in all-aspect omniscience. The emptiness of the tongue does not attain emancipation from the three realms and does not rest in all-aspect omniscience. [F.211.b] The emptiness of the body does not attain emancipation from the three realms and does not rest in all-aspect omniscience. And the emptiness of the mental faculty does not attain emancipation from the three realms and does not rest in all-aspect omniscience.

10.139 “If you ask why, it is because the eyes are empty of the eyes, because the ears are empty of the ears, because the nose is empty of the nose, because the tongue is empty of the tongue, because the body is empty of the body, and because the mental faculty is empty of the mental faculty.

10.140 “Subhūti, those who want phenomena without intrinsic defining characteristics to attain emancipation simply want the emptiness of sights to attain emancipation. Subhūti, those who want phenomena without intrinsic defining characteristics to attain emancipation simply want the emptiness of sounds to attain emancipation. Subhūti, those who want phenomena without intrinsic defining characteristics to attain emancipation simply want the emptiness of odors to attain emancipation. Subhūti, those who want phenomena without intrinsic defining characteristics to attain emancipation simply want the emptiness of tastes to attain emancipation. Subhūti, those who want phenomena without intrinsic defining characteristics to attain emancipation simply want the emptiness of tangibles to attain emancipation. Subhūti, those who want phenomena without intrinsic defining characteristics to attain emancipation simply want the emptiness of mental phenomena to attain emancipation.

10.141 “If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the emptiness of sights does not attain emancipation from the three realms and does not rest in all-aspect omniscience. The emptiness of sounds does not attain emancipation from the three realms and does not rest in all-aspect omniscience. The emptiness of odors does not attain emancipation from the three realms and does not rest in all-aspect omniscience. The emptiness of tastes does not attain emancipation from the three realms and does not rest in all-aspect omniscience. The emptiness of tangibles [F.212.a] does not attain emancipation from the three realms and does not rest in all-aspect omniscience. And the emptiness of mental phenomena does not attain emancipation from the three realms and does not rest in all-aspect omniscience.

10.142 “If you ask why, it is because sights are empty of sights, because sounds are empty of sounds, because odors are empty of odors, because tastes are empty of tastes, because tangibles are empty of tangibles, and because mental phenomena are empty of mental phenomena.

10.143 “Subhūti, those who want phenomena without intrinsic defining characteristics to attain emancipation simply want the emptiness of visual consciousness to attain emancipation. Subhūti, those who want phenomena without intrinsic defining characteristics to attain emancipation simply want the emptiness of auditory consciousness to attain emancipation. Subhūti, those who want phenomena without intrinsic defining characteristics to attain emancipation simply want the emptiness of olfactory consciousness to attain emancipation. Subhūti, those who want phenomena without intrinsic defining characteristics to attain emancipation simply want the emptiness of gustatory consciousness to attain emancipation. Subhūti, those who want phenomena without intrinsic defining characteristics to attain emancipation simply want the emptiness of tactile consciousness to attain emancipation. Subhūti, those who want phenomena without intrinsic defining characteristics to attain emancipation simply want the emptiness of mental consciousness to attain emancipation.

10.144 “If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the emptiness of visual consciousness does not attain emancipation from the three realms and does not rest in all-aspect omniscience. The emptiness of auditory consciousness does not attain emancipation from the three realms and does not rest in all-aspect omniscience. The emptiness of olfactory consciousness does not attain emancipation from the three realms and does not rest [F.212.b] in all-aspect omniscience. The emptiness of gustatory consciousness does not attain emancipation from the three realms and does not rest in all-aspect omniscience. The emptiness of tactile consciousness does not attain emancipation from the three realms and does not rest in all-aspect omniscience. And the emptiness of mental consciousness does not attain emancipation from the three realms and does not rest in all-aspect omniscience.

10.145 “If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because visual consciousness is empty of visual consciousness, because auditory consciousness is empty of auditory consciousness, because olfactory consciousness is empty of olfactory consciousness, because gustatory consciousness is empty of gustatory consciousness, because tactile consciousness is empty of tactile consciousness, and because mental consciousness is empty of mental consciousness.

10.146 “Subhūti, those who want phenomena without intrinsic defining characteristics to attain emancipation simply want the emptiness of visually compounded sensory contact to attain emancipation. Subhūti, those who want phenomena without intrinsic defining characteristics to attain emancipation simply want the emptiness of aurally compounded sensory contact to attain emancipation. Subhūti, those who want phenomena without intrinsic defining characteristics to attain emancipation simply want the emptiness of nasally compounded sensory contact to attain emancipation. Subhūti, those who want phenomena without intrinsic defining characteristics to attain emancipation simply want the emptiness of lingually compounded sensory contact to attain emancipation. Subhūti, those who want phenomena without intrinsic defining characteristics to attain emancipation simply want the emptiness of corporeally compounded sensory contact to attain emancipation. Subhūti, those who want phenomena without intrinsic defining characteristics to attain emancipation simply want the emptiness of mentally compounded sensory contact to attain emancipation.

10.147 “If you ask [F.213.a] why, Subhūti, it is because the emptiness of visually compounded sensory contact does not attain emancipation from the three realms and does not rest in all-aspect omniscience. The emptiness of aurally compounded sensory contact does not attain emancipation from the three realms and does not rest in all-aspect omniscience. The emptiness of nasally compounded sensory contact does not attain emancipation from the three realms and does not rest in all-aspect omniscience. The emptiness of lingually compounded sensory contact does not attain emancipation from the three realms and does not rest in all-aspect omniscience. The emptiness of corporeally compounded sensory contact does not attain emancipation from the three realms and does not rest in all-aspect omniscience. And the emptiness of mentally compounded sensory contact does not attain emancipation from the three realms and does not rest in all-aspect omniscience.

10.148 “If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because visually compounded sensory contact is empty of visually compounded sensory contact, because aurally compounded sensory contact is empty of aurally compounded sensory contact, because nasally compounded sensory contact is empty of nasally compounded sensory contact, because lingually compounded sensory contact is empty of lingually compounded sensory contact, because corporeally compounded sensory contact is empty of corporeally compounded sensory contact, and because mentally compounded sensory contact is empty of mentally compounded sensory contact.

10.149 “Subhūti, those who want phenomena without intrinsic defining characteristics to attain emancipation simply want the emptiness of feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact to attain emancipation. Subhūti, those who want phenomena without intrinsic defining characteristics to attain emancipation simply want the emptiness of feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact to attain emancipation. Subhūti, those who want phenomena without intrinsic defining characteristics to attain emancipation simply [F.213.b] want the emptiness of feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact to attain emancipation. Subhūti, those who want phenomena without intrinsic defining characteristics to attain emancipation simply want the emptiness of feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact to attain emancipation. Subhūti, those who want phenomena without intrinsic defining characteristics to attain emancipation simply want the emptiness of feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact to attain emancipation. Subhūti, those who want phenomena without intrinsic defining characteristics to attain emancipation simply want the emptiness of feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact to attain emancipation.

10.150 “If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the emptiness of feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact does not attain emancipation from the three realms and does not rest in all-aspect omniscience. The emptiness of feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact does not attain emancipation from the three realms and does not rest in all-aspect omniscience. The emptiness of feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact does not attain emancipation from the three realms and does not rest in all-aspect omniscience. The emptiness of feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact does not attain emancipation from the three realms and does not rest in all-aspect omniscience. The emptiness of feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact does not attain emancipation from the three realms and does not rest in all-aspect omniscience. And the emptiness of feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact does not attain emancipation from the three realms and does not rest in all-aspect omniscience.

10.151 “If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact are empty of feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact, because feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact are empty of feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact, because feelings [F.214.a] conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact are empty of feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact, because feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact are empty of feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact, because feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact are empty of feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact, and because feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact are empty of feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact.

10.152 “Subhūti, those who want phenomena without intrinsic defining characteristics to attain emancipation simply want a dream to attain emancipation. Subhūti, those who want phenomena without intrinsic defining characteristics to attain emancipation simply want an illusion to attain emancipation. Subhūti, those who want phenomena without intrinsic defining characteristics to attain emancipation simply want a mirage to attain emancipation. Subhūti, those who want phenomena without intrinsic defining characteristics to attain emancipation simply want an echo to attain emancipation. Subhūti, those who want phenomena without intrinsic defining characteristics to attain emancipation simply want an optical aberration to attain emancipation. Subhūti, those who want phenomena without intrinsic defining characteristics to attain emancipation simply want a magical display of the tathāgatas to attain emancipation.

10.153 “If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because a dream does not attain emancipation from the three realms and does not rest in all-aspect omniscience. An illusion does not attain emancipation from the three realms and does not rest in all-aspect omniscience. A mirage does not attain emancipation from the three realms and does not rest in all-aspect omniscience. An echo does not attain emancipation from the three realms and does not rest in all-aspect omniscience. An optical aberration does not attain emancipation from the three realms and does not rest in all-aspect omniscience. [F.214.b] And a magical display of the tathāgatas does not attain emancipation from the three realms and does not rest in all-aspect omniscience.

10.154 “If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because dreams are empty of dreams, because illusions are empty of illusions, because mirages are empty of mirages, because echoes are empty of echoes, because optical aberrations are empty of optical aberrations, and because magical displays of the tathāgatas are empty of magical displays of the tathāgatas.

10.155 “Subhūti, those who want phenomena without intrinsic defining characteristics to attain emancipation simply want the perfection of generosity to attain emancipation. Subhūti, those who want phenomena without intrinsic defining characteristics to attain emancipation simply want the perfection of ethical discipline to attain emancipation. Subhūti, those who want phenomena without intrinsic defining characteristics to attain emancipation simply want the perfection of tolerance to attain emancipation. Subhūti, those who want phenomena without intrinsic defining characteristics to attain emancipation simply want the perfection of perseverance to attain emancipation. Subhūti, those who want phenomena without intrinsic defining characteristics to attain emancipation simply want the perfection of meditative concentration to attain emancipation. Subhūti, those who want phenomena without intrinsic defining characteristics to attain emancipation simply want the perfection of wisdom to attain emancipation.

- 10.156 “If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the essential nature of the perfection of generosity does not attain emancipation from the three realms and does not rest in all-aspect omniscience. The essential nature of the perfection of ethical discipline does not attain emancipation from the three realms and does not rest in all-aspect omniscience. The essential nature of the perfection of tolerance does not attain emancipation from the three realms and [F.215.a] does not rest in all-aspect omniscience. The essential nature of the perfection of perseverance does not attain emancipation from the three realms and does not rest in all-aspect omniscience. The essential nature of the perfection of meditative concentration does not attain emancipation from the three realms and does not rest in all-aspect omniscience. And the essential nature of the perfection of wisdom does not attain emancipation from the three realms and does not rest in all-aspect omniscience.
- 10.157 “If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the essential nature of the perfection of generosity is empty of the essential nature of the perfection of generosity, because the essential nature of the perfection of ethical discipline is empty of the essential nature of the perfection of ethical discipline, because the essential nature of the perfection of tolerance is empty of the essential nature of the perfection of tolerance, because the essential nature of the perfection of perseverance is empty of the essential nature of the perfection of perseverance, because the essential nature of the perfection of meditative concentration is empty of the essential nature of the perfection of meditative concentration, and because the essential nature of the perfection of wisdom is empty of the essential nature of the perfection of wisdom.
- 10.158 “Subhūti, those who want phenomena without intrinsic defining characteristics to attain emancipation simply want the emptiness of internal phenomena to attain emancipation. Subhūti, those who want phenomena without intrinsic defining characteristics to attain emancipation simply want the emptiness of external phenomena to attain emancipation. Subhūti, those who want phenomena without intrinsic defining characteristics to attain emancipation simply want the emptiness of external and internal phenomena to attain emancipation. Subhūti, those who want phenomena without intrinsic defining characteristics to attain emancipation simply want [F.215.b] the emptiness of emptiness to attain emancipation. Subhūti, those who want phenomena without intrinsic defining characteristics to attain emancipation simply want the emptiness of great extent to attain emancipation. Subhūti, those who want phenomena without intrinsic defining characteristics to attain emancipation simply want the emptiness of ultimate reality to attain emancipation. Subhūti, those who want phenomena without intrinsic defining characteristics to attain emancipation simply want the emptiness of conditioned phenomena to attain emancipation. Subhūti, those who want phenomena without intrinsic defining characteristics to attain emancipation simply want the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena to attain emancipation. Subhūti, those who want phenomena without intrinsic defining characteristics to attain emancipation simply want the emptiness of the unlimited to attain emancipation. Subhūti, those who want phenomena without intrinsic defining characteristics to attain emancipation simply want the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end to attain emancipation. Subhūti, those who want phenomena without intrinsic defining characteristics to attain emancipation simply want the emptiness of nonexclusion to attain emancipation. Subhūti, those who want phenomena without intrinsic defining characteristics to attain emancipation simply want the emptiness of inherent nature to attain emancipation. Subhūti, those who want phenomena without intrinsic defining characteristics to attain emancipation simply want the emptiness of all phenomena to attain emancipation. Subhūti, those who want phenomena without intrinsic defining characteristics to attain emancipation simply want the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics to attain emancipation. Subhūti, those who want phenomena without intrinsic defining characteristics to attain emancipation simply want the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended to attain emancipation. Subhūti, those who want phenomena without intrinsic defining characteristics to attain emancipation simply want the emptiness of nonentities to attain emancipation. Subhūti, those who want phenomena without intrinsic defining characteristics [F.216.a] to attain emancipation simply want the emptiness of essential nature to attain emancipation. Subhūti, those who want phenomena without intrinsic defining characteristics to attain emancipation simply want the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities to attain emancipation.

10.159 “If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the emptiness of internal phenomena does not attain emancipation from the three realms and does not rest in all-aspect omniscience. The emptiness of external phenomena does not attain emancipation from the three realms and does not rest in all-aspect omniscience. The emptiness of external and internal phenomena does not attain emancipation from the three realms and does not rest in all-aspect omniscience. The emptiness of emptiness does not attain emancipation from the three realms and does not rest in all-aspect omniscience. The emptiness of great extent does not attain emancipation from the three realms and does not rest in all-aspect omniscience. The emptiness of ultimate reality does not attain emancipation from the three realms and does not rest in all-aspect omniscience. The emptiness of conditioned phenomena does not attain emancipation from the three realms and does not rest in all-aspect omniscience. The emptiness of unconditioned phenomena does not attain emancipation from the three realms and does not rest in all-aspect omniscience. The emptiness of the unlimited does not attain emancipation from the three realms and does not rest in all-aspect omniscience. The emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end does not attain emancipation from the three realms and does not rest in all-aspect omniscience. The emptiness of nonexclusion does not attain emancipation from the three realms and does not rest in all-aspect omniscience. The emptiness of inherent nature does not attain emancipation from the three realms and does not rest in all-aspect omniscience. The emptiness [F.216.b] of all phenomena does not attain emancipation from the three realms and does not rest in all-aspect omniscience. The emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics does not attain emancipation from the three realms and does not rest in all-aspect omniscience. The emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended does not attain emancipation from the three realms and does not rest in all-aspect omniscience. The emptiness of nonentities does not attain emancipation from the three realms and does not rest in all-aspect omniscience. The emptiness of essential nature does not attain emancipation from the three realms and does not rest in all-aspect omniscience. And the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities does not attain emancipation from the three realms and does not rest in all-aspect omniscience.

10.160 “If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the emptiness of internal phenomena is empty of the emptiness of internal phenomena, because the emptiness of external phenomena is empty of the emptiness of external phenomena, because the emptiness of external and internal phenomena is empty of the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, because the emptiness of emptiness is empty of the emptiness of emptiness, because the emptiness of great extent is empty of the emptiness of great extent, because the emptiness of ultimate reality is empty of the emptiness of ultimate reality, because the emptiness of conditioned phenomena is empty of the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, because the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena is empty of the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, because the emptiness of the unlimited is empty of the emptiness of the unlimited, because the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end is empty of the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, because the emptiness of nonexclusion is empty of the emptiness of nonexclusion, because the emptiness of inherent nature is empty of the emptiness of inherent nature, because the emptiness of all phenomena is empty of the emptiness of all phenomena, because the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics [F.217.a] is empty of the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, because the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended is empty of the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, because the emptiness of nonentities is empty of the emptiness of nonentities, because the emptiness of essential nature is empty of the emptiness of essential nature, and because the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities is empty of the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities.

10.161 “Subhūti, those who want phenomena without intrinsic defining characteristics to attain emancipation simply want the applications of mindfulness to attain emancipation. Subhūti, those who want phenomena without intrinsic defining characteristics to attain emancipation simply want the correct exertions to attain emancipation. Subhūti, those who want phenomena without intrinsic defining characteristics to attain emancipation simply want the supports for miraculous ability to attain emancipation. Subhūti, those who want phenomena without intrinsic defining characteristics to attain emancipation simply want the faculties to attain emancipation. Subhūti, those who want phenomena without intrinsic defining characteristics to attain emancipation simply want the powers to attain emancipation. Subhūti, those who want phenomena without intrinsic defining characteristics to attain emancipation simply want the branches of enlightenment to attain emancipation. Subhūti, those who want phenomena without intrinsic defining characteristics to attain emancipation simply want the noble eightfold path to attain emancipation.

10.162 “If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the essential nature of the applications of mindfulness does not attain emancipation from the three realms and does not rest in all-aspect omniscience. The essential nature of the correct exertions does not attain emancipation from the three realms and does not rest in all-aspect omniscience. The essential nature of [F.217.b] the supports for miraculous ability does not attain emancipation from the three realms and does not rest in all-aspect omniscience. The essential nature of the faculties does not attain emancipation from the three realms and does not rest in all-aspect omniscience. The essential nature of the powers does not attain emancipation from the three realms and does not rest in all-aspect omniscience. The essential nature of the branches of enlightenment does not attain emancipation from the three realms and does not rest in all-aspect omniscience. And the essential nature of the noble eightfold path does not attain emancipation from the three realms and does not rest in all-aspect omniscience.

10.163 “If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the essential nature of the applications of mindfulness is empty of the essential nature of the applications of mindfulness, because the essential nature of the correct exertions is empty of the essential nature of the correct exertions, because the essential nature of the supports for miraculous ability is empty of the essential nature of the supports for miraculous ability, because the essential nature of the faculties is empty of the essential nature of the faculties, because the essential nature of the powers is empty of the essential nature of the powers, because the essential nature of the branches of enlightenment is empty of the essential nature of the branches of enlightenment, and because the essential nature of the noble eightfold path is empty of the essential nature of the noble eightfold path.

10.164 “Subhūti, those who want phenomena without intrinsic defining characteristics to attain emancipation simply want the truths of the noble ones to attain emancipation. Subhūti, those who want phenomena without intrinsic defining characteristics to attain emancipation simply want the meditative concentrations to attain emancipation. Subhūti, [F.218.a] those who want phenomena without intrinsic defining characteristics to attain emancipation simply want the immeasurable attitudes to attain emancipation. Subhūti, those who want phenomena without intrinsic defining characteristics to attain emancipation simply want the formless absorptions to attain emancipation. Subhūti, those who want phenomena without intrinsic defining characteristics to attain emancipation simply want the liberations to attain emancipation. Subhūti, those who want phenomena without intrinsic defining characteristics to attain emancipation simply want the serial steps of meditative absorption to attain emancipation. Subhūti, those who want phenomena without intrinsic defining characteristics to attain emancipation simply want emptiness to attain emancipation. Subhūti, those who want phenomena without intrinsic defining characteristics to attain emancipation simply want signlessness to attain emancipation. Subhūti, those who want phenomena without intrinsic defining characteristics to attain emancipation simply want wishlessness to attain emancipation.

10.165 “If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the essential nature of the truths of the noble ones does not attain emancipation from the three realms and does not rest in all-aspect omniscience. The essential nature of the meditative concentrations does not attain emancipation from the three realms and does not rest in all-aspect omniscience. The essential nature of the immeasurable attitudes does not attain emancipation from the three realms and does not rest in all-aspect omniscience. The essential nature of the formless absorptions does not attain emancipation from the three realms and does not rest in all-aspect omniscience. The essential nature of the liberations does not attain emancipation from the three realms and does not rest in all-aspect omniscience. The essential nature of the serial steps of meditative absorption does not attain emancipation from the three realms [F.218.b] and does not rest in all-aspect omniscience. The essential nature of emptiness does not attain emancipation from the three realms and does not rest in all-aspect omniscience. The essential nature of signlessness does not attain emancipation from the three realms and does not rest in all-aspect omniscience. And the essential nature of wishlessness does not attain emancipation from the three realms and does not rest in all-aspect omniscience.

10.166 “If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the essential nature of the truths of the noble ones is empty of the essential nature of the truths of the noble ones, because the essential nature of the meditative concentrations is empty of the essential nature of the meditative concentrations, because the essential nature of the immeasurable attitudes is empty of the essential nature of the immeasurable attitudes, because the essential nature of the formless absorptions is empty of the essential nature of the formless absorptions, because the essential nature of the liberations is empty of the essential nature of the liberations, because the essential nature of the serial steps of meditative absorption is empty of the essential nature of the serial steps of meditative absorption, because the essential nature of emptiness is empty of the essential nature of emptiness, because the essential nature of signlessness is empty of the essential nature of signlessness, and because the essential nature of wishlessness is empty of the essential nature of wishlessness.

10.167 “Subhūti, those who want phenomena without intrinsic defining characteristics to attain emancipation simply want the extrasensory powers to attain emancipation. Subhūti, those who want phenomena without intrinsic defining characteristics to attain emancipation simply want the meditative stabilities to attain emancipation. Subhūti, those who want phenomena without intrinsic defining characteristics to attain emancipation simply want the dhāraṇī gateways to attain emancipation. [F.219.a]

10.168 “If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the essential nature of the extrasensory powers does not attain emancipation from the three realms and does not rest in all-aspect omniscience. The essential nature of the meditative stabilities does not attain emancipation from the three realms and does not rest in all-aspect omniscience. The essential nature of the dhāraṇī gateways does not attain emancipation from the three realms and does not rest in all-aspect omniscience.

10.169 “If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the essential nature of the extrasensory powers is empty of the essential nature of the extrasensory powers, because the essential nature of the meditative stabilities is empty of the essential nature of the meditative stabilities, and because the essential nature of the dhāraṇī gateways is empty of the essential nature of the dhāraṇī gateways.

- 10.170 “Subhūti, those who want phenomena without intrinsic defining characteristics to attain emancipation simply want the ten powers of the tathāgatas to attain emancipation. Subhūti, those who want phenomena without intrinsic defining characteristics to attain emancipation simply want the four fearlessnesses to attain emancipation. Subhūti, those who want phenomena without intrinsic defining characteristics to attain emancipation simply want the four kinds of exact knowledge to attain emancipation. Subhūti, those who want phenomena without intrinsic defining characteristics to attain emancipation simply want the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas to attain emancipation.
- 10.171 “If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the essential nature of the ten powers of the tathāgatas does not attain emancipation from the three realms and does not rest in all-aspect omniscience. The essential nature of the fearlessnesses does not attain emancipation from the three realms and does not rest in all-aspect omniscience. The essential nature of the four kinds of exact knowledge does not attain emancipation from the three realms and [F.219.b] does not rest in all-aspect omniscience. The essential nature of the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas does not attain emancipation from the three realms and does not rest in all-aspect omniscience.
- 10.172 “If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the essential nature of a power of the tathāgatas is empty of the essential nature of a power of the tathāgatas, because the essential nature of a fearlessness is empty of the essential nature of a fearlessness; because the essential nature of a kind of exact knowledge is empty of the essential nature of a kind of exact knowledge; and because the essential nature of a distinct quality of the buddhas is empty of the essential nature of a distinct quality of the buddhas.
- 10.173 “Subhūti, those who want phenomena without intrinsic defining characteristics to attain emancipation simply want an arhat whose contaminants have ceased to arise. Subhūti, those who want phenomena without intrinsic defining characteristics to attain emancipation simply want a pratyekabuddha to arise. Subhūti, those who want phenomena without intrinsic defining characteristics to attain emancipation simply want a bodhisattva to arise. Subhūti, those who want phenomena without intrinsic defining characteristics to attain emancipation simply want a tathāgata, arhat, perfectly complete buddha to attain emancipation.<sup>569</sup>
- 10.174 “If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because an arhat whose contaminants have ceased does not attain emancipation from the three realms and does not rest in all-aspect omniscience. A pratyekabuddha does not attain emancipation from the three realms and does not rest in all-aspect omniscience. A bodhisattva does not attain emancipation from the three realms and does not rest in all-aspect omniscience. And a tathāgata, arhat, perfectly complete buddha does not attain emancipation from [F.220.a] the three realms and does not rest in all-aspect omniscience.

10.175 “If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the essential nature of an arhat is empty of the essential nature of an arhat, because the essential nature of a pratyekabuddha is empty of the essential nature of a pratyekabuddha, because the essential nature of a bodhisattva is empty of the essential nature of a bodhisattva, and because the essential nature of a tathāgata is empty of the essential nature of a tathāgata.

10.176 “Subhūti, those who want phenomena without intrinsic defining characteristics to attain emancipation simply want the fruit of having entered the stream to attain emancipation. Subhūti, those who want phenomena without intrinsic defining characteristics to attain emancipation simply want the fruit of once-returner to attain emancipation. Subhūti, those who want phenomena without intrinsic defining characteristics to attain emancipation simply want the fruit of non-returner to attain emancipation. Subhūti, those who want phenomena without intrinsic defining characteristics to attain emancipation simply want arhatship to attain emancipation. Subhūti, those who want phenomena without intrinsic defining characteristics to attain emancipation simply want individual enlightenment to attain emancipation. Subhūti, those who want phenomena without intrinsic defining characteristics to attain emancipation simply want the knowledge of the aspects of the path to attain emancipation. Subhūti, those who want phenomena without intrinsic defining characteristics to attain emancipation simply want all-aspect omniscience to attain emancipation.

10.177 “If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the fruit of having entered the stream does not attain emancipation from the three realms and does not rest in all-aspect omniscience. The fruit of once-returner does not attain emancipation from the three realms and does not rest in all-aspect omniscience. [F.220.b] The fruit of non-returner does not attain emancipation from the three realms and does not rest in all-aspect omniscience. Arhatship does not attain emancipation from the three realms and does not rest in all-aspect omniscience. Individual enlightenment does not attain emancipation from the three realms and does not rest in all-aspect omniscience. The knowledge of the aspects of the path does not attain emancipation from the three realms and does not rest in all-aspect omniscience. And all-aspect omniscience does not attain emancipation from the three realms and does not rest in all-aspect omniscience.

- 10.178 “If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the essential nature of the fruit of having entered the stream is empty of the essential nature of the fruit of having entered the stream, because the essential nature of the fruit of once-returner is empty of the essential nature of the fruit of once-returner, because the essential nature of the fruit of non-returner is empty of the essential nature of the fruit of non-returner, because the essential nature of arhatship is empty of the essential nature of arhatship, because the essential nature of individual enlightenment is empty of the essential nature of individual enlightenment, because the essential nature of the knowledge of the aspects of the path is empty of the essential nature of the knowledge of the aspects of the path, and because the essential nature of all-aspect omniscience is empty of the essential nature of all-aspect omniscience.
- 10.179 “Subhūti, those who want phenomena without intrinsic defining characteristics to attain emancipation simply want a name to attain emancipation. Subhūti, those who want phenomena without intrinsic defining characteristics to attain emancipation simply want a sign to attain emancipation. Subhūti, those who want phenomena without intrinsic defining characteristics to attain emancipation simply want a symbol to attain emancipation. Subhūti, those who want phenomena without intrinsic defining characteristics to attain emancipation simply want [F.221.a] a conventional expression to attain emancipation. Subhūti, those who want phenomena without intrinsic defining characteristics to attain emancipation simply want a designation to attain emancipation.
- 10.180 “If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the emptiness of a name does not attain emancipation from the three realms and does not rest in all-aspect omniscience. The emptiness of a sign does not attain emancipation from the three realms and does not rest in all-aspect omniscience. The emptiness of a symbol does not attain emancipation from the three realms and does not rest in all-aspect omniscience. The emptiness of a conventional expression does not attain emancipation from the three realms and does not rest in all-aspect omniscience. The emptiness of a designation does not attain emancipation from the three realms and does not rest in all-aspect omniscience.
- 10.181 “If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the emptiness of a name is empty of the essential nature of the emptiness of a name, because the emptiness of a sign is empty of the essential nature of the emptiness of a sign, because the emptiness of a symbol is empty of the essential nature of the emptiness of a symbol, because the emptiness of a conventional expression is empty of the essential nature of the emptiness of a conventional expression, and because the emptiness of a designation is empty of the essential nature of the emptiness of a designation.

- 10.182 “Subhūti, those who want phenomena without intrinsic defining characteristics to attain emancipation simply want nonarising to attain emancipation. Subhūti, those who want phenomena without intrinsic defining characteristics to attain emancipation simply want nonceasing to attain emancipation. Subhūti, those who want phenomena without intrinsic defining characteristics to attain emancipation simply want nondefilement to attain emancipation. Subhūti, those who want phenomena without intrinsic defining characteristics to attain emancipation simply want nonpurification to attain emancipation. Subhūti, those who want phenomena without intrinsic defining characteristics to attain emancipation [F.221.b] simply want nonconditioning to attain emancipation.
- 10.183 “If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the essential nature of nonarising does not attain emancipation from the three realms and does not rest in all-aspect omniscience. The essential nature of nonceasing does not attain emancipation from the three realms and does not rest in all-aspect omniscience. The essential nature of nondefilement does not attain emancipation from the three realms and does not rest in all-aspect omniscience. The essential nature of nonpurification does not attain emancipation from the three realms and does not rest in all-aspect omniscience. And the essential nature of nonconditioning does not attain emancipation from the three realms and does not rest in all-aspect omniscience.
- 10.184 “If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because nonarising is empty of the essential nature of nonarising, because nonceasing is empty of the essential nature of nonceasing, because nondefilement is empty of the essential nature of nondefilement, because nonpurification is empty of the essential nature of nonpurification, and because nonconditioning is empty of the essential nature of nonconditioning.
- 10.185 “Thus, Subhūti, because of these reasons you should know that the Great Vehicle does attain emancipation from the three realms and does rest in all-aspect omniscience—and that rest is immovable.<sup>570</sup>
- 10.186 “Subhūti, you have asked, ‘Lord, where does this Great Vehicle come to rest?’ This Great Vehicle will not come to rest anywhere. If you ask why, it is because all phenomena are not at rest because a resting place cannot be apprehended. Thus, Subhūti, [F.222.a] this Great Vehicle is at rest by way of not resting.
- 10.187 “Subhūti, just as the realm of phenomena is neither at rest nor not at rest, similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle is neither at rest nor not at rest. Subhūti, just as the real nature is neither at rest nor not at rest, similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle is neither at rest nor not at rest. Subhūti, just as the very limit of reality is neither at rest nor not at rest, similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle is neither at rest nor not at rest. Subhūti, just as the realm of the inconceivable is neither at rest nor not at rest, similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle is neither at rest nor not at rest.

10.188 “If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because in the essential nature of the realm of phenomena there is neither rest nor no rest, in the essential nature of the true nature there is neither rest nor no rest, in the essential nature of the very limit of reality there is neither rest nor no rest, and in the essential nature of the realm of the inconceivable there is neither rest nor no rest.

10.189 “If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the realm of phenomena is empty of the essential nature of the realm of phenomena, because the real nature is empty of the essential nature of the real nature, because the very limit of reality is empty of the essential nature of the very limit of reality, and because the realm of the inconceivable is empty of the essential nature of the realm of the inconceivable.

10.190 “Subhūti, just as the realm of space neither rests nor does not rest, [F.222.b] similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle does not rest, nor does it not rest. Subhūti, just as the realm of the exhaustion of desire neither rests nor does not rest, similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle does not rest, nor does it not rest. Subhūti, just as the realm of the renunciation neither rests nor does not rest, similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle does not rest, nor does it not rest. Subhūti, just as the realm of freedom from desire neither rests nor does not rest, similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle does not rest, nor does it not rest. Subhūti, just as the realm of cessation neither rests nor does not rest, similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle does not rest, nor does it not rest.

10.191 “If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because in the essential nature of the realm of space there is neither rest nor no rest, in the essential nature of the realm of the exhaustion of desire there is neither rest nor no rest, in the essential nature of the realm of renunciation there is neither rest nor no rest, in the essential nature of the realm of freedom from desire there is neither rest nor no rest, and in the essential nature of the realm of cessation there is neither rest nor no rest.

10.192 “If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the realm of space is empty of the essential nature of the realm of space, because the realm of the exhaustion of desire is empty of the essential nature of the realm of the exhaustion of desire, because the realm of renunciation is empty of the essential nature of the realm of renunciation, [F.223.a] because the realm of freedom from desire is empty of the essential nature of the realm of freedom from desire, and because the realm of cessation is empty of the essential nature of the realm of cessation. [B16]

- 10.193      “Subhūti, just as the emptiness of physical forms neither rests nor does not rest, similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle does not rest, nor does it not rest. Subhūti, just as the emptiness of feelings neither rests nor does not rest, similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle does not rest, nor does it not rest. Subhūti, just as the emptiness of perceptions neither rests nor does not rest, similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle does not rest, nor does it not rest. Subhūti, just as the emptiness of formative predispositions neither rests nor does not rest, similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle does not rest, nor does it not rest. Subhūti, just as the emptiness of consciousness neither rests nor does not rest, similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle does not rest, nor does it not rest.
- 10.194      “If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because in the essential nature of physical forms there is neither rest nor no rest, in the essential nature of the realm of feelings there is neither rest nor no rest, in the essential nature of the realm of perception there is neither rest nor no rest, in the essential nature of formative predispositions there is neither rest nor no rest, and in the essential nature of consciousness there is neither rest nor no rest.
- 10.195      “If you ask why, Subhūti, it is [F.223.b] because physical forms are empty of physical forms, because feelings are empty of feelings, because perceptions are empty of perceptions, because formative predispositions are empty of formative predispositions, and because consciousness is empty of consciousness.
- 10.196      “Subhūti, just as the emptiness of the eyes neither rests nor does not rest, similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle does not rest, nor does it not rest. Subhūti, just as the emptiness of the ears neither rests nor does not rest, similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle does not rest, nor does it not rest. Subhūti, just as the emptiness of the nose neither rests nor does not rest, similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle does not rest, nor does it not rest. Subhūti, just as the emptiness of the tongue neither rests nor does not rest, similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle does not rest, nor does it not rest. Subhūti, just as the emptiness of the body neither rests nor does not rest, similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle does not rest, nor does it not rest. And, Subhūti, just as the emptiness of the mental faculty neither rests nor does not rest, similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle does not rest, nor does it not rest.
- 10.197      “If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because in the essential nature of the eyes there is neither rest nor no rest, in the essential nature of the ears there is neither rest nor no rest, in the essential nature of the nose there is neither rest nor no rest, in the essential nature of the tongue there is neither rest nor no rest, in the essential nature of the body [F.224.a] there is neither rest nor no rest, and in the essential nature of the mental faculty there is neither rest nor no rest.

- 10.198 “If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the eyes are empty of the eyes, because the ears are empty of the ears, because the nose is empty of the nose, because the tongue is empty of the tongue, because the body is empty of the body, and because the mental faculty is empty of the mental faculty.
- 10.199 “Subhūti, just as the emptiness of sights neither rests nor does not rest, similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle does not rest, nor does it not rest. Subhūti, just as the emptiness of sounds neither rests nor does not rest, similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle does not rest, nor does it not rest. Subhūti, just as the emptiness of odors neither rests nor does not rest, similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle does not rest, nor does it not rest. Subhūti, just as the emptiness of tastes neither rests nor does not rest, similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle does not rest, nor does it not rest. Subhūti, just as the emptiness of tangibles neither rests nor does not rest, similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle does not rest, nor does it not rest. And, Subhūti, just as the emptiness of mental phenomena neither rests nor does not rest, similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle does not rest, nor does it not rest.
- 10.200 “If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because in the essential nature of sights there is neither rest nor no rest, in the essential nature of sounds there is neither rest nor no rest, in the essential nature of odors there is neither rest nor no rest, in the essential nature of tastes [F.224.b] there is neither rest nor no rest, in the essential nature of tangibles there is neither rest nor no rest, and in the essential nature of mental phenomena there is neither rest nor no rest.
- 10.201 “If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because sights are empty of sights, because sounds are empty of sounds, because odors are empty of odors, because tastes are empty of tastes, because tangibles are empty of tangibles, and because mental phenomena are empty of mental phenomena.
- 10.202 “Subhūti, just as the emptiness of visual consciousness neither rests nor does not rest, similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle does not rest, nor does it not rest. Subhūti, just as the emptiness of auditory consciousness neither rests nor does not rest, similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle does not rest, nor does it not rest. Subhūti, just as the emptiness of olfactory consciousness neither rests nor does not rest, similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle does not rest, nor does it not rest. Subhūti, just as the emptiness of gustatory consciousness neither rests nor does not rest, similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle does not rest, nor does it not rest. Subhūti, just as the emptiness of tactile consciousness neither rests nor does not rest, similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle does not rest, nor does it not rest. And, Subhūti, just as the emptiness of mental consciousness neither rests nor does not rest, similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle does not rest, nor does it not rest.

- 10.203 “If you ask why, Subhūti, [F.225.a] it is because in the essential nature of visual consciousness there is neither rest nor no rest, in the essential nature of auditory consciousness there is neither rest nor no rest, in the essential nature of olfactory consciousness there is neither rest nor no rest, in the essential nature of gustatory consciousness there is neither rest nor no rest, in the essential nature of tactile consciousness there is neither rest nor no rest, and in the essential nature of mental consciousness there is neither rest nor no rest.
- 10.204 “If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because visual consciousness is empty of visual consciousness, because auditory consciousness is empty of auditory consciousness, because olfactory consciousness is empty of olfactory consciousness, because gustatory consciousness is empty of gustatory consciousness, because tactile consciousness is empty of tactile consciousness, and because mental consciousness is empty of mental consciousness.
- 10.205 “Subhūti, just as the emptiness of visually compounded sensory contact neither rests nor does not rest, similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle does not rest, nor does it not rest. Subhūti, just as the emptiness of aurally compounded sensory contact neither rests nor does not rest, similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle does not rest, nor does it not rest. Subhūti, just as the emptiness of nasally compounded sensory contact neither rests nor does not rest, similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle does not rest, nor does it not rest. Subhūti, just as the emptiness of lingually compounded sensory contact neither rests [F.225.b] nor does not rest, similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle does not rest, nor does it not rest. Subhūti, just as the emptiness of corporeally compounded sensory contact neither rests nor does not rest, similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle does not rest, nor does it not rest. And, Subhūti, just as the emptiness of mentally compounded sensory contact neither rests nor does not rest, similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle does not rest, nor does it not rest.
- 10.206 “If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because in the essential nature of visually compounded sensory contact there is neither rest nor no rest, in the essential nature of aurally compounded sensory contact there is neither rest nor no rest, in the essential nature of nasally compounded sensory contact there is neither rest nor no rest, in the essential nature of lingually compounded sensory contact there is neither rest nor no rest, in the essential nature of corporeally compounded sensory contact there is neither rest nor no rest, and in the essential nature of mentally compounded sensory contact there is neither rest nor no rest.

- 10.207 “If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because visually compounded sensory contact is empty of visually compounded sensory contact, because aurally compounded sensory contact is empty of aurally compounded sensory contact, because nasally compounded sensory contact is empty of nasally compounded sensory contact, because lingually compounded sensory contact is empty of lingually compounded sensory contact, because corporeally compounded sensory contact is empty of corporeally compounded sensory contact, and because mentally compounded sensory contact is empty of mentally compounded sensory contact.
- 10.208 “Subhūti, just as the emptiness of feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact neither rests nor does not rest, similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle does not rest, nor does it not rest. Subhūti, just as [F.226.a] the emptiness of feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact neither rests nor does not rest, similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle does not rest, nor does it not rest. Subhūti, just as the emptiness of feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact neither rests nor does not rest, similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle does not rest, nor does it not rest. Subhūti, just as the emptiness of feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact neither rests nor does not rest, similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle does not rest, nor does it not rest. Subhūti, just as the emptiness of feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact neither rests nor does not rest, similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle does not rest, nor does it not rest. And, Subhūti, just as the emptiness of feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact neither rests nor does not rest, similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle does not rest, nor does it not rest.
- 10.209 “If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because in the essential nature of feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact there is neither rest nor no rest, in the essential nature of feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact there is neither rest nor no rest, in the essential nature of feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact there is neither rest nor no rest, in the essential nature of feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact there is neither rest nor no rest, in the essential nature of feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact there is neither rest nor no rest, and in the essential nature of feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact [F.226.b] there is neither rest nor no rest.
- 10.210 “If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact are empty of feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact, because feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact are empty of feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact, because feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact are empty of feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact, because feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact are empty of feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact, because feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact are empty of feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact, and because feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact are empty of feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact.

10.211 “Subhūti, just as a dream neither rests nor does not rest, similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle does not rest, nor does it not rest. Subhūti, just as an illusion neither rests nor does not rest, similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle does not rest, nor does it not rest. Subhūti, just as a mirage neither rests nor does not rest, similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle does not rest, nor does it not rest. Subhūti, just as an echo neither rests nor does not rest, similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle does not rest, nor does it not rest. Subhūti, [F.227.a] just as an optical aberration neither rests nor does not rest, similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle does not rest, nor does it not rest. Subhūti, just as a reflection neither rests nor does not rest, similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle does not rest, nor does it not rest. And, Subhūti, just as a magical display of the tathāgatas neither rests nor does not rest, similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle does not rest, nor does it not rest.

10.212 “If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because in the essential nature of a dream there is neither rest nor no rest, in the essential nature of an illusion there is neither rest nor no rest, in the essential nature of a mirage there is neither rest nor no rest, in the essential nature of an echo there is neither rest nor no rest, in the essential nature of an optical aberration there is neither rest nor no rest, in the essential nature of a reflection there is neither rest nor no rest, and in the essential nature of a magical display of the tathāgatas there is neither rest nor no rest.

10.213 “If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because dreams are empty of dreams, because illusions are empty of illusions, because mirages are empty of mirages, because echoes are empty of echoes, because optical aberrations are empty of optical aberrations, because reflections are empty of reflections, and because magical displays of the tathāgatas are empty of magical displays of the tathāgatas.

10.214 “Subhūti, just as the perfection of generosity neither rests nor does not rest, similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle does not rest, nor does it not rest. Subhūti, just as the perfection [F.227.b] of ethical discipline neither rests nor does not rest, similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle does not rest, nor does it not rest. Subhūti, just as the perfection of tolerance neither rests nor does not rest, similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle does not rest, nor does it not rest. Subhūti, just as the perfection of perseverance neither rests nor does not rest, similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle does not rest, nor does it not rest. Subhūti, just as the perfection of meditative concentration neither rests nor does not rest, similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle does not rest, nor does it not rest. And, Subhūti, just as the perfection of wisdom neither rests nor does not rest, similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle does not rest, nor does it not rest.

10.215 “If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because in the essential nature of the perfection of generosity there is neither rest nor no rest, in the essential nature of the perfection of ethical discipline there is neither rest nor no rest, in the essential nature of the perfection of tolerance there is neither rest nor no rest, in the essential nature of the perfection of perseverance there is neither rest nor no rest, in the essential nature of the perfection of meditative concentration there is neither rest nor no rest, and in the essential nature of the perfection of wisdom there is neither rest nor no rest.

10.216 “If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the perfection of generosity is empty of the perfection of generosity, because the perfection of ethical discipline is empty of [F.228.a] the perfection of ethical discipline, because the perfection of tolerance is empty of the perfection of tolerance, because the perfection of perseverance is empty of the perfection of perseverance, because the perfection of meditative concentration is empty of the perfection of meditative concentration, and because the perfection of wisdom is empty of the perfection of wisdom.

10.217 “Subhūti, just as the emptiness of internal phenomena neither rests nor does not rest, similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle does not rest, nor does it not rest. Subhūti, just as the emptiness of external phenomena neither rests nor does not rest, similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle does not rest, nor does it not rest. Subhūti, just as the emptiness of external and internal phenomena neither rests nor does not rest, similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle does not rest, nor does it not rest. Subhūti, just as the emptiness of emptiness neither rests nor does not rest, similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle does not rest, nor does it not rest. Subhūti, just as the emptiness of great extent neither rests nor does not rest, similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle does not rest, nor does it not rest. Subhūti, just as the emptiness of ultimate reality neither rests nor does not rest, similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle does not rest, nor does it not rest. Subhūti, just as the emptiness of conditioned phenomena neither rests nor does not rest, similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle [F.228.b] does not rest, nor does it not rest. Subhūti, just as the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena neither rests nor does not rest, similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle does not rest, nor does it not rest.

Subhūti, just as the emptiness of the unlimited neither rests nor does not rest, similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle does not rest, nor does it not rest. Subhūti, just as the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end neither rests nor does not rest, similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle does not rest, nor does it not rest. Subhūti, just as the emptiness of nonexclusion neither rests nor does not rest, similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle does not rest, nor does it not rest. Subhūti, just as the emptiness of inherent nature neither rests nor does not rest, similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle does not rest, nor does it not rest. Subhūti, just as the emptiness of all phenomena neither rests nor does not rest, similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle does not rest, nor does it not rest. Subhūti, just as the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics neither rests nor does not rest, similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle does not rest, nor does it not rest. Subhūti, just as the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended neither rests nor does not rest, similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle does not rest, [F.229.a] nor does it not rest. Subhūti, just as the emptiness of nonentities neither rests nor does not rest, similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle does not rest, nor does it not rest. Subhūti, just as the emptiness of essential nature neither rests nor does not rest, similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle does not rest, nor does it not rest. And, Subhūti, just as the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities neither rests nor does not rest, similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle does not rest, nor does it not rest.

10.218 “If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because in the essential nature of the emptiness of internal phenomena there is neither rest nor no rest, in the essential nature of the emptiness of external phenomena there is neither rest nor no rest, in the essential nature of the emptiness of external and internal phenomena there is neither rest nor no rest, in the essential nature of the emptiness of emptiness there is neither rest nor no rest, in the essential nature of the emptiness of great extent there is neither rest nor no rest, in the essential nature of the emptiness of ultimate reality there is neither rest nor no rest, in the essential nature of the emptiness of conditioned phenomena there is neither rest nor no rest, in the essential nature of the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena there is neither rest nor no rest, in the essential nature of the emptiness of the unlimited there is neither rest nor no rest, in the essential nature of the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end there is neither rest nor no rest, in the essential nature of the emptiness of nonexclusion there is neither rest nor no rest, in the essential nature of the emptiness of inherent nature there is neither rest nor no rest, in the essential nature of the emptiness of all phenomena there is neither rest nor no rest, in [F.229.b] the essential nature of the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics there is neither rest nor no rest, in the essential nature of the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended there is neither rest nor no rest, in the essential nature of the emptiness of nonentities there is neither rest nor no rest, in the essential nature of the emptiness of essential nature there is neither rest nor no rest, and in the essential nature of the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities there is neither rest nor no rest.

10.219 “If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the emptiness of internal phenomena is empty of the emptiness of internal phenomena, because the emptiness of external phenomena is empty of the emptiness of external phenomena, because the emptiness of external and internal phenomena is empty of the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, because the emptiness of emptiness is empty of the emptiness of emptiness, because the emptiness of great extent is empty of the emptiness of great extent, because the emptiness of ultimate reality is empty of the emptiness of ultimate reality, because the emptiness of conditioned phenomena is empty of the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, because the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena is empty of the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, because the emptiness of the unlimited is empty of the emptiness of the unlimited, because the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end is empty of the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, because the emptiness of nonexclusion is empty of the emptiness of nonexclusion, because the emptiness of inherent nature is empty of the emptiness of inherent nature, because the emptiness of all phenomena is empty of the emptiness of all phenomena, because the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics is empty of the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, because the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended is empty of the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, because the emptiness of nonentities is empty of the emptiness of nonentities, because the emptiness of essential nature is empty of the emptiness of essential nature, and because the emptiness [F.230.a] of the essential nature of nonentities is empty of the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities.

10.220 “Subhūti, just as the essential nature of the applications of mindfulness neither rests nor does not rest, similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle does not rest, nor does it not rest. Subhūti, just as the essential nature of the correct exertions neither rests nor does not rest, similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle does not rest, nor does it not rest. Subhūti, just as the essential nature of the supports for miraculous ability neither rests nor does not rest, similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle does not rest, nor does it not rest. Subhūti, just as the essential nature of the faculties neither rests nor does not rest, similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle does not rest, nor does it not rest. Subhūti, just as the essential nature of the powers neither rests nor does not rest, similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle does not rest, nor does it not rest. Subhūti, just as the essential nature of the branches of enlightenment neither rests nor does not rest, similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle does not rest, nor does it not rest. And, Subhūti, just as the essential nature of the noble eightfold path neither rests nor does not rest, similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle does not rest, nor does it not rest.

10.221 “If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because in the essential nature of the applications of mindfulness there is neither rest nor no rest, [F.230.b] in the essential nature of the correct exertions there is neither rest nor no rest, in the essential nature of the supports for miraculous ability there is neither rest nor no rest, in the essential nature of the faculties there is neither rest nor no rest, in the essential nature of the powers there is neither rest nor no rest, in the essential nature of the branches of enlightenment there is neither rest nor no rest, and in the essential nature of the noble eightfold path there is neither rest nor no rest.

10.222 “If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the applications of mindfulness are empty of the applications of mindfulness, because the correct exertions are empty of the correct exertions, because the supports for miraculous ability are empty of the supports for miraculous ability, because the faculties are empty of the faculties, because the powers are empty of the powers; because the branches of enlightenment are empty of the branches of enlightenment, and because the noble eightfold path is empty of the noble eightfold path.

10.223 “Subhūti, just as the truths of the noble ones neither rest nor do not rest, similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle does not rest, nor does it not rest. Subhūti, just as the meditative concentrations neither rest nor do not rest, similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle does not rest, nor does it not rest. Subhūti, just as the immeasurable attitudes neither rest nor do not rest, similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle does not rest, nor does it not rest. Subhūti, just as the formless absorptions neither rest [F.231.a] nor do not rest, similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle does not rest, nor does it not rest. Subhūti, just as the liberations neither rest nor do not rest, similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle does not rest, nor does it not rest. Subhūti, just as the serial steps of meditative absorption neither rest nor do not rest, similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle does not rest, nor does it not rest. Subhūti, just as the emptiness, the signlessness, and the wishlessness gateways to liberation neither rest nor do not rest, similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle does not rest, nor does it not rest. Subhūti, just as the extrasensory powers neither rest nor do not rest, similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle does not rest, nor does it not rest. Subhūti, just as the meditative stabilities neither rest nor do not rest, similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle does not rest, nor does it not rest. And, Subhūti, just as the dhāraṇī gateways neither rest nor do not rest, similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle does not rest, nor does it not rest.

10.224 “If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because in the essential nature of the truths of the noble ones there is neither rest nor no rest, in the essential nature of the meditative concentrations there is neither rest nor no rest, in the essential nature of the immeasurable attitudes there is neither rest nor no rest, in the essential nature of the formless [F.231.b] absorptions there is neither rest nor no rest, in the essential nature of the eight liberations there is neither rest nor no rest, in the essential nature of the nine serial steps of meditative absorption there is neither rest nor no rest, in the essential nature of the emptiness, the signlessness, and the wishlessness gateways to liberation there is neither rest nor no rest, in the essential nature of the extrasensory powers there is neither rest nor no rest, in the essential nature of the meditative stabilities there is neither rest nor no rest, and in the essential nature of the dhāraṇī gateways there is neither rest nor no rest.

10.225 “If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the truths of the noble ones are empty of the truths of the noble ones, because the meditative concentrations are empty of the meditative concentrations, because the immeasurable attitudes are empty of the immeasurable attitudes, because the formless absorptions are empty of the formless absorptions, because the liberations are empty of the liberations, because the serial steps of meditative absorption are empty of the serial steps of meditative absorption, because emptiness is empty of emptiness, because signlessness is empty of signlessness, because wishlessness is empty of wishlessness, because the extrasensory powers are empty of the extrasensory powers, because the meditative stabilities are empty of the meditative stabilities, and because the dhāraṇī gateways are empty of the dhāraṇī gateways.

10.226 “Subhūti, just as the ten powers of the tathāgatas neither rest nor do not [F.232.a] rest, similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle does not rest, nor does it not rest. Subhūti, just as the four fearlessnesses neither rest nor do not rest, similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle does not rest, nor does it not rest. Subhūti, just as the four kinds of exact knowledge neither rest nor do not rest, similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle does not rest, nor does it not rest. Subhūti, just as great compassion neither rests nor does not rest, similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle does not rest, nor does it not rest. And, Subhūti, just as the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas neither rest nor do not rest, similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle does not rest, nor does it not rest.

10.227 “If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because in the essential nature of the ten powers of the tathāgatas there is neither rest nor no rest, in the essential nature of the fearlessnesses there is neither rest nor no rest, in the essential nature of the immeasurable attitudes there is neither rest nor no rest, in the essential nature of the kinds of exact knowledge there is neither rest nor no rest, in the essential nature of great compassion there is neither rest nor no rest, and in the essential nature of the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas there is neither rest nor no rest.

10.228 “If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the ten powers of the tathāgatas are empty of the ten powers of the tathāgatas, because the four fearlessnesses are empty of the four fearlessnesses, because the four kinds of exact knowledge are empty of the four kinds of exact knowledge, because [F.232.b] great compassion is empty of great compassion, and because the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas are empty of the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas.

10.229 “Subhūti, just as an arhat whose contaminants have ceased neither rests nor does not rest, similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle does not rest, nor does it not rest. Subhūti, just as a pratyekabuddha neither rests nor does not rest, similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle does not rest, nor does it not rest.

10.230 “If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because in the essential nature of an arhat there is neither rest nor no rest, and in the essential nature of a pratyekabuddha there is neither rest nor no rest.

10.231 “If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the essential nature of an arhat is empty of the essential nature of an arhat, and because the essential nature of a pratyekabuddha is empty of the essential nature of a pratyekabuddha.

10.232 “Subhūti, just as a bodhisattva neither rests nor does not rest, similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle does not rest, nor does it not rest. And, Subhūti, just as a tathāgata, arhat, perfectly complete buddha neither rests nor does not rest, similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle does not rest, nor does it not rest.

10.233 “If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because in the essential nature of a bodhisattva there is neither rest nor no rest, and in the essential nature of a tathāgata there is neither rest nor no rest.

10.234 “If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the essential nature of a bodhisattva is empty of the essential nature of a bodhisattva, and because the essential nature of a tathāgata is empty of the essential nature [F.233.a] of a tathāgata.

10.235 “Subhūti, just as the fruit of having entered the stream neither rests nor does not rest, similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle does not rest, nor does it not rest. Subhūti, just as the fruit of once-returner neither rests nor does not rest, similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle does not rest, nor does it not rest. Subhūti, just as the fruit of non-returner neither rests nor does not rest, similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle does not rest, nor does it not rest. Subhūti, just as arhatship neither rests nor does not rest, similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle does not rest, nor does it not rest. And, Subhūti, just as individual enlightenment neither rests nor does not rest, similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle does not rest, nor does it not rest.

10.236 “If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because in the essential nature of the fruit of having entered the stream there is neither rest nor no rest, in the essential nature of the fruit of once-returner there is neither rest nor no rest, in the essential nature of the fruit of non-returner there is neither rest nor no rest, in the essential nature of arhatship there is neither rest nor no rest, and in the essential nature of individual enlightenment there is neither rest nor no rest.

10.237 “If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the essential nature of the fruit of having entered the stream is empty of the essential nature of the fruit of having entered the stream, because the essential nature of the fruit of once-returner is empty of the essential nature of [F.233.b] the fruit of once-returner, because the essential nature of the fruit of non-returner is empty of the essential nature of the fruit of non-returner, because the essential nature of arhatship is empty of the essential nature of arhatship, and because the essential nature of individual enlightenment is empty of the essential nature of individual enlightenment.

10.238 “Subhūti, just as the knowledge of the aspects of the path neither rests nor does not rest, similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle does not rest, nor does it not rest. And, Subhūti, just as all-aspect omniscience neither rests nor does not rest, similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle does not rest, nor does it not rest.

10.239 “If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because in the essential nature of the knowledge of the aspects of the path there is neither rest nor no rest, and in the essential nature of all-aspect omniscience there is neither rest nor no rest.

10.240 “If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the essential nature of the knowledge of the aspects of the path is empty of the essential nature of the knowledge of the aspects of the path, and because the essential nature of all-aspect omniscience is empty of the essential nature of all-aspect omniscience.

10.241 “Subhūti, just as a name neither rests nor does not rest, similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle does not rest, nor does it not rest. Subhūti, just as a sign neither rests nor does not rest, similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle does not rest, nor does it not rest. Subhūti, just as a symbol neither rests nor does not rest, similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle does not rest, nor does it not rest. Subhūti, [F.234.a] just as a conventional expression neither rests nor does not rest, similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle does not rest, nor does it not rest. And, Subhūti, just as a designation neither rests nor does not rest, similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle does not rest, nor does it not rest.

- 10.242 “If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because in the essential nature of a name there is neither rest nor no rest, in the essential nature of a sign there is neither rest nor no rest, in the essential nature of a symbol there is neither rest nor no rest, in the essential nature of a conventional expression there is neither rest nor no rest, and in the essential nature of a designation there is neither rest nor no rest.
- 10.243 “If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the essential nature of a name is empty of the essential nature of a name, because the essential nature of a sign is empty of the essential nature of a sign, because the essential nature of a symbol is empty of the essential nature of a symbol, because the essential nature of a conventional expression is empty of the essential nature of a conventional expression, and because the essential nature of a designation is empty of the essential nature of a designation.
- 10.244 “Subhūti, just as nonarising neither rests nor does not rest, similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle does not rest, nor does it not rest. Subhūti, just as nonceasing neither rests nor does not rest, similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle does not rest, nor does it not rest. Subhūti, just as nondefilement neither rests nor does not rest, similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle does not rest, nor does it [F.234.b] not rest. And, Subhūti, just as nonpurification neither rests nor does not rest, similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle does not rest, nor does it not rest.
- 10.245 “If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because in the essential nature of nonarising there is neither rest nor no rest, in the essential nature of nonceasing there is neither rest nor no rest, in the essential nature of nondefilement there is neither rest nor no rest, and in the essential nature of nonpurification there is neither rest nor no rest.
- 10.246 “If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the essential nature of nonarising is empty of the essential nature of nonarising, because the essential nature of nonceasing is empty of the essential nature of nonceasing, because the essential nature of nondefilement is empty of the essential nature of nondefilement, and because the essential nature of nonpurification is empty of the essential nature of nonpurification.
- 10.247 “Subhūti, just as nonconditioning neither rests nor does not rest, similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle does not rest, nor does it not rest.
- 10.248 “If you ask why, Subhūti, in the essential nature of nonconditioning there is neither rest nor no rest.
- 10.249 “If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the essential nature of nonconditioning is empty of the essential nature of nonconditioning. [B17]
- 10.250 “Thus, Subhūti, because of these reasons, since this Great Vehicle rests by way of not resting and since it is immovable, it will not come to rest anywhere.<sup>571</sup>

- 10.251      “Subhūti, you have asked, [F.235.a] ‘Who will go forth in this vehicle?’ No one will attain emancipation by means of this vehicle. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because all those phenomena—that which is this vehicle, those who would attain emancipation, that by which they would attain emancipation, and that from which they would attain emancipation—do not exist and are not apprehended. Since all phenomena thus do not exist and are not apprehended, what phenomenon would attain emancipation by means of what phenomenon?
- 10.252      “If you ask why, Subhūti, since they are beyond limits<sup>572</sup> because the self is utterly pure, a being is utterly pure, a life form is utterly pure, a living being is utterly pure, a life is utterly pure, an individual is utterly pure, a person is utterly pure, one born of Manu is utterly pure, a child of Manu is utterly pure, an agent is utterly pure, an experiencer is utterly pure, a knower is utterly pure, and a viewer is utterly pure, therefore the self cannot be apprehended, a being cannot be apprehended, a life form cannot be apprehended, a living being cannot be apprehended, a life cannot be apprehended, an individual cannot be apprehended, a person cannot be apprehended, one born of Manu cannot be apprehended, a child of Manu cannot be apprehended, an agent cannot be apprehended, an experiencer cannot be apprehended, a knower cannot be apprehended, and a viewer cannot be apprehended.
- 10.253      “The realm of phenomena cannot be apprehended because of utter purity, the real nature cannot be apprehended because of utter purity, the very limit of reality cannot be apprehended because of utter purity, and the realm of the inconceivable cannot be apprehended because of [F.235.b] utter purity. The aggregates cannot be apprehended because of utter purity, the sensory elements cannot be apprehended because of utter purity, the sense fields cannot be apprehended because of utter purity, and dependent origination cannot be apprehended because of utter purity. The perfection of generosity cannot be apprehended because of utter purity, the perfection of ethical discipline cannot be apprehended because of utter purity, the perfection of tolerance cannot be apprehended because of utter purity, the perfection of perseverance cannot be apprehended because of utter purity, the perfection of meditative concentration cannot be apprehended because of utter purity, and the perfection of wisdom cannot be apprehended because of utter purity.
- 10.254      “The emptiness of internal phenomena cannot be apprehended because of utter purity, the emptiness of external phenomena cannot be apprehended because of utter purity, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena cannot be apprehended because of utter purity, the emptiness of emptiness cannot be apprehended because of utter purity, the emptiness of great extent cannot be apprehended because of utter purity, the emptiness of ultimate reality cannot be apprehended because of utter purity, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena cannot be apprehended because of utter purity, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena cannot be apprehended because of utter purity, the emptiness of the unlimited cannot be apprehended because of utter purity, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end cannot be apprehended because of utter purity, the emptiness of nonexclusion cannot be apprehended because of utter purity, the emptiness of inherent nature cannot be apprehended [F.236.a] because of utter purity, the emptiness of all phenomena cannot be apprehended because of utter purity, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics cannot be apprehended because of utter purity, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended cannot be apprehended because of utter purity, the emptiness of nonentities cannot be apprehended because of utter purity, the emptiness of essential nature cannot be apprehended because of utter purity, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities cannot be apprehended because of utter purity.

10.255 “The applications of mindfulness cannot be apprehended because of utter purity, the correct exertions cannot be apprehended because of utter purity, the supports for miraculous ability cannot be apprehended because of utter purity, the faculties cannot be apprehended because of utter purity, the powers cannot be apprehended because of utter purity, the branches of enlightenment cannot be apprehended because of utter purity, and the noble eightfold path cannot be apprehended because of utter purity.

10.256 “The truths of the noble ones cannot be apprehended because of utter purity, the meditative concentrations cannot be apprehended because of utter purity, the immeasurable attitudes cannot be apprehended because of utter purity, the formless absorptions cannot be apprehended because of utter purity, the liberations cannot be apprehended because of utter purity, the serial steps of meditative absorption cannot be apprehended because of utter purity, the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation cannot be apprehended because of utter purity, the extrasensory powers cannot be apprehended [F.236.b] because of utter purity, the meditative stabilities cannot be apprehended because of utter purity, the dhāraṇī gateways cannot be apprehended because of utter purity, the powers of the tathāgatas cannot be apprehended because of utter purity, the fearlessnesses cannot be apprehended because of utter purity, the kinds of exact knowledge cannot be apprehended because of utter purity, great compassion cannot be apprehended because of utter purity, and the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas cannot be apprehended because of utter purity.

10.257 “Those who have entered the stream cannot be apprehended because of utter purity, once-returners cannot be apprehended because of utter purity, non-returners cannot be apprehended because of utter purity, arhats cannot be apprehended because of utter purity, pratyekabuddhas cannot be apprehended because of utter purity, bodhisattvas cannot be apprehended because of utter purity, and tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas cannot be apprehended because of utter purity. The fruit of having entered the stream cannot be apprehended because of utter purity, the fruit of once-returner cannot be apprehended because of utter purity, the fruit of non-returner cannot be apprehended because of utter purity, arhatship cannot be apprehended because of utter purity, individual enlightenment cannot be apprehended because of utter purity, the knowledge of the aspects of the path cannot be apprehended because of utter purity, and all-aspect omniscience cannot be apprehended because of utter purity. Nonarising cannot be apprehended [F.237.a] because of utter purity, nonceasing cannot be apprehended because of utter purity, nondefilement cannot be apprehended because of utter purity, nonpurification cannot be apprehended because of utter purity, and nonconditioning cannot be apprehended because of utter purity. The limits of past time cannot be apprehended because of utter purity, the limits of future time cannot be apprehended because of utter purity, the present cannot be apprehended because of utter purity, coming cannot be apprehended because of utter purity, going cannot be apprehended because of utter purity, abiding cannot be apprehended because of utter purity, death cannot be apprehended because of utter purity, birth cannot be apprehended because of utter purity, decrease cannot be apprehended because of utter purity, and increase cannot be apprehended because of utter purity.

10.258 “If you ask, on account of not apprehending, what are all not apprehended, the realm of phenomena is not apprehended because of not apprehending<sup>573</sup> the realm of phenomena. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the realm of phenomena that is not apprehended is neither apprehended, nor is it not apprehended.

10.259 “The real nature is not apprehended because of not apprehending the real nature. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the real nature that is not apprehended is neither apprehended, nor is it not apprehended. The very limit of reality is not apprehended because of not apprehending the very limit of reality. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the very limit of reality that is not apprehended is neither apprehended, nor is it not apprehended. The expanse of the inconceivable is not [F.237.b] apprehended because of not apprehending the expanse of the inconceivable. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the expanse of the inconceivable that is not apprehended is neither apprehended, nor is it not apprehended. The aggregates, the sensory elements, and the sense fields are not apprehended because of not apprehending the aggregates, the sensory elements, and the sense fields. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the aggregates, the sensory elements, and the sense fields that are not apprehended are neither apprehended, nor are they not apprehended. Dependent origination is not apprehended because of not apprehending dependent origination. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because dependent origination that is not apprehended is neither apprehended, nor is it not apprehended.

10.260 “The perfection of generosity is not apprehended because of not apprehending the perfection of generosity. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the perfection of generosity that is not apprehended is neither apprehended, nor is it not apprehended. The perfection of ethical discipline is not apprehended because of not apprehending the perfection of ethical discipline. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the perfection of ethical discipline that is not apprehended is neither apprehended, nor is it not apprehended. The perfection of tolerance is not apprehended because of not apprehending the perfection of tolerance. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the perfection of tolerance that is not apprehended is neither apprehended, nor is it not apprehended. The perfection of perseverance is not apprehended because of not apprehending the perfection of perseverance. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the perfection of perseverance that is not apprehended is neither apprehended, nor is it not apprehended. [F.238.a] The perfection of meditative concentration is not apprehended because of not apprehending the perfection of meditative concentration. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the perfection of meditative concentration that is not apprehended is neither apprehended, nor is it not apprehended. The perfection of wisdom is not apprehended because of not apprehending the perfection of wisdom. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the perfection of wisdom that is not apprehended is neither apprehended, nor is it not apprehended.

10.261 “The emptiness of internal phenomena is not apprehended because of not apprehending the emptiness of internal phenomena. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the emptiness of internal phenomena that is not apprehended is neither apprehended, nor is it not apprehended. The emptiness of external phenomena is not apprehended because of not apprehending the emptiness of external phenomena. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the emptiness of external phenomena that is not apprehended is neither apprehended, nor is it not apprehended. The emptiness of external and internal phenomena is not apprehended because of not apprehending the emptiness of external and internal phenomena. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the emptiness of external and internal phenomena that is not apprehended is neither apprehended, nor is it not apprehended. The emptiness of emptiness is not apprehended because of not apprehending the emptiness of emptiness. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the emptiness of emptiness that is not apprehended is neither apprehended, nor is it not apprehended. The emptiness of great extent is not apprehended because of not apprehending the emptiness of great extent. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the emptiness of great extent that is not apprehended is neither apprehended, nor is it not apprehended. The emptiness of ultimate reality is not apprehended because of not apprehending the emptiness of ultimate reality. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the emptiness of ultimate reality that is not apprehended [F.238.b] is neither apprehended, nor is it not apprehended. The emptiness of conditioned phenomena is not apprehended because of not apprehending the emptiness of conditioned phenomena. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the emptiness of conditioned phenomena that is not apprehended is neither apprehended, nor is it not apprehended. The emptiness of unconditioned phenomena is not apprehended because of not apprehending the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena that is not apprehended is neither apprehended, nor is it not apprehended. The emptiness of the unlimited is not apprehended because of not apprehending the emptiness of the unlimited. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the emptiness of the unlimited that is not apprehended is neither apprehended, nor is it not apprehended. The emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end is not apprehended because of not apprehending the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end that is not apprehended is neither apprehended, nor is it not apprehended. The emptiness of nonexclusion is not apprehended because of not apprehending the emptiness of nonexclusion. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the emptiness of nonexclusion that is not apprehended is neither apprehended, nor is it not apprehended. The emptiness of inherent nature is not apprehended because of not apprehending the emptiness of inherent nature. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the emptiness of inherent nature that is not apprehended is neither apprehended, nor is it not apprehended. The emptiness of all phenomena is not apprehended because of not apprehending the emptiness of all phenomena. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the emptiness of all phenomena that is not apprehended is neither apprehended, nor is it not apprehended. [F.239.a] The emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics is not apprehended because of not apprehending the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics that is not apprehended is neither apprehended, nor is it not apprehended. The emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended is not apprehended because of not apprehending the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended that is not apprehended is neither apprehended, nor is it not apprehended. The emptiness of nonentities is not apprehended because of not apprehending the emptiness of nonentities. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the emptiness of nonentities that is not apprehended is neither apprehended, nor is it not apprehended. The emptiness of essential nature is not apprehended because of not apprehending the emptiness of essential nature. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the emptiness of essential nature that is not apprehended is neither apprehended, nor is it not apprehended. The emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities is not apprehended because of not apprehending the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities that is not apprehended is neither apprehended, nor is it not apprehended.

10.262 “The applications of mindfulness are not apprehended because of not apprehending the applications of mindfulness. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the applications of mindfulness that are not apprehended are neither apprehended, nor are they not apprehended. The correct exertions are not apprehended because of not apprehending the correct exertions. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the correct exertions that are not apprehended are neither apprehended, nor are they not apprehended. The supports [F.239.b] for miraculous ability are not apprehended because of not apprehending the supports for miraculous ability. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the supports for miraculous ability that are not apprehended are neither apprehended, nor are they not apprehended. The faculties are not apprehended because of not apprehending the faculties. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the faculties that are not apprehended are neither apprehended, nor are they not apprehended. the powers are not apprehended because of not apprehending the powers. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the powers that are not apprehended are neither apprehended, nor are they not apprehended. The branches of enlightenment are not apprehended because of not apprehending the branches of enlightenment. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the branches of enlightenment that are not apprehended are neither apprehended, nor are they not apprehended. The noble eightfold path is not apprehended because of not apprehending the noble eightfold path. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the noble eightfold path that is not apprehended is neither apprehended, nor is it not apprehended.

10.263 “The truths of the noble ones are not apprehended because of not apprehending the truths of the noble ones. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the truths of the noble ones that are not apprehended are neither apprehended, nor are they not apprehended. The meditative concentrations are not apprehended because of not apprehending the meditative concentrations. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the meditative concentrations that are not apprehended are neither apprehended, nor are they not apprehended. The immeasurable attitudes are not apprehended because of not apprehending the immeasurable attitudes. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the immeasurable attitudes that are not apprehended are neither apprehended, nor are they not apprehended. The formless [F.240.a] absorptions are not apprehended because of not apprehending the formless absorptions. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the formless absorptions that are not apprehended are neither apprehended, nor are they not apprehended. The liberations are not apprehended because of not apprehending the liberations. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the liberations that are not apprehended are neither apprehended, nor are they not apprehended. The serial steps of meditative absorption are not apprehended because of not apprehending the serial steps of meditative absorption. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the serial steps of meditative absorption that are not apprehended are neither apprehended, nor are they not apprehended. The emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation are not apprehended because of not apprehending the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation that are not apprehended are neither apprehended, nor are they not apprehended. The extrasensory powers are not apprehended because of not apprehending the extrasensory powers. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the extrasensory powers that are not apprehended are neither apprehended, nor are they not apprehended. The meditative stabilities are not apprehended because of not apprehending the meditative stabilities. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the meditative stabilities that are not apprehended are neither apprehended, nor are they not apprehended. The dhāraṇī [F.240.b] gateways are not apprehended because of not apprehending the dhāraṇī gateways. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the dhāraṇī gateways that are not apprehended are neither apprehended, nor are they not apprehended.

10.264 “The powers of the tathāgatas are not apprehended because of not apprehending the powers of the tathāgatas. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the powers of the tathāgatas that are not apprehended are neither apprehended, nor are they not apprehended. The fearlessnesses are not apprehended because of not apprehending the fearlessnesses. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the fearlessnesses that are not apprehended are neither apprehended, nor are they not apprehended. The kinds of exact knowledge are not apprehended because of not apprehending the kinds of exact knowledge. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the kinds of exact knowledge that are not apprehended are neither apprehended, nor are they not apprehended. Great loving kindness is not apprehended because of not apprehending great loving kindness. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because great loving kindness that is not apprehended is neither apprehended, nor is it not apprehended. Great compassion is not apprehended because of not apprehending great compassion. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because great compassion that is not apprehended is neither apprehended, nor is it not apprehended. The eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas are not apprehended because of not apprehending the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas that are not apprehended are neither apprehended, nor are they not apprehended.

10.265 “Those who have entered the stream are not apprehended because of not apprehending those who have entered the stream. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because those who have entered the stream who are not apprehended [F.241.a] are neither apprehended, nor are they not apprehended. Once-returners are not apprehended because of not apprehending once-returners. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because once-returners who are not apprehended are neither apprehended, nor are they not apprehended. Non-returners are not apprehended because of not apprehending non-returners. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because non-returners who are not apprehended are neither apprehended, nor are they not apprehended. Arhats are not apprehended because of not apprehending arhats. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because arhats who are not apprehended are neither apprehended, nor are they not apprehended. Pratyekabuddhas are not apprehended because of not apprehending pratyekabuddhas. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because pratyekabuddhas who are not apprehended are neither apprehended, nor are they not apprehended. Bodhisattvas are not apprehended because of not apprehending bodhisattvas. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because bodhisattvas who are not apprehended are neither apprehended, nor are they not apprehended. Tathāgatas are not apprehended because of not apprehending tathāgatas. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because tathāgatas who are not apprehended are neither apprehended, nor are they not apprehended.

10.266 “The fruit of having entered the stream is not apprehended because of not apprehending the fruit of having entered the stream. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the fruit of having entered the stream that is not apprehended is neither apprehended, nor is it not apprehended. The fruit of once-returner is not apprehended because of [F.241.b] not apprehending the fruit of once-returner. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the fruit of once-returner that is not apprehended is neither apprehended, nor is it not apprehended. The fruit of non-returner is not apprehended because of not apprehending the fruit of non-returner. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the fruit of non-returner that is not apprehended is neither apprehended, nor is it not apprehended. Arhatship is not apprehended because of not apprehending arhatship. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because arhatship that is not apprehended is neither apprehended, nor is it not apprehended. Individual enlightenment is not apprehended because of not apprehending individual enlightenment. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because individual enlightenment that is not apprehended is neither apprehended, nor is it not apprehended. The knowledge of the aspects of the path is not apprehended because of not apprehending the knowledge of the aspects of the path. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the knowledge of the aspects of the path that is not apprehended is neither apprehended, nor is it not apprehended. All-aspect omniscience is not apprehended because of not apprehending all-aspect omniscience. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because all-aspect omniscience that is not apprehended is neither apprehended, nor is it not apprehended.

10.267 “Nonarising is not apprehended because of not apprehending nonarising. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because nonarising that is not apprehended is neither apprehended, nor is it not apprehended. Nonceasing is not apprehended because of not apprehending nonceasing. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because nonceasing that is not apprehended is neither apprehended, nor is it not apprehended. Nondefilement [F.242.a] is not apprehended because of not apprehending nondefilement. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because nondefilement that is not apprehended is neither apprehended, nor is it not apprehended. Nonpurification is not apprehended because of not apprehending nonpurification. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because nonpurification that is not apprehended is neither apprehended, nor is it not apprehended. Nonconditioning is not apprehended because of not apprehending nonconditioning. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because nonconditioning that is not apprehended is neither apprehended, nor is it not apprehended.

10.268 “The limits of past time are not apprehended because of not apprehending the limits of past time. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the limits of past time that are not apprehended are neither apprehended, nor are they not apprehended. The limits of future time are not apprehended because of not apprehending the limits of future time. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the limits of future time that are not apprehended are neither apprehended, nor are they not apprehended. The present is not apprehended because of not apprehending the present. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the present that is not apprehended is neither apprehended, nor is it not apprehended.

10.269 “Coming is not apprehended because of not apprehending coming. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because coming that is not apprehended is neither apprehended, nor is it not apprehended. Going is not apprehended because of not apprehending going. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because going that is not apprehended is neither apprehended, nor is it not apprehended. Abiding is not apprehended because of not apprehending abiding. If you ask why, Subhūti, [F.242.b] it is because abiding that is not apprehended is neither apprehended, nor is it not apprehended. Death is not apprehended because of not apprehending death. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because death that is not apprehended is neither apprehended, nor is it not apprehended. Birth is not apprehended because of not apprehending birth. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because birth that is not apprehended is neither apprehended, nor is it not apprehended. Decrease is not apprehended because of not apprehending decrease. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because decrease that is not apprehended is neither apprehended, nor is it not apprehended. Increase is not apprehended because of not apprehending increase. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because increase that is not apprehended is neither apprehended, nor is it not apprehended.

10.270 “The first level is not apprehended because of not apprehending the first level. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the first level that is not apprehended is neither apprehended, nor is it not apprehended. The second level is not apprehended because of not apprehending the second level. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the second level that is not apprehended is neither apprehended, nor is it not apprehended. The third level is not apprehended because of not apprehending the third level. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the third level that is not apprehended is neither apprehended, nor is it not apprehended. The fourth level is not apprehended because of not apprehending the fourth level. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the fourth level that is not apprehended is neither apprehended, nor is it not apprehended. The fifth level is not apprehended because of not apprehending the fifth level. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the fifth level [F.243.a] that is not apprehended is neither apprehended, nor is it not apprehended. The sixth level is not apprehended because of not apprehending the sixth level. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the sixth level that is not apprehended is neither apprehended, nor is it not apprehended. The seventh level is not apprehended because of not apprehending the seventh level. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the seventh level that is not apprehended is neither apprehended, nor is it not apprehended. The eighth level is not apprehended because of not apprehending the eighth level. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the eighth level that is not apprehended is neither apprehended, nor is it not apprehended. The ninth level is not apprehended because of not apprehending the ninth level. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the ninth level that is not apprehended is neither apprehended, nor is it not apprehended. The tenth level is not apprehended because of not apprehending the tenth level. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the tenth level that is not apprehended is neither apprehended, nor is it not apprehended.

10.271 “If, among them, you ask what the first level is, what the second level is, what the third level is, what the fourth level is, what the fifth level is, what the sixth level is, what the seventh level is, what the eighth level is, what the ninth level is, and what the tenth level is, they are, respectively, the level of bright insight, the level of the spiritual family, the eighth level, the level of insight, the level of attenuated refinement, the level of no attachment, the level of the achievement of realization, the level of the pratyekabuddhas, the level of the bodhisattvas, and the level of the buddhas.

10.272 “Because of the emptiness of internal phenomena the first level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of external phenomena the first level is not [F.243.b] apprehended; because of the emptiness of external and internal phenomena the first level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of emptiness the first level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of great extent the first level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of ultimate reality the first level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of conditioned phenomena the first level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena the first level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of the unlimited the first level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end the first level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of nonexclusion the first level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of inherent nature the first level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of all phenomena the first level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics the first level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended the first level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of nonentities the first level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of essential nature the first level is not apprehended; and because of the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities the first level is not apprehended.

10.273 “Because of the emptiness of internal phenomena the second level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of external phenomena the second level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of external and internal phenomena the second level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of emptiness the second level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of great extent the second level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of ultimate reality the second level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of conditioned phenomena the second level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena the second level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of the unlimited the second level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end [F.244.a] the second level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of nonexclusion the second level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of inherent nature the second level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of all phenomena the second level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics the second level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended the second level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of nonentities the second level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of essential nature the second level is not apprehended; and because of the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities the second level is not apprehended.

10.274 “Because of the emptiness of internal phenomena the third level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of external phenomena the third level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of external and internal phenomena the third level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of emptiness the third level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of great extent the third level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of ultimate reality the third level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of conditioned phenomena the third level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena the third level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of the unlimited the third level is not apprehended;

because of the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end the third level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of nonexclusion the third level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of inherent nature the third level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of all phenomena the third level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics the third level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended the third level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of nonentities the third level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of essential nature [F.244.b] the third level is not apprehended; and because of the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities the third level is not apprehended.

10.275 “Because of the emptiness of internal phenomena the fourth level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of external phenomena the fourth level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of external and internal phenomena the fourth level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of emptiness the fourth level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of great extent the fourth level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of ultimate reality the fourth level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of conditioned phenomena the fourth level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena the fourth level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of the unlimited the fourth level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end the fourth level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of nonexclusion the fourth level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of inherent nature the fourth level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of all phenomena the fourth level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics the fourth level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended the fourth level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of nonentities the fourth level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of essential nature the fourth level is not apprehended; and because of the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities the fourth level is not apprehended.

10.276 “Because of the emptiness of internal phenomena the fifth level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of external phenomena the fifth level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of external and internal phenomena the fifth level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of emptiness the fifth level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of great extent the fifth level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of ultimate reality the fifth level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of conditioned phenomena the fifth level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena [F.245.a] the fifth level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of the unlimited the fifth level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end the fifth level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of nonexclusion the fifth level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of inherent nature the fifth level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of all phenomena the fifth level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics the fifth level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended the fifth level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of nonentities the fifth level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of essential nature the fifth level is not apprehended; and because of the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities the fifth level is not apprehended.

10.277 “Because of the emptiness of internal phenomena the sixth level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of external phenomena the sixth level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of external and internal phenomena the sixth level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of emptiness the sixth level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of great extent the sixth level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of ultimate reality the sixth level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of conditioned phenomena the sixth level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena the sixth level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of the unlimited the sixth level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end the sixth level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of nonexclusion the sixth level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of inherent nature the sixth level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of all phenomena the sixth level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics the sixth level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended the sixth level is not [F.245.b] apprehended; because of the emptiness of nonentities the sixth level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of essential nature the sixth level is not apprehended; and because of the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities the sixth level is not apprehended.

10.278 “Because of the emptiness of internal phenomena the seventh level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of external phenomena the seventh level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of external and internal phenomena the seventh level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of emptiness the seventh level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of great extent the seventh level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of ultimate reality the seventh level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of conditioned phenomena the seventh level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena the seventh level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of the unlimited the seventh level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end the seventh level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of nonexclusion the seventh level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of inherent nature the seventh level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of all phenomena the seventh level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics the seventh level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended the seventh level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of nonentities the seventh level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of essential nature the seventh level is not apprehended; and because of the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities the seventh level is not apprehended.

10.279 “Because of the emptiness of internal phenomena the eighth level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of external phenomena the eighth level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of external and internal phenomena the eighth level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of emptiness the eighth level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of great extent the eighth level is not [F.246.a] apprehended; because of the emptiness of ultimate reality the eighth level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of conditioned phenomena the eighth level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena the eighth level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of the unlimited the eighth level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end the eighth level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of nonexclusion the eighth level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of inherent nature the eighth level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of all phenomena the eighth level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics the eighth level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended the eighth level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of nonentities the eighth level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of essential nature the eighth level is not apprehended; and because of the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities the eighth level is not apprehended.

10.280 “Because of the emptiness of internal phenomena the ninth level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of external phenomena the ninth level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of external and internal phenomena the ninth level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of emptiness the ninth level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of great extent the ninth level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of ultimate reality the ninth level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of conditioned phenomena the ninth level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena the ninth level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of the unlimited the ninth level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end the ninth level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of nonexclusion the ninth level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of inherent nature [F.246.b] the ninth level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of all phenomena the ninth level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics the ninth level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended the ninth level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of nonentities the ninth level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of essential nature the ninth level is not apprehended; and because of the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities the ninth level is not apprehended.

10.281     “Because of the emptiness of internal phenomena the tenth level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of external phenomena the tenth level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of external and internal phenomena the tenth level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of emptiness the tenth level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of great extent the tenth level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of ultimate reality the tenth level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of conditioned phenomena the tenth level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena the tenth level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of the unlimited the tenth level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end the tenth level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of nonexclusion the tenth level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of inherent nature the tenth level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of all phenomena the tenth level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics the tenth level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended the tenth level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of nonentities the tenth level is not apprehended; because of the emptiness of essential nature the tenth level is not apprehended; and because of the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities the tenth level is not apprehended.

10.282      “If you ask why, [F.247.a] Subhūti, it is because the first level that cannot be apprehended because of utter purity is neither apprehended, nor is it not apprehended; the second level that cannot be apprehended because of utter purity is neither apprehended, nor is it not apprehended; the third level that cannot be apprehended because of utter purity is neither apprehended, nor is it not apprehended; the fourth level that cannot be apprehended because of utter purity is neither apprehended, nor is it not apprehended; the fifth level that cannot be apprehended because of utter purity is neither apprehended, nor is it not apprehended; the sixth level that cannot be apprehended because of utter purity is neither apprehended, nor is it not apprehended; the seventh level that cannot be apprehended because of utter purity is neither apprehended, nor is it not apprehended; the eighth level that cannot be apprehended because of utter purity is neither apprehended, nor is it not apprehended; the ninth level that cannot be apprehended because of utter purity is neither apprehended, nor is it not apprehended; and the tenth level that cannot be apprehended because of utter purity is neither apprehended, nor is it not apprehended.

10.283      “Owing to the emptiness of internal phenomena, because of utter purity the maturation of beings is not apprehended. Owing to the emptiness of external phenomena, because of utter purity the maturation of beings is not apprehended. Owing to the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, because of utter purity the maturation of beings is not apprehended. Owing to the emptiness of emptiness, [F.247.b] because of utter purity the maturation of beings is not apprehended. Owing to the emptiness of great extent, because of utter purity the maturation of beings is not apprehended. Owing to the emptiness of ultimate reality, because of utter purity the maturation of beings is not apprehended. Owing to the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, because of utter purity the maturation of beings is not apprehended. Owing to the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, because of utter purity the maturation of beings is not apprehended. Owing to the emptiness of the unlimited, because of utter purity the maturation of beings is not apprehended. Owing to the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, because of utter purity the maturation of beings is not apprehended. Owing to the emptiness of nonexclusion, because of utter purity the maturation of beings is not apprehended. Owing to the emptiness of inherent nature, because of utter purity the maturation of beings is not apprehended. Owing to the emptiness of all phenomena, because of utter purity the maturation of beings is not apprehended. Owing to the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, because of utter purity the maturation of beings is not apprehended. Owing to the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, because of utter purity the maturation of beings is not apprehended. Owing to [F.248.a] the emptiness of nonentities, because of utter purity the maturation of beings is not apprehended. Owing to the emptiness of essential nature, because of utter purity the maturation of beings is not apprehended. Owing to the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities, because of utter purity the maturation of beings is not apprehended.

10.284 “Owing to the emptiness of internal phenomena, because of utter purity the refinement of a buddhafield is not apprehended. Owing to the emptiness of external phenomena, because of utter purity the refinement of a buddhafield is not apprehended. Owing to the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, because of utter purity the refinement of a buddhafield is not apprehended. Owing to the emptiness of emptiness, because of utter purity the refinement of a buddhafield is not apprehended. Owing to the emptiness of great extent, because of utter purity the refinement of a buddhafield is not apprehended. Owing to the emptiness of ultimate reality, because of utter purity the refinement of a buddhafield is not apprehended. Owing to the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, because of utter purity the refinement of a buddhafield is not apprehended. Owing to the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, because of utter purity the refinement of a buddhafield is not apprehended. Owing to the emptiness of the unlimited, because of utter purity the refinement of a buddhafield [F.248.b] is not apprehended. Owing to the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, because of utter purity the refinement of a buddhafield is not apprehended. Owing to the emptiness of nonexclusion, because of utter purity the refinement of a buddhafield is not apprehended. Owing to the emptiness of inherent nature, because of utter purity the refinement of a buddhafield is not apprehended. Owing to the emptiness of all phenomena, because of utter purity the refinement of a buddhafield is not apprehended. Owing to the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, because of utter purity the refinement of a buddhafield is not apprehended. Owing to the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, because of utter purity the refinement of a buddhafield is not apprehended. Owing to the emptiness of nonentities, because of utter purity the refinement of a buddhafield is not apprehended. Owing to the emptiness of essential nature, because of utter purity the refinement of a buddhafield is not apprehended. Owing to the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities, because of utter purity the refinement of a buddhafield is not apprehended.

10.285 “Owing to the emptiness of internal phenomena, because of utter purity the five eyes are not apprehended. Owing to the emptiness of external phenomena, because of utter purity the five eyes are not apprehended. Owing to the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, because of utter purity the five eyes are not apprehended. Owing to the emptiness of emptiness, because of utter purity the five eyes are not apprehended. Owing to the emptiness [F.249.a] of great extent, because of utter purity the five eyes are not apprehended. Owing to the emptiness of ultimate reality, because of utter purity the five eyes are not apprehended. Owing to the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, because of utter purity the five eyes are not apprehended. Owing to the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, because of utter purity the five eyes are not apprehended. Owing to the emptiness of the unlimited, because of utter purity the five eyes are not apprehended. Owing to the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, because of utter purity the five eyes are not apprehended. Owing to the emptiness of nonexclusion, because of utter purity the five eyes are not apprehended. Owing to the emptiness of inherent nature, because of utter purity the five eyes are not apprehended. Owing to the emptiness of all phenomena, because of utter purity the five eyes are not apprehended. Owing to the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, because of utter purity the five eyes are not apprehended. Owing to the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, because of utter purity the five eyes are not apprehended. Owing to the emptiness of nonentities, because of utter purity the five eyes are not apprehended. Owing to the emptiness of essential nature, because of utter purity the five eyes are not apprehended. Owing to the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities, because of utter purity the five eyes are not apprehended.

10.286 “So it is, Subhūti, that bodhisattva great beings practicing the perfection of wisdom will attain emancipation in all-aspect omniscience in the Great Vehicle through not apprehending [F.249.b] any phenomena.

10.287 This completes the tenth chapter from The Perfection of Wisdom in One Hundred Thousand Lines. [B18]

11.

CHAPTER 11

- 11.1 Then the venerable Subhūti said to the Blessed One, “Blessed Lord, the Great Vehicle is called a ‘Great Vehicle.’ It outshines the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attains emancipation;<sup>574</sup> that is why it is called a Great Vehicle.
- 11.2 “Blessed Lord, this Great Vehicle is the same as space. Just as space gives space to<sup>575</sup> countless, immeasurable beings, similarly this Great Vehicle also gives space to countless, immeasurable beings. For this reason, Blessed Lord, this is the Great Vehicle of bodhisattva great beings. For this Great Vehicle, going and coming are not discerned,<sup>576</sup> nor standing still. The limit of the past, the limit of the future, and a middle are also not discerned.
- 11.3 “Blessed Lord, to illustrate, just as for space neither going or coming is discerned, and standing still too is not discerned, similarly, for this Great Vehicle, going is not apprehended, an attainment of emancipation is not apprehended, and standing still is not apprehended.
- 11.4 “Blessed Lord, to illustrate, just as, because of the sameness of the three times, for space the limit of the past is not apprehended, the limit of the future is not apprehended, and a middle is not apprehended, similarly for this Great Vehicle, also, because of the sameness of the three times, the limit of the past is not apprehended, the limit of the future is not apprehended, and a middle is not apprehended. Blessed Lord, it is a vehicle [F.250.a] that is the sameness of the three times; that is why it is called a Great Vehicle.
- 11.5 The Blessed One said, “That is so, Subhūti, that is so! These six perfections—namely, the perfection of generosity, the perfection of ethical discipline, the perfection of tolerance, the perfection of perseverance, the perfection of meditative concentration, and the perfection of wisdom—are the Great Vehicle of bodhisattva great beings. This is called the Great Vehicle of bodhisattva great beings.

11.6 “Moreover, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle of bodhisattva great beings is all the dhāraṇī gateways and all these gateways of meditative stability,<sup>577</sup> namely, the meditative stability heroic valor, the meditative stability precious seal, the meditative stability lion’s play, the meditative stability beautiful moon, the meditative stability crest of the moon’s victory banner, the meditative stability surpassing all phenomena, the meditative stability seal of all phenomena, the meditative stability surveying the crown pinnacle, the meditative stability certainty in the realm of phenomena, the meditative stability crest of certainty’s victory banner, the meditative stability vajra, the meditative stability seal of entry into all phenomena, the meditative stability well established as the king of meditative stabilities, the meditative stability excellently well established, the meditative stability well-founded king of meditative stabilities, the meditative stability diffusion of light rays, the meditative stability without mistakes, the meditative stability because of the diffusion of light rays not making mistakes, [F.250.b] the meditative stability power of effort, the meditative stability array of power, the meditative stability exalted, the meditative stability engaging with certainty in lexical explanations, the meditative stability entry into designations, the meditative stability observation of spatial directions, the meditative stability sealed with the seal, the meditative stability unimpaired, the meditative stability oceanic seal gathering all phenomena, the meditative stability seal of the king, the meditative stability permeation of space, the meditative stability vajra maṇḍala, the meditative stability purified of the three spheres, the meditative stability shoulder ornament of the victory banner’s crest, the meditative stability Indra’s crest, the meditative stability pursuit of the stream, the meditative stability yawning lion, the meditative stability stretching lion, the meditative stability stretching-out lion, the meditative stability beyond sequence, the meditative stability without attachment or impediment, the meditative stability repudiation of afflicted mental states, the meditative stability illumination, the meditative stability unseeking, the meditative stability no fixed abode, the meditative stability free from mentation, the meditative stability taming the four māras, the meditative stability stainless lamplight, the meditative stability boundless light, the meditative stability illuminator, the meditative stability total illumination, the meditative stability pure supremacy, the meditative stability stainless light, the meditative stability bringer of joy, the meditative stability lightning lamp, the meditative stability inexhaustible, the meditative stability unvanquished, the meditative stability majestic, the meditative stability [F.251.a] free from extinction, the meditative stability unmoving, the meditative stability calmed, the meditative stability imperishable, the meditative stability lamp of the sun, the meditative stability immaculate moon, the meditative stability clear-eyed, the meditative stability lamp of wisdom, the meditative stability clear appearance, the meditative stability moon lamp, the meditative stability illuminating, the meditative stability does what needs to be done, the meditative stability glory of transcendental knowledge, the meditative stability vajra-like, the meditative stability stability of mind, the meditative stability total illumination, the meditative stability well situated, the meditative stability jewel cusp, the meditative stability seal of the supreme phenomenon, the meditative stability sameness of all phenomena, the meditative stability renunciation of delight, the meditative stability elevated by phenomena, the meditative stability expanded on account of being elevated by phenomena, the meditative stability jewel state, the meditative stability forsaking fights, the meditative stability dispersal, the meditative stability distinguishing the terms associated with all phenomena, the meditative stability determination, the meditative stability stainless performance, the meditative stability arranging the sameness of letters, the meditative stability devoid of letters, the meditative stability cutting off the objective support, the meditative stability unmodified, the meditative stability aspectless, the meditative stability entering into names and signs, the meditative stability free from activity, the meditative stability entering into the ascertainment of names, the meditative stability a practitioner without a dwelling, the meditative stability devoid of darkness, the meditative stability endowed with practice, the meditative stability unwavering, the meditative stability transcendence of the range, the meditative stability accumulation of all attributes, [F.251.b] the meditative stability abiding without mentation, the meditative stability abiding with certainty, the meditative stability blossoming and vibrance of the flowers of virtue, the meditative stability endowed with the branches of enlightenment, the meditative stability boundless eloquence, the meditative stability boundless lamplight, the meditative stability equal to the unequaled, the meditative stability transcending all phenomena, the meditative stability delineator, the meditative stability dispelling doubt, the meditative stability without settled focus, the meditative stability single array, the meditative stability manifest attainment of aspects, the meditative stability single aspect, the meditative stability nonexclusion of the aspect, the meditative stability supreme performance, the meditative stability comprehension of all bases of existence through realization, the meditative stability entrance to symbols and sounds, the meditative stability jewel heart, the meditative stability unattached to any phenomena, the meditative stability array of flashes of lightning, the meditative stability forsaking, the meditative stability lamp of doctrine, the meditative stability lamp of transcendental knowledge, the meditative stability manifest attainment of the miraculous ability to not return, the meditative stability devoid of vocalic syllables, the meditative stability burning lamp, the meditative stability purification of defining characteristics, the meditative stability nondistinguished, the meditative stability endowed with a distinct forbearance, the meditative stability endowed with all finest aspects, the meditative stability endowed with dhāraṇīs, the meditative stability absence of joy with respect to all happiness and suffering, the meditative stability [F.252.a] inexhaustible cornucopia, the meditative stability dhāraṇī intelligence, the meditative stability perfect elimination of right and wrong, the meditative stability perfect calming of all contradictions and refutations, the meditative stability no harmony or disharmony, the meditative stability taintless light, the meditative stability endowed with the essence, the meditative stability taintless light of the full moon, the meditative stability lightning light, the meditative stability great ornament, the meditative stability illuminator in all respects, the meditative stability protector of all worlds, the meditative stability sameness of meditative stability, the meditative stability with a dustless and dust-free principle, the meditative stability convergence in nonaffliction, the meditative stability convergence of all afflicted mental states in nonaffliction, the meditative stability intent on a dwelling that has not been apprehended, the meditative stability abiding in the real nature without mentation, the meditative stability self-originated from the vessel, the meditative stability incinerating all afflicted mental states, the meditative stability lamp of great transcendental knowledge, the meditative stability origin of the ten powers, the meditative stability opener of the gateways, the meditative stability dispelling the defects of corporeality, the meditative stability obliterating defects of speech, transforming them as if into space,<sup>578</sup> the meditative stability dispelling the defects of the mind, the meditative stability thorough investigation, the meditative stability space-like, and the meditative stability space-like and without attachment, hence free and without blemish. This is called the Great Vehicle of bodhisattva [F.252.b] great beings.

11.7 “Moreover, Subhūti, the Great Vehicle of bodhisattva great beings is this, namely, the emptiness of internal phenomena, the emptiness of external phenomena, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, the emptiness of emptiness, the emptiness of great extent, the emptiness of ultimate reality, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, the emptiness of the unlimited, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, the emptiness of nonexclusion, the emptiness of inherent nature, the emptiness of all phenomena, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, the emptiness of nonentities, the emptiness of essential nature, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities.

11.8 “Moreover, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle of bodhisattva great beings is the four applications of mindfulness, the four correct exertions, the four supports for miraculous ability, the five faculties, the five powers, the seven branches of enlightenment, and the noble eightfold path; the four truths of the noble ones, the four meditative concentrations, the four immeasurable attitudes, the four formless absorptions, the eight liberations, the nine serial steps of meditative absorption, the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation, the extrasensory powers, the meditative stabilities, and the dhāraṇī gateways; and the ten powers of the tathāgatas, the four fearlessnesses, the four kinds of exact knowledge, great compassion, and the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas. This is the Great Vehicle [F.253.a] of bodhisattva great beings.

11.9 “Subhūti, you said this Great Vehicle ‘outshines the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attains emancipation.’ If you ask what this world with its gods, humans, and asuras is, it is this, namely, the realm of desire, the realm of form, and the realm of formlessness.

11.10 “Subhūti, if the realm of desire were the real, the unmistakable real, the one and only real—that is to say, incontrovertible, true, and perfect, as things are, permanent, stable, eternal, and an entity endowed with the attribute of not changing<sup>579</sup>—then indeed this Great Vehicle would not outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. However, Subhūti, because this realm of desire is constructed, fashioned, and fabricated<sup>580</sup>—that is to say, is impermanent, unstable, not eternal, and a nonentity endowed with the attribute of changing—this Great Vehicle therefore does outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation.

11.11 “Subhūti, if the realm of form were the real, the unmistakable real, the one and only real—that is to say, incontrovertible, true, and perfect, as things are, permanent, stable, eternal, and an entity endowed with the attribute of not changing—then indeed this Great Vehicle would not outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. However, Subhūti, because this realm of form is constructed, fashioned, and fabricated—that is to say, is impermanent, unstable, not eternal, and a nonentity endowed with the attribute of changing—this Great Vehicle therefore does outshine [F.253.b] the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation.

11.12 “Subhūti, if the realm of formlessness were the real, the unmistakable real, the one and only real—that is to say, incontrovertible, true, and perfect, as things are, permanent, stable, eternal, and an entity endowed with the attribute of not changing—then indeed this Great Vehicle would not outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. However, Subhūti, because this realm of formlessness is constructed, fashioned, and fabricated—that is to say, is impermanent, unstable, not eternal, and a nonentity endowed with the attribute of changing—this Great Vehicle therefore does outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation.

11.13      “Subhūti, if physical forms were the real, the unmistakable real, the one and only real—that is to say, incontrovertible, true, and perfect, as things are, permanent, stable, eternal, and entities endowed with the attribute of not changing—then indeed this Great Vehicle would not outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. However, Subhūti, because physical forms are constructed, fashioned, and fabricated—that is to say, are impermanent, unstable, not eternal, and nonentities endowed with the attribute of changing—this Great [F.254.a] Vehicle therefore does outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. Subhūti, if feelings were the real, the unmistakable real, the one and only real—that is to say, incontrovertible, true, and perfect, as things are, permanent, stable, eternal, and entities endowed with the attribute of not changing—then indeed this Great Vehicle would not outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. However, Subhūti, because feelings are constructed, fashioned, and fabricated—that is to say, are impermanent, unstable, not eternal, and nonentities endowed with the attribute of changing—this Great Vehicle therefore does outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. Subhūti, if perceptions were the real, the unmistakable real, the one and only real—that is to say, incontrovertible, true, and perfect, as things are, permanent, stable, eternal, and entities endowed with the attribute of not changing—then indeed this Great Vehicle would not outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. However, Subhūti, because perceptions are constructed, fashioned, and fabricated—that is to say, are impermanent, unstable, not eternal, and nonentities endowed with the attribute of changing—this Great Vehicle therefore does outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. Subhūti, if formative predispositions were the real, the unmistakable real, the one and only real—that is to say, incontrovertible, true, and perfect, as things are, permanent, stable, eternal, and entities endowed with the attribute of not changing—then indeed this Great Vehicle would not outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. However, Subhūti, because formative predispositions are constructed, fashioned, and fabricated—that is to say, are impermanent, unstable, not eternal, and nonentities endowed with the attribute of changing—this [F.254.b] Great Vehicle therefore does outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. Subhūti, if consciousness were the real, the unmistakable real, the one and only real—that is to say, incontrovertible, true, and perfect, as things are, permanent, stable, eternal, and an entity endowed with the attribute of not changing—then indeed this Great Vehicle would not outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. However, Subhūti, because consciousness is constructed, fashioned, and fabricated—that is to say, is impermanent, unstable, not eternal, and a nonentity endowed with the attribute of changing—this Great Vehicle therefore does outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation.

11.14 “Subhūti, if the eyes were the real, the unmistakable real, the one and only real—that is to say, incontrovertible, true, and perfect, as things are, permanent, stable, eternal, and entities endowed with the attribute of not changing—then indeed this Great Vehicle would not outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. However, Subhūti, because the eyes are constructed, fashioned, and fabricated—that is to say, are impermanent, unstable, not eternal, and nonentities endowed with the attribute of changing—this Great Vehicle therefore does outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. Subhūti, if the ears were the real, the unmistakable real, the one and only real—that is to say, incontrovertible, true, and perfect, as things are, permanent, stable, eternal, and entities endowed with the attribute of not changing—then indeed this Great Vehicle [F.255.a] would not outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. However, Subhūti, because the ears are constructed, fashioned, and fabricated—that is to say, are impermanent, unstable, not eternal, and nonentities endowed with the attribute of changing—this Great Vehicle therefore does outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. Subhūti, if the nose were the real, the unmistakable real, the one and only real—that is to say, incontrovertible, true, and perfect, as things are, permanent, stable, eternal, and an entity endowed with the attribute of not changing—then indeed this Great Vehicle would not outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. However, Subhūti, because the nose is constructed, fashioned, and fabricated—that is to say, is impermanent, unstable, not eternal, and a nonentity endowed with the attribute of changing—this Great Vehicle therefore does outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. Subhūti, if the tongue were the real, the unmistakable real, the one and only real—that is to say, incontrovertible, true, and perfect, as things are, permanent, stable, eternal, and an entity endowed with the attribute of not changing—then indeed this Great Vehicle would not outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. However, Subhūti, because the tongue is constructed, fashioned, and fabricated—that is to say, is impermanent, unstable, not eternal, and a nonentity endowed with the attribute of changing—this Great Vehicle therefore does outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. Subhūti, if

[F.255.b] the body were the real, the unmistakable real, the one and only real—that is to say, incontrovertible, true, and perfect, as things are, permanent, stable, eternal, and an entity endowed with the attribute of not changing—then indeed this Great Vehicle would not outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. However, Subhūti, because the body is constructed, fashioned, and fabricated—that is to say, is impermanent, unstable, not eternal, and a nonentity endowed with the attribute of changing—this Great Vehicle therefore does outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. Subhūti, if the mental faculty were the real, the unmistakable real, the one and only real—that is to say, incontrovertible, true, and perfect, as things are, permanent, stable, eternal, and an entity endowed with the attribute of not changing—then indeed this Great Vehicle would not outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. However, Subhūti, because the mental faculty is constructed, fashioned, and fabricated—that is to say, are impermanent, unstable, not eternal, and a nonentity endowed with the attribute of changing—this Great Vehicle therefore does outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation.

11.15 “Subhūti, if sights were the real, the unmistakable real, the one and only real—that is to say, incontrovertible, true, and perfect, as things are, permanent, stable, eternal, and entities endowed with the attribute of not changing—then indeed this Great Vehicle would not outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. However, Subhūti, [F.256.a] because sights are constructed, fashioned, and fabricated—that is to say, are impermanent, unstable, not eternal, and nonentities endowed with the attribute of changing—this Great Vehicle therefore does outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. Subhūti, if sounds were the real, the unmistakable real, the one and only real—that is to say, incontrovertible, true, and perfect, as things are, permanent, stable, eternal, and entities endowed with the attribute of not changing—then indeed this Great Vehicle would not outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. However, Subhūti, because sounds are constructed, fashioned, and fabricated—that is to say, are impermanent, unstable, not eternal, and nonentities endowed with the attribute of changing—this Great Vehicle therefore does outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. Subhūti, if odors were the real, the unmistakable real, the one and only real—that is to say, incontrovertible, true, and perfect, as things are, permanent, stable, eternal, and entities endowed with the attribute of not changing—then indeed this Great Vehicle would not outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. However, Subhūti, because odors are constructed, fashioned, and fabricated—that is to say, are impermanent, unstable, not eternal, and nonentities endowed with the attribute of changing—this Great Vehicle therefore does outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. [F.256.b] Subhūti, if tastes were the real, the unmistakable real, the one and only real—that is to say, incontrovertible, true, and perfect, as things are, permanent, stable, eternal, and entities endowed with the attribute of not changing—then indeed this Great Vehicle would not outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. However, Subhūti, because tastes are constructed, fashioned, and fabricated—that is to say, are impermanent, unstable, not eternal, and nonentities endowed with the attribute of changing—this Great Vehicle therefore does outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. Subhūti, if tangibles were the real, the unmistakable real, the one and only real—that is to say, incontrovertible, true, and perfect, as things are, permanent, stable, eternal, and entities endowed with the attribute of not changing—then indeed this Great Vehicle would not outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. However, Subhūti, because tangibles are constructed, fashioned, and fabricated—that is to say, are impermanent, unstable, not eternal, and nonentities endowed with the attribute of changing—this Great Vehicle therefore does outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. Subhūti, if mental phenomena were the real, the unmistakable real, the one and only real—that is to say, incontrovertible, true, and perfect, as things are, permanent, stable, eternal, and entities endowed with the attribute of not changing—then indeed this Great Vehicle would not outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. However, Subhūti, [F.257.a] because mental phenomena are constructed, fashioned, and fabricated—that is to say, are impermanent, unstable, not eternal, and nonentities endowed with the attribute of changing—this Great Vehicle therefore does outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation.

11.16 “Subhūti, if visual consciousness were the real, the unmistakable real, the one and only real—that is to say, incontrovertible, true, and perfect, as things are, permanent, stable, eternal, and an entity endowed with the attribute of not changing—then indeed this Great Vehicle would not outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. However, Subhūti, because visual consciousness is constructed, fashioned, and fabricated—that is to say, is impermanent, unstable, not eternal, and a nonentity endowed with the attribute of changing—this Great Vehicle therefore does outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. Subhūti, if auditory consciousness were the real, the unmistakable real, the one and only real—that is to say, incontrovertible, true, and perfect, as things are, permanent, stable, eternal, and an entity endowed with the attribute of not changing—then indeed this Great Vehicle would not outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. However, Subhūti, because auditory consciousness is constructed, fashioned, and fabricated—that is to say, is impermanent, unstable, not eternal, and a nonentity endowed with the attribute of changing—this Great Vehicle therefore does outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. [F.257.b] Subhūti, if olfactory consciousness were the real, the unmistakable real, the one and only real—that is to say, incontrovertible, true, and perfect, as things are, permanent, stable, eternal, and an entity endowed with the attribute of not changing—then indeed this Great Vehicle would not outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. However, Subhūti, because olfactory consciousness is constructed, fashioned, and fabricated—that is to say, is impermanent, unstable, not eternal, and a nonentity endowed with the attribute of changing—this Great Vehicle therefore does outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. Subhūti, if gustatory consciousness were the real, the unmistakable real, the one and only real—that is to say, incontrovertible, true, and perfect, as things are, permanent, stable, eternal, and an entity endowed with the attribute of not changing—then indeed this Great Vehicle would not outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. However, Subhūti, because gustatory consciousness is constructed, fashioned, and fabricated—that is to say, is impermanent, unstable, not eternal, and a nonentity endowed with the attribute of changing—this Great Vehicle therefore does outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. Subhūti, if tactile consciousness were the real, the unmistakable real, the one and only real—that is to say, incontrovertible, true, and perfect, as things are, permanent, stable, eternal, and an entity endowed with the attribute of not changing—then indeed this Great Vehicle [F.258.a] would not outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. However, Subhūti, because tactile consciousness is constructed, fashioned, and fabricated—that is to say, is impermanent, unstable, not eternal, and a nonentity endowed with the attribute of changing—this Great Vehicle therefore does outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. Subhūti, if mental consciousness were the real, the unmistakable real, the one and only real—that is to say, incontrovertible, true, and perfect, as things are, permanent, stable, eternal, and an entity endowed with the attribute of not changing—then indeed this Great Vehicle would not outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. However, Subhūti, because mental consciousness is constructed, fashioned, and fabricated—that is to say, is impermanent, unstable, not eternal, and a nonentity endowed with the attribute of changing—this Great Vehicle therefore does outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation.

11.17 “Subhūti, if visually compounded sensory contact were the real, the unmistakable real, the one and only real—that is to say, incontrovertible, true, and perfect, as things are, permanent, stable, eternal, and an entity endowed with the attribute of not changing—then indeed this Great Vehicle would not outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. However, Subhūti, because visually compounded sensory contact is constructed, fashioned, and fabricated—that is to say, is impermanent, unstable, not eternal, and a nonentity [F.258.b] endowed with the attribute of changing—this Great Vehicle therefore does outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. Subhūti, if aurally compounded sensory contact were the real, the unmistakable real, the one and only real—that is to say, incontrovertible, true, and perfect, as things are, permanent, stable, eternal, and an entity endowed with the attribute of not changing—then indeed this Great Vehicle would not outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. However, Subhūti, because aurally compounded sensory contact is constructed, fashioned, and fabricated—that is to say, is impermanent, unstable, not eternal, and a nonentity endowed with the attribute of changing—this Great Vehicle therefore does outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. Subhūti, if nasally compounded sensory contact were the real, the unmistakable real, the one and only real—that is to say, incontrovertible, true, and perfect, as things are, permanent, stable, eternal, and an entity endowed with the attribute of not changing—then indeed this Great Vehicle would not outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. However, Subhūti, because nasally compounded sensory contact is constructed, fashioned, and fabricated—that is to say, is impermanent, unstable, not eternal, and a nonentity endowed with the attribute of changing—this Great Vehicle therefore does outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. Subhūti, if lingually compounded sensory contact were the real, the unmistakable real, the one and only real—that is to say, incontrovertible, true, and perfect, as things are, [F.259.a] permanent, stable, eternal, and an entity endowed with the attribute of not changing—then indeed this Great Vehicle would not outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. However, Subhūti, because lingually compounded sensory contact is constructed, fashioned, and fabricated—that is to say, is impermanent, unstable, not eternal, and a nonentity endowed with the attribute of changing—this Great Vehicle therefore does outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. Subhūti, if corporeally compounded sensory contact were the real, the unmistakable real, the one and only real—that is to say, incontrovertible, true, and perfect, as things are, permanent, stable, eternal, and an entity endowed with the attribute of not changing—then indeed this Great Vehicle would not outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. However, Subhūti, because corporeally compounded sensory contact is constructed, fashioned, and fabricated—that is to say, is impermanent, unstable, not eternal, and a nonentity endowed with the attribute of changing—this Great Vehicle therefore does outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. Subhūti, if mentally compounded sensory contact were the real, the unmistakable real, the one and only real—that is to say, incontrovertible, true, and perfect, as things are, permanent, stable, eternal, and an entity endowed with the attribute of not changing—then indeed this Great Vehicle would not outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. However, Subhūti, because mentally compounded [F.259.b] sensory contact is constructed, fashioned, and fabricated—that is to say, is impermanent, unstable, not eternal, and a nonentity endowed with the attribute of changing, this Great Vehicle therefore does outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation.

11.18 “Subhūti, if feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact were the real, the unmistakable real, the one and only real—that is to say, incontrovertible, true, and perfect, as things are, permanent, stable, eternal, and entities endowed with the attribute of not changing—then indeed this Great Vehicle would not outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. However, Subhūti, because feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact are constructed, fashioned, and fabricated—that is to say, are impermanent, unstable, not eternal, and nonentities endowed with the attribute of changing—this Great Vehicle therefore does outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. Subhūti, if feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact were the real, the unmistakable real, the one and only real—that is to say, incontrovertible, true, and perfect, as things are, permanent, stable, eternal, and entities endowed with the attribute of not changing—then indeed this Great Vehicle would not outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. However,

Subhūti, because feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact are constructed, fashioned, and fabricated—that is to say, are impermanent, unstable, not eternal, and nonentities endowed with the attribute of changing—this Great Vehicle therefore [F.260.a] does outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. Subhūti, if feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact were the real, the unmistakable real, the one and only real—that is to say, incontrovertible, true, and perfect, as things are, permanent, stable, eternal, and entities endowed with the attribute of not changing—then indeed this Great Vehicle would not outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. However, Subhūti, because feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact are constructed, fashioned, and fabricated—that is to say, are impermanent, unstable, not eternal, and nonentities endowed with the attribute of changing—this Great Vehicle therefore does outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. Subhūti, if feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact were the real, the unmistakable real, the one and only real—that is to say, incontrovertible, true, and perfect, as things are, permanent, stable, eternal, and entities endowed with the attribute of not changing—then indeed this Great Vehicle would not outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. However, Subhūti, because feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact are constructed, fashioned, and fabricated—that is to say, are impermanent, unstable, not eternal, and nonentities endowed with the attribute of changing—this Great Vehicle therefore does outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. Subhūti, if feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact were the real, the unmistakable real, [F.260.b] the one and only real—that is to say, incontrovertible, true, and perfect, as things are, permanent, stable, eternal, and entities endowed with the attribute of not changing—then indeed this Great Vehicle would not outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. However, Subhūti, because feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact are constructed, fashioned, and fabricated—that is to say, are impermanent, unstable, not eternal, and nonentities endowed with the attribute of changing—this Great Vehicle therefore does outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. Subhūti, if feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact were the real, the unmistakable real, the one and only real—that is to say, incontrovertible, true, and perfect, as things are, permanent, stable, eternal, and entities endowed with the attribute of not changing—then indeed this Great Vehicle would not outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. However, Subhūti, because feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact are constructed, fashioned, and fabricated—that is to say, are impermanent, unstable, not eternal, and nonentities endowed with the attribute of changing—this Great Vehicle therefore does outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation.

11.19 “Subhūti, if the earth element were the real, the unmistakable real, the one and only real—that is to say, incontrovertible, true, and perfect, as things are, permanent, stable, eternal, and an entity [F.261.a] endowed with the attribute of not changing—then indeed this Great Vehicle would not outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. However, Subhūti, because the earth element is constructed, fashioned, and fabricated—that is to say, is impermanent, unstable, not eternal, and a nonentity endowed with the attribute of changing—this Great Vehicle therefore does outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. Subhūti, if the water element were the real, the unmistakable real, the one and only real—that is to say, incontrovertible, true, and perfect, as things are, permanent, stable, eternal, and an entity endowed with the attribute of not changing—then indeed this Great Vehicle would not outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. However, Subhūti, because the water element is constructed, fashioned, and fabricated—that is to say, is impermanent, unstable, not eternal, and a nonentity endowed with the attribute of changing—this Great Vehicle therefore does outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. Subhūti, if the fire element were the real, the unmistakable real, the one and only real—that is to say, incontrovertible, true, and perfect, as things are, permanent, stable, eternal, and an entity endowed with the attribute of not changing—then indeed this Great Vehicle would not outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. However, Subhūti, because the fire element is constructed, fashioned, and fabricated—that is to say, is impermanent, unstable, not eternal, and [F.261.b] a nonentity endowed with the attribute of changing—this Great Vehicle therefore does outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. Subhūti, if the wind element were the real, the unmistakable real, the one and only real—that is to say, incontrovertible, true, and perfect, as things are, permanent, stable, eternal, and an entity endowed with the attribute of not changing—then indeed this Great Vehicle would not outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. However, Subhūti, because the wind element is constructed, fashioned, and fabricated—that is to say, is impermanent, unstable, not eternal, and a nonentity endowed with the attribute of changing—this Great Vehicle therefore does outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. Subhūti, if the consciousness element were the real, the unmistaken real, [F.262.a] the one and only real—that is to say, incontrovertible, true, and perfect, as things are, permanent, stable, eternal, and an entity endowed with the attribute of not changing—then indeed this Great Vehicle would not outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. However, Subhūti, because the consciousness element is constructed, fashioned, and fabricated—that is to say, is impermanent, unstable, not eternal, and a nonentity endowed with the attribute of changing—this Great Vehicle therefore does outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation.

11.20 “Subhūti, if ignorance were the real, the unmistaken real, the one and only real—that is to say, incontrovertible, true, and perfect, as things are, permanent, stable, eternal, and an entity endowed with the attribute of not changing—then indeed this Great Vehicle would not outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. However, Subhūti, because ignorance is constructed, fashioned, and fabricated—that is to say, is impermanent, unstable, not eternal, and a nonentity endowed with the attribute of changing—this Great Vehicle therefore does outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. Subhūti, if formative predispositions were the real, the unmistaken real, the one and only real—that is to say, incontrovertible, true, and perfect, as things are, permanent, stable, eternal, and entities endowed with the attribute of not changing—then indeed this [F.262.b] Great Vehicle would not outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. However, Subhūti, because formative predispositions are constructed, fashioned, and fabricated—that is to say, are impermanent, unstable, not eternal, and nonentities endowed with the attribute of changing—this Great Vehicle therefore does outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. Subhūti, if consciousness were the real, the unmistaken real, the one and only real—that is to say, incontrovertible, true, and perfect, as things are, permanent, stable, eternal, and an entity endowed with the attribute of not changing—then indeed this Great Vehicle would not outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. However, Subhūti, because consciousness is constructed, fashioned, and fabricated—that is to say, is impermanent, unstable, not eternal, and a nonentity endowed with the attribute of changing—this Great Vehicle therefore does outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. Subhūti, if name and form were the real, the unmistaken real, the one and only real—that is to say, incontrovertible, true, and perfect, as things are, permanent, stable, eternal, and entities endowed with the attribute of not changing—then indeed this Great Vehicle would not outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. However, Subhūti, because name and form are constructed, fashioned, and fabricated—that is to say, are impermanent, unstable, [F.263.a] not eternal, and nonentities endowed with the attribute of changing—this Great Vehicle therefore does outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. Subhūti, if the six sense fields were the real, the unmistakable real, the one and only real—that is to say, incontrovertible, true, and perfect, as things are, permanent, stable, eternal, and entities endowed with the attribute of not changing—then indeed this Great Vehicle would not outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. However, Subhūti, because the six sense fields are constructed, fashioned, and fabricated—that is to say, are impermanent, unstable, not eternal, and nonentities endowed with the attribute of changing—this Great Vehicle therefore does outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. Subhūti, if sensory contact were the real, the unmistakable real, the one and only real—that is to say, incontrovertible, true, and perfect, as things are, permanent, stable, eternal, and an entity endowed with the attribute of not changing—then indeed this Great Vehicle would not outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. However, Subhūti, because sensory contact is constructed, fashioned, and fabricated—that is to say, is impermanent, unstable, not eternal, and a nonentity endowed with the attribute of changing—this Great Vehicle therefore does outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. Subhūti, if sensation were the real, the unmistakable real, [F.263.b] the one and only real—that is to say, incontrovertible, true, and perfect, as things are, permanent, stable, eternal, and an entity endowed with the attribute of not changing—then indeed this Great Vehicle would not outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. However, Subhūti, because sensation is constructed, fashioned, and fabricated—that is to say, is impermanent, unstable, not eternal, and a nonentity endowed with the attribute of changing—this Great Vehicle therefore does outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. Subhūti, if craving were the real, the unmistakable real, the one and only real—that is to say, incontrovertible, true, and perfect, as things are, permanent, stable, eternal, and an entity endowed with the attribute of not changing—then indeed this Great Vehicle would not outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. However, Subhūti, because craving is constructed, fashioned, and fabricated—that is to say, is impermanent, unstable, not eternal, and a nonentity endowed with the attribute of changing—this Great Vehicle therefore does outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. Subhūti, if grasping were the real, the unmistakable real, the one and only real—that is to say, incontrovertible, true, and perfect, as things are, permanent, stable, eternal, and an entity endowed with the attribute of not changing—then indeed this Great Vehicle would not outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. However, Subhūti, [F.264.a] because grasping is constructed, fashioned, and fabricated—that is to say, is impermanent, unstable, not eternal, and a nonentity endowed with the attribute of changing—this Great Vehicle therefore does outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. Subhūti, if the rebirth process were the real, the unmistakable real, the one and only real—that is to say, incontrovertible, true, and perfect, as things are, permanent, stable, eternal, and an entity endowed with the attribute of not changing—then indeed this Great Vehicle would not outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. However, Subhūti, because the rebirth process is constructed, fashioned, and fabricated—that is to say, is impermanent, unstable, not eternal, and a nonentity endowed with the attribute of changing—this Great Vehicle therefore does outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. Subhūti, if birth were the real, the unmistakable real, the one and only real—that is to say, incontrovertible, true, and perfect, as things are, permanent, stable, eternal, and an entity endowed with the attribute of not changing—then indeed this Great Vehicle would not outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. However, Subhūti, because birth is constructed, fashioned, and fabricated—that is to say, is impermanent, unstable, not eternal, and a nonentity endowed with the attribute of changing—this Great Vehicle therefore [F.264.b] does outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. Subhūti, if aging and death were the real, the unmistakable real, the one and only real—that is to say, incontrovertible, true, and perfect, as things are, permanent, stable, eternal, and entities endowed with the attribute of not changing—then indeed this Great Vehicle would not outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. However, Subhūti, because aging and death are constructed, fashioned, and fabricated—that is to say, are impermanent, unstable, not eternal, and nonentities endowed with the attribute of changing—this Great Vehicle therefore does outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. [B19]

11.21      “Subhūti, if the perfection of generosity were an entity and not a nonentity, then indeed this Great Vehicle would not outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. However, Subhūti, because the perfection of generosity is a nonentity, not an entity, this Great Vehicle therefore does outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. Subhūti, if the perfection of ethical discipline were an entity and not a nonentity, then indeed this Great Vehicle would not outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. However, Subhūti, because the perfection of ethical discipline is a nonentity, not an entity, this Great Vehicle therefore does outshine the world [F.265.a] with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. Subhūti, if the perfection of tolerance were an entity and not a nonentity, then indeed this Great Vehicle would not outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. However, Subhūti, because the perfection of tolerance is a nonentity, not an entity, this Great Vehicle therefore does outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. Subhūti, if the perfection of perseverance were an entity and not a nonentity, then indeed this Great Vehicle would not outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. However, Subhūti, because the perfection of perseverance is a nonentity, not an entity, this Great Vehicle therefore does outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. Subhūti, if the perfection of meditative concentration were an entity and not a nonentity, then indeed this Great Vehicle would not outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. However, Subhūti, because the perfection of meditative concentration is a nonentity, not an entity, this Great Vehicle therefore does outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. Subhūti, if the perfection of wisdom were an entity and not a nonentity, then indeed this Great Vehicle would not [F.265.b] outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. However, Subhūti, because the perfection of wisdom is a nonentity, not an entity, this Great Vehicle therefore does outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation.

11.22      “Subhūti, if the emptiness of internal phenomena were an entity and not a nonentity, then indeed this Great Vehicle would not outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. However, Subhūti, because the emptiness of internal phenomena is a nonentity, not an entity, this Great Vehicle does outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. Subhūti, if the emptiness of external phenomena were an entity and not a nonentity, then indeed this Great Vehicle would not outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. However, Subhūti, because the emptiness of external phenomena is a nonentity, not an entity, this Great Vehicle does outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. Subhūti, if the emptiness of external and internal phenomena were an entity and not a nonentity, then indeed this Great Vehicle would not outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. However, Subhūti, because the emptiness of external and internal phenomena is a nonentity, not an entity, this Great Vehicle does outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. Subhūti, if the emptiness of emptiness were an entity [F.266.a] and not a nonentity, then indeed this Great Vehicle would not outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. However, Subhūti, because the emptiness of emptiness is a nonentity, not an entity, this Great Vehicle does outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. Subhūti, if the emptiness of great extent were an entity and not a nonentity, then indeed this Great Vehicle would not outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. However, Subhūti, because the emptiness of great extent is a nonentity, not an entity, this Great Vehicle does outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. Subhūti, if the emptiness of ultimate reality were an entity and not a nonentity, then indeed this Great Vehicle would not outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. However, Subhūti, because the emptiness of ultimate reality is a nonentity, not an entity, this Great Vehicle does outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. Subhūti, if the emptiness of conditioned phenomena were an entity and not a nonentity, then indeed this Great Vehicle would not outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. However, Subhūti, because the emptiness of conditioned phenomena is a nonentity, not an entity, this Great Vehicle therefore does outshine [F.266.b] the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. Subhūti, if the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena were an entity and not a nonentity, then indeed this Great Vehicle would not outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. However, Subhūti, because the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena is a nonentity, not an entity, this Great Vehicle therefore does outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. Subhūti, if the emptiness of the unlimited were an entity and not a nonentity, then indeed this Great Vehicle would not outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. However, Subhūti, because the emptiness of the unlimited is a nonentity, not an entity, this Great Vehicle therefore does outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. Subhūti, if the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end were an entity and not a nonentity, then indeed this Great Vehicle would not outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. However, Subhūti, because the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end is a nonentity, not an entity, this Great Vehicle therefore does outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. Subhūti, if the emptiness of nonexclusion were an entity and not a nonentity, then indeed this Great Vehicle would not outshine the world with its gods, [F.267.a] humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. However, Subhūti, because the emptiness of nonexclusion is a nonentity, not an entity, this Great Vehicle therefore does outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. Subhūti, if the emptiness of inherent nature were an entity and not a nonentity, then indeed this Great Vehicle would not outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. However, Subhūti, because the emptiness of inherent nature is a nonentity, not an entity, this Great Vehicle therefore does outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. Subhūti, if the emptiness of all phenomena were an entity and not a nonentity, then indeed this Great Vehicle would not outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. However, Subhūti, because the emptiness of all phenomena is a nonentity, not an entity, this Great Vehicle therefore does outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. Subhūti, if the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics were an entity and not a nonentity, then indeed this Great Vehicle would not outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. However, Subhūti, because the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics is a nonentity, not an entity, this Great Vehicle therefore does outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras [F.267.b] and attain emancipation. Subhūti, if the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended were an entity and not a nonentity, then indeed this Great Vehicle would not outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. However, Subhūti, because the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended is a nonentity, not an entity, this Great Vehicle therefore does outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. Subhūti, if the emptiness of nonentities were an entity and not a nonentity, then indeed this Great Vehicle would not outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. However, Subhūti, because the emptiness of nonentities is a nonentity, not an entity, this Great Vehicle therefore does outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. Subhūti, if the emptiness of essential nature were an entity and not a nonentity, then indeed this Great Vehicle would not outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. However, Subhūti, because the emptiness of essential nature is a nonentity, not an entity, this Great Vehicle therefore does outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. Subhūti, if the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities were an entity and not a nonentity, then indeed this Great Vehicle would not outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. However, Subhūti, because the emptiness of [F.268.a] an essential nature of nonentities is a nonentity, not an entity, this Great Vehicle therefore does outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation.

11.23 “Subhūti, if the applications of mindfulness were entities and not nonentities, then indeed this Great Vehicle would not outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. However, Subhūti, because the applications of mindfulness are nonentities, not entities, this Great Vehicle therefore does outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. Subhūti, if the correct exertions were entities and not nonentities, then indeed this Great Vehicle would not outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. However, Subhūti, because the correct exertions are nonentities, not entities, this Great Vehicle therefore does outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. Subhūti, if the supports for miraculous ability were entities and not nonentities, then indeed this Great Vehicle would not outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. However, Subhūti, because the supports for miraculous ability are nonentities, not entities, this Great Vehicle therefore does outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. Subhūti, if the faculties were entities [F.268.b] and not nonentities, then indeed this Great Vehicle would not outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. However, Subhūti, because the faculties are nonentities, not entities, this Great Vehicle therefore does outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. Subhūti, if the powers were entities and not nonentities, then indeed this Great Vehicle would not outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. However, Subhūti, because the powers are nonentities, not entities, this Great Vehicle therefore does outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. Subhūti, if the branches of enlightenment were entities and not nonentities, then indeed this Great Vehicle would not outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. However, Subhūti, because the branches of enlightenment are nonentities, not entities, this Great Vehicle therefore does outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. Subhūti, if the noble eightfold path were an entity and not a nonentity, then indeed this Great Vehicle would not outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. However, Subhūti, because the noble eightfold path is a nonentity and not an entity, this Great Vehicle therefore does outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation.

11.24      “Subhūti, if the truths [F.269.a] of the noble ones were entities and not nonentities, then indeed this Great Vehicle would not outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. However, Subhūti, because the truths of the noble ones are nonentities, not entities, this Great Vehicle therefore does outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. Subhūti, if the meditative concentrations were entities and not nonentities, then indeed this Great Vehicle would not outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. However, Subhūti, because the meditative concentrations are nonentities, not entities, this Great Vehicle therefore does outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. Subhūti, if the immeasurable attitudes were entities and not nonentities, then indeed this Great Vehicle would not outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. However, Subhūti, because the immeasurable attitudes are nonentities, not entities, this Great Vehicle therefore does outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. Subhūti, if the formless absorptions were entities and not nonentities, then indeed this Great Vehicle would not outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. However, Subhūti, because the formless absorptions are nonentities, not entities, this Great Vehicle therefore does outshine the world with its gods, [F.269.b] humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. Subhūti, if the liberations were entities and not nonentities, then indeed this Great Vehicle would not outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. However, Subhūti, because the liberations are nonentities, not entities, this Great Vehicle therefore does outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. Subhūti, if the serial steps of meditative absorption were entities and not nonentities, then indeed this Great Vehicle would not outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. However, Subhūti, because the serial steps of meditative absorption are nonentities, not entities, this Great Vehicle therefore does outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. Subhūti, if the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation were entities and not nonentities, then indeed this Great Vehicle would not outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. However, Subhūti, because the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation are nonentities, not entities, this Great Vehicle therefore does outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. Subhūti, if the extrasensory powers were entities and not [F.270.a] nonentities, then indeed this Great Vehicle would not outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. However, Subhūti, because the extrasensory powers are nonentities, not entities, this Great Vehicle therefore does outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. Subhūti, if the meditative stabilities were entities and not nonentities, then indeed this Great Vehicle would not outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. However, Subhūti, because the meditative stabilities are nonentities, not entities, this Great Vehicle therefore does outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. Subhūti, if the dhāraṇī gateways were entities and not nonentities, then indeed this Great Vehicle would not outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. However, Subhūti, because the dhāraṇī gateways are nonentities, not entities, this Great Vehicle therefore does outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation.

11.25 “Subhūti, if the powers of the tathāgatas were entities and not nonentities, then indeed this Great Vehicle would not outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. However, Subhūti, because the powers of the tathāgatas are nonentities, not entities, this Great Vehicle therefore does outshine the world with its gods, [F.270.b] humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. Subhūti, if the fearlessnesses were entities and not nonentities, then indeed this Great Vehicle would not outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. However, Subhūti, because the fearlessnesses are nonentities, not entities, this Great Vehicle therefore does outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. Subhūti, if the kinds of exact knowledge were entities and not nonentities, then indeed this Great Vehicle would not outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. However, Subhūti, because the kinds of exact knowledge are nonentities, not entities, this Great Vehicle therefore does outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. Subhūti, if great compassion were an entity and not a nonentity, then indeed this Great Vehicle would not outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. However, Subhūti, because great compassion is a nonentity and not an entity, this Great Vehicle therefore does outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. Subhūti, if the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas were entities and not nonentities, then indeed this Great Vehicle would not outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. However, Subhūti, because [F.271.a] the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas are nonentities, not entities, this Great Vehicle therefore does outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation.

11.26 “Subhūti, if the attributes of those at the level of the spiritual family were entities and not nonentities, then indeed this Great Vehicle would not outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. However, Subhūti, because the attributes of those at the level of the spiritual family are nonentities, not entities, this Great Vehicle therefore does outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. Subhūti, if the attributes of those at the eighth level were entities and not nonentities, then indeed this Great Vehicle would not outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. However, Subhūti, because the attributes of those at the eighth level are nonentities, not entities, this Great Vehicle therefore does outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. Subhūti, if the attributes of those who have entered the stream were entities and not nonentities, then indeed this Great Vehicle would not outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. However, Subhūti, because the attributes of those who have entered the stream are nonentities, not entities, this Great Vehicle therefore does outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. Subhūti, if the attributes of once-returners were entities and not [F.271.b] nonentities, then indeed this Great Vehicle would not outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. However, Subhūti, because the attributes of once-returners are nonentities, not entities, this Great Vehicle therefore does outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. Subhūti, if the attributes of non-returners were entities and not nonentities, then indeed this Great Vehicle would not outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. However, Subhūti, because the attributes of non-returners are nonentities, not entities, this Great Vehicle therefore does outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. Subhūti, if the attributes of arhats were entities and not nonentities, then indeed this Great Vehicle would not outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. However, Subhūti, because the attributes of arhats are nonentities, not entities, this Great Vehicle therefore does outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. Subhūti, if the attributes of pratyekabuddhas were entities and not nonentities, then indeed this Great Vehicle would not outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. However, Subhūti, because the attributes of pratyekabuddhas are nonentities, not entities, this Great Vehicle therefore does outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. [F.272.a] Subhūti, if the attributes of bodhisattvas were entities and not nonentities, then indeed this Great Vehicle would not outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. However, Subhūti, because the attributes of bodhisattvas are nonentities, not entities, this Great Vehicle therefore does outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. Subhūti, if the attributes of buddhas were entities and not nonentities, then indeed this Great Vehicle would not outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. However, Subhūti, because the attributes of buddhas are nonentities, not entities, this Great Vehicle therefore does outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation.

11.27 “Subhūti, if those on the level of the spiritual family were entities and not nonentities, then indeed this Great Vehicle would not outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. However, Subhūti, because those on the level of the spiritual family are nonentities, not entities, this Great Vehicle therefore does outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. Subhūti, if those at the eighth level were entities and not nonentities, then indeed this Great Vehicle would not outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. However, Subhūti, because those at the eighth level are nonentities, not entities, this Great Vehicle therefore does outshine the world with its gods, humans, [F.272.b] and asuras and attain emancipation. Subhūti, if those who have entered the stream were entities and not nonentities, then indeed this Great Vehicle would not outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. However, Subhūti, because those who have entered the stream are nonentities, not entities, this Great Vehicle therefore does outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. Subhūti, if once-returners were entities and not nonentities, then indeed this Great Vehicle would not outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. However, Subhūti, because once-returners are nonentities, not entities, this Great Vehicle therefore does outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. Subhūti, if non-returners were entities and not nonentities, then indeed this Great Vehicle would not outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. However, Subhūti, because non-returners are nonentities, not entities, this Great Vehicle therefore does outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. Subhūti, if arhats were entities and not nonentities, then indeed this Great Vehicle would not outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. However, Subhūti, because arhats are nonentities, not entities, this Great Vehicle therefore does outshine the world with its gods, [F.273.a] humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. Subhūti, if pratyekabuddhas were entities and not nonentities, then indeed this Great Vehicle would not outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. However, Subhūti, because pratyekabuddhas are nonentities, not entities, this Great Vehicle therefore does outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. Subhūti, if bodhisattvas were entities and not nonentities, then indeed this Great Vehicle would not outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. However, Subhūti, because bodhisattvas are nonentities, not entities, this Great Vehicle therefore does outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. Subhūti, if tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas were entities and not nonentities, then indeed this Great Vehicle would not outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. However, Subhūti, because tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas are nonentities, not entities, this Great Vehicle therefore does outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation.

11.28 “Subhūti, if the realm of phenomena were an entity and not a nonentity, then indeed this Great Vehicle would not outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain [F.273.b] emancipation. However, Subhūti, because the realm of phenomena is a nonentity and not an entity, this Great Vehicle therefore does outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. Subhūti, if the real nature were an entity and not a nonentity, then indeed this Great Vehicle would not outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. However, Subhūti, because the real nature is a nonentity and not an entity, this Great Vehicle therefore does outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. Subhūti, if the very limit of reality were an entity and not a nonentity, then indeed this Great Vehicle would not outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. However, Subhūti, because the very limit of reality is a nonentity and not an entity, this Great Vehicle therefore does outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. Subhūti, if the realm of the inconceivable were an entity and not a nonentity, then indeed this Great Vehicle would not outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. However, Subhūti, because the realm of the inconceivable is a nonentity and not an entity, this Great Vehicle therefore does outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation.

11.29 “Subhūti, if the world with its gods, humans, and asuras were an entity and not a nonentity, then indeed this Great Vehicle would not outshine the world [F.274.a] with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. However, Subhūti, because the world with its gods, humans, and asuras is a nonentity and not an entity, this Great Vehicle therefore does outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation.

11.30 “Subhūti, if the instances of setting the mind on enlightenment, as many as there are, by bodhisattva great beings, starting from their first setting of the mind on enlightenment up to being seated at the site of enlightenment, were entities and not nonentities, then indeed this Great Vehicle would not outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. However, Subhūti, because the instances of setting the mind on enlightenment, as many as there are, by bodhisattva great beings, starting from their first setting of the mind on enlightenment up to being seated at the site of enlightenment, are nonentities, not entities, this Great Vehicle therefore does outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation.

11.31 “Subhūti, if the vajra-like transcendental knowledge of bodhisattva great beings were an entity and a not a nonentity, then indeed this Great Vehicle would not outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. However, Subhūti, because the vajra-like transcendental knowledge of bodhisattva great beings is a nonentity and not an entity, this Great Vehicle therefore does outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation.

11.32 “Subhūti, if the vajra-like transcendental knowledge of bodhisattva great beings were an entity [F.274.b] and a not a nonentity, then indeed bodhisattva great beings would not realize that all the propensities for afflicted mental states that cause linking up are nonentities and would not acquire all-aspect omniscience, and this Great Vehicle would not outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attain emancipation. However, Subhūti, because the vajra-like transcendental knowledge of bodhisattva great beings is a nonentity and not an entity, bodhisattva great beings therefore do realize that all the propensities for afflicted mental states that cause linking up are nonentities and do indeed acquire all-aspect omniscience, and this Great Vehicle outshines the world with its gods, humans, and asuras and attains emancipation.

- 11.33 “Subhūti, if the thirty-two major marks of bodhisattva great beings<sup>581</sup> were entities and not nonentities, then indeed the tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas would not outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras, and would not illuminate, would not radiate, and would not shine with their magnificence and glory. However, Subhūti, because the thirty-two major marks of a great person that the tathāgatas, arhats, genuinely perfect buddhas possess are nonentities, not entities, therefore the tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas do indeed outshine the world with its gods, humans, and asuras, and illuminate, radiate, and shine with their magnificence and glory.
- 11.34 “Subhūti, if the light of the tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas [F.275.a] were an entity and not a nonentity, then the tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas would not permeate<sup>582</sup> worlds as numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā with their luminosity. However, Subhūti, because the light of the tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas is a nonentity and not an entity, therefore the tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas do permeate worlds as numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā with their luminosity.
- 11.35 “Subhūti, if the voice of a tathāgata, arhat, perfectly complete buddha with its sixty aspects were an entity and not a nonentity, then the tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas in worlds as numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā would not have made themselves heard with their voice. However, Subhūti, because the voice of a tathāgata, arhat, perfectly complete buddha with its sixty aspects is a nonentity and not an entity, therefore the tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas in worlds as numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā do make themselves heard with their voice.
- 11.36 “Subhūti, if the wheel of the Dharma of tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas were an entity and not a nonentity, then the tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas would not turn in the world that wheel of the Dharma that no virtuous ascetic, brahmin, god, demon, Brahmā, [F.275.b] or anyone else could have turned in conformity with the Dharma. However, Subhūti, because the wheel of the Dharma of tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas is a nonentity and not an entity, therefore the tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas do turn in the world that wheel of the Dharma that no virtuous ascetic, brahmin, god, demon, Brahmā, or anyone else could have turned in conformity with the Dharma.
- 11.37 “Subhūti, if the beings for whom the tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas turn the wheel of the Dharma were entities and not nonentities, then those beings would not enter final nirvāṇa in the expanse of nirvāṇa with no residual aggregates. However, Subhūti, because the beings for whom the tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas turn the wheel of the Dharma are nonentities, not entities, therefore those beings have entered final nirvāṇa, are entering final nirvāṇa, and will enter final nirvāṇa, in the expanse of nirvāṇa with no residue of the aggregates.

11.38 “Subhūti, you said, ‘This Great Vehicle is the same as space.’ So it is, Subhūti, so it is! This vehicle is the same as space.

11.39 “To illustrate, Subhūti, in space the eastern direction is not apprehended,<sup>583</sup> and the southern direction, the western direction, the northern direction, the zenith, the nadir, [F.276.a] and the intermediate directions are not apprehended. Similarly, Subhūti, in this Great Vehicle, the eastern direction is not apprehended, and the southern direction, the western direction, the northern direction, the zenith, the nadir, and the intermediate directions are not apprehended. Therefore, it is said that ‘this vehicle is the same as space.’

11.40 “To illustrate, Subhūti, space is neither long, nor short, nor round, nor square, nor symmetrical, nor asymmetrical. Similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle, too, is neither long, nor short, nor round, nor square, nor symmetrical, nor asymmetrical. Therefore, it is said that ‘this vehicle is the same as space.’

11.41 “To illustrate, Subhūti, space is neither blue, nor yellow, nor red, nor white, nor crimson, nor crystalline, nor silver. Similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle, too, is neither blue, nor yellow, nor red, nor white, nor crimson, nor crystalline, nor silver. Therefore, it is said that ‘this vehicle is the same as space.’

11.42 “To illustrate, Subhūti, space is not the past, the future, or the present. Similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle, too, is not the past, the future, or the present. Therefore, it is said that ‘this vehicle is the same as space.’

11.43 “To illustrate, Subhūti, space neither decreases nor increases, neither diminishes nor [F.276.b] expands. Similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle, too, neither decreases nor increases, neither diminishes nor expands. Therefore, it is said that ‘this vehicle is the same as space.’

11.44 “To illustrate, Subhūti, space is not defiled nor is it purified. Similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle, too, is not defiled nor is it purified. Therefore, it is said that ‘this vehicle is the same as space.’

11.45 “To illustrate, Subhūti, space neither arises, nor does it cease, nor does it last, nor does it reach an end, nor does it last and then change into something else. Similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle, too, neither arises, nor does it cease, nor does it last, nor does it reach an end, nor does it last and then change into something else. Therefore, it is said that ‘this vehicle is the same as space.’

- 11.46 “To illustrate, Subhūti, space is neither virtuous nor nonvirtuous, and it is neither determinate nor indeterminate.<sup>584</sup> Similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle, too, is neither virtuous nor nonvirtuous, and it is neither determinate nor indeterminate. Therefore, it is said that ‘this vehicle is the same as space.’
- 11.47 “To illustrate, Subhūti, space is not seen, nor is it heard, nor known, nor cognized. Similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle, too, is not seen, nor is it heard, nor known, nor cognized. Therefore, it is said that ‘this vehicle is the same as space.’
- 11.48 “To illustrate, Subhūti, space is neither an object of knowledge nor not an object of knowledge, nor is it an object of understanding, nor is it an object of comprehension, nor is it an object to be actualized, nor is it an object to be abandoned, nor is it [F.277.a] an object to be cultivated.<sup>585</sup> Similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle, too, is neither an object of knowledge nor not an object of knowledge, nor is it an object of understanding, nor is it an object of comprehension, nor is it an object to be actualized, nor is it an object to be abandoned, nor is it an object to be cultivated. Therefore, it is said that ‘this vehicle is the same as space.’
- 11.49 “To illustrate, Subhūti, space is neither a maturation, nor is it subject to maturation.<sup>586</sup> Similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle, too, is neither a maturation, nor is it subject to maturation. Therefore, it is said that ‘this vehicle is the same as space.’
- 11.50 “To illustrate, Subhūti, space is neither included within the realm of desire, nor is it included within the realm of form, nor is it included within the realm of formlessness. Similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle, too, is neither included within the realm of desire, nor is it included within the realm of form, nor is it included within the realm of formlessness. Therefore, it is said that ‘this vehicle is the same as space.’
- 11.51 “To illustrate, Subhūti, space is not greedy nor is it free from greed, is not hateful nor is it free from hate, and is not deluded nor is it free from delusion. Similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle, too, is not greedy nor is it free from greed, is not hateful nor is it free from hate, and is not deluded nor is it free [F.277.b] from delusion. Therefore, it is said that ‘this vehicle is the same as space.’
- 11.52 “To illustrate, Subhūti, in space there is no first setting of the mind on enlightenment, nor is there the second, the third, the fourth, the fifth, the sixth, the seventh, the eighth, the ninth, or the tenth setting of the mind on enlightenment. Similarly, Subhūti, in this Great Vehicle, too, there is no first setting of the mind on enlightenment, nor is there the second, the third, the

- fourth, the fifth, the sixth, the seventh, the eighth, the ninth, or the tenth setting of the mind on enlightenment. Therefore, it is said that ‘this vehicle is the same as space.’
- 11.53 “To illustrate, Subhūti, in space there is no level of bright insight, nor is there the level of the spiritual family, the eighth level, the level of insight, the level of attenuated refinement, the level of no attachment, or the level of spiritual achievement. Similarly, Subhūti, in this Great Vehicle, too, there is no level of bright insight, nor is there the level of the spiritual family, the eighth level, the level of insight, the level of attenuated refinement, the level of no attachment, or the level of spiritual achievement. Therefore, it is said that ‘this vehicle is the same as space.’
- 11.54 “To illustrate, Subhūti, in space there is no fruit of having entered the stream, nor is there the fruit of once-returned, the fruit of non-returned, or arhatship. Similarly, Subhūti, in this Great Vehicle, too, there is no fruit of having entered the stream, nor is there the fruit of once-returned, the fruit of [F.278.a] non-returned, or arhatship. Therefore, it is said that ‘this vehicle is the same as space.’
- 11.55 “To illustrate, Subhūti, in space there is no level of the śrāvakas, nor is there the level of the pratyekabuddhas, the level of the bodhisattvas, or the level of the perfectly complete buddhas. Similarly, Subhūti, in this Great Vehicle, too, there is no level of the śrāvakas, nor is there the level of the pratyekabuddhas, the level of the bodhisattvas, or the level of the perfectly complete buddhas. Therefore, it is said that ‘this vehicle is the same as space.’
- 11.56 “To illustrate, Subhūti, space does not have form, nor is it formless; is neither revealed, nor is it unrevealed; is neither obstructed, nor is it unobstructed; and neither is it united, nor is it separated. Similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle, too, does not have form, nor is it formless; is neither revealed, nor is it unrevealed; is neither obstructed, nor is it unobstructed; and neither is it united, nor is it separated. Therefore, it is said that ‘this vehicle is the same as space.’
- 11.57 “To illustrate, Subhūti, space is neither permanent, nor is it impermanent; is neither happiness, nor is it suffering; neither has a self, nor is it selfless; and is neither pleasant, nor is it unpleasant. Similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle, too, is neither permanent, nor is it impermanent; is neither happiness, nor is it suffering; neither has a self, nor is it selfless; and is neither pleasant, nor is it unpleasant. Therefore, it is said that ‘this vehicle is the same [F.278.b] as space.’
- 11.58 “To illustrate, Subhūti, space is neither empty, nor is it not empty; it is neither with a sign, nor is it without a sign; and it does not have aspirations, nor is it without aspirations.<sup>587</sup> Similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle, too, is

- neither empty, nor is it not empty; it is neither with a sign, nor is it without a sign; and it does not have aspirations, nor is it without aspirations. Therefore, it is said that ‘this vehicle is the same as space.’
- 11.59 “To illustrate, Subhūti, space is neither at peace, nor is it not at peace, and neither is it void, nor is it not void. Similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle, too, is neither at peace, nor is it not at peace, and neither is it void, nor is it not void. Therefore, it is said that ‘this vehicle is the same as space.’
- 11.60 “To illustrate, Subhūti, space is neither light, nor is it darkness. Similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle, too, is neither light, nor is it darkness. Therefore, it is said that ‘this vehicle is the same as space.’
- 11.61 “To illustrate, Subhūti, space can neither be apprehended, nor can it not be apprehended. Similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle, too, can neither be apprehended, nor can it not be apprehended. Therefore, it is said that ‘this vehicle is the same as space.’
- 11.62 “To illustrate, Subhūti, space is neither expressible, nor is it inexpressible. Similarly, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle, too, is neither expressible, nor is it inexpressible. Therefore, it is said that ‘this vehicle is the same as space.’
- 11.63 “For these reasons, Subhūti, this vehicle is the same as [F.279.a] space. Such is the Great Vehicle.
- 11.64 “Subhūti, you said, ‘Just as space gives space to countless, immeasurable beings, similarly this Great Vehicle also gives space to countless, immeasurable beings.’ That is so, Subhūti, that is so! Just as space gives space to countless, immeasurable beings, similarly this Great Vehicle, too, gives space to countless, immeasurable beings. If you ask why, you should know, Subhūti, that space is nonexistent because beings are nonexistent;<sup>588</sup> you should know that the Great Vehicle is nonexistent because space is nonexistent. For this reason, too, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle gives space to countless, immeasurable beings. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because beings, the Great Vehicle, and space all cannot be apprehended.
- 11.65 “Moreover, Subhūti, you should know that space is immeasurable because beings are immeasurable. You should know that the Great Vehicle is immeasurable because space is immeasurable.
- 11.66 “For this reason, too, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle gives space to countless, immeasurable beings. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because beings, the Great Vehicle, and space all cannot be apprehended.
- 11.67 “If you ask why, Subhūti, you should know that space is unfathomable<sup>589</sup> because beings are unfathomable. You should know that the Great [F.279.b] Vehicle is unfathomable because space is unfathomable.
- 11.68 “For this reason, too, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle gives space to countless, immeasurable beings. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because beings, the Great Vehicle, and space all cannot be apprehended.

- 11.69 “Moreover, Subhūti, you should know that the realm of phenomena is nonexistent because beings are nonexistent; you should know that space is nonexistent because the realm of phenomena is nonexistent; you should know that the Great Vehicle is nonexistent because space is nonexistent; you should know that the immeasurable is nonexistent because the Great Vehicle is nonexistent; you should know that the countless is nonexistent because the immeasurable is nonexistent; you should know that the unfathomable is nonexistent because the countless is nonexistent; and you should know that all phenomena are nonexistent because the unfathomable is nonexistent.
- 11.70 “For this reason, too, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle gives space to countless, immeasurable beings. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because beings, the realm of phenomena, space, the Great Vehicle, the immeasurable, the countless, the unfathomable, and all phenomena, they all cannot be apprehended.
- 11.71 “Moreover, Subhūti, you should know that the real nature is nonexistent because beings are nonexistent; you should know that space is nonexistent because the real nature is nonexistent; you should know that the Great Vehicle is nonexistent because space is nonexistent; you should know that the immeasurable is nonexistent because [F.280.a] the Great Vehicle is nonexistent; you should know that the countless is nonexistent because the immeasurable is nonexistent; you should know that the unfathomable is nonexistent because the countless is nonexistent; and you should know that all phenomena are nonexistent because the unfathomable is nonexistent.
- 11.72 “For this reason, too, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle gives space to countless, immeasurable beings. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because beings, the true nature, space, the Great Vehicle, the immeasurable, the countless, the unfathomable, and all phenomena, they all cannot be apprehended.
- 11.73 “Moreover, Subhūti, you should know that a being is nonexistent because the self is nonexistent; you should know that a life form is nonexistent because a being is nonexistent; you should know that a living being is nonexistent because a life form is nonexistent; you should know that a life is nonexistent because a living being is nonexistent; you should know that an individual is nonexistent because a life is nonexistent; you should know that a person is nonexistent because an individual is nonexistent; you should know that one born of Manu is nonexistent because a person is nonexistent; you should know that a child of Manu is nonexistent because one born of Manu is nonexistent; you should know that an agent is nonexistent because a child of Manu is nonexistent; you should know that an experiencer is nonexistent because an agent is nonexistent; you should know that a knower is nonexistent because an experiencer is nonexistent; you should know that a viewer is nonexistent because a knower is nonexistent; and you should know that the very limit of reality is nonexistent because a viewer is nonexistent. You should know [F.280.b] that space is nonexistent because the very limit of reality is nonexistent; you should know that the Great Vehicle is nonexistent because space is nonexistent; you should know that the immeasurable is nonexistent because the Great Vehicle is nonexistent; you should know that the countless is nonexistent because the immeasurable is nonexistent; you should know that the unfathomable is nonexistent because the countless is nonexistent; and you should know that all phenomena are nonexistent because the unfathomable is nonexistent.

11.74 “For this reason, too, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle gives space to countless, immeasurable beings. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the self, a being, a life form, a living being, a life, an individual, a person, one born of Manu, a child of Manu, an agent, an experiencer, a knower, a viewer, the very limit of reality, space, the Great Vehicle, the immeasurable, the countless, the unfathomable, and all phenomena, they all cannot be apprehended. [B20]

11.75 “Moreover, Subhūti, you should know that a being is nonexistent because the self is nonexistent; you should know that a life form is nonexistent because a being is nonexistent; you should know that a living being is nonexistent because a life form is nonexistent; you should know that a life is nonexistent because a living being is nonexistent; you should know that an individual is nonexistent because a life is nonexistent; you should know that a person [F.281.a] is nonexistent because an individual is nonexistent; you should know that one born of Manu is nonexistent because a person is nonexistent; you should know that a child of Manu is nonexistent because one born of Manu is nonexistent; you should know that an agent is nonexistent because a child of Manu is nonexistent; you should know that an experiencer is nonexistent because an agent is nonexistent; you should know that a knower is nonexistent because an experiencer is nonexistent; you should know that a viewer is nonexistent because a knower is nonexistent; you should know that the realm of the inconceivable is nonexistent because a viewer is nonexistent. You should know that physical forms are nonexistent because the realm of the inconceivable is nonexistent; you should know that feelings are nonexistent because physical forms are nonexistent; you should know that perceptions are nonexistent because feelings are nonexistent; you should know that formative predispositions are nonexistent because perceptions are nonexistent; you should know that consciousness is nonexistent because formative predispositions are nonexistent; and you should know that space is nonexistent because consciousness is nonexistent. You should know that the Great Vehicle is nonexistent because space is nonexistent. You should know that the immeasurable is nonexistent because the Great Vehicle is nonexistent; you should know that the countless is nonexistent because the immeasurable is nonexistent; you should know that the unfathomable is nonexistent because the countless is nonexistent; and you should know that all phenomena are nonexistent because the unfathomable is nonexistent.

11.76 “For this reason, too, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle gives space to countless, immeasurable beings. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the self, a being, a life form, a living being, a life, an individual, a person, one born of Manu, a child of Manu, an agent, an experiencer, a knower, [F.281.b] a viewer, the realm of the inconceivable, physical forms, feelings, perceptions, formative predispositions, consciousness, space, the Great Vehicle, the immeasurable, the countless, the unfathomable, and all phenomena, they all cannot be apprehended.

11.77 “Moreover, Subhūti, you should know that a being is nonexistent because the self is nonexistent; you should know that a life form is nonexistent because a being is nonexistent; you should know that a living being is nonexistent because a life form is nonexistent; you should know that a life is nonexistent because a living being is nonexistent; you should know that an individual is nonexistent because a life is nonexistent; you should know that a person is nonexistent because an individual is nonexistent; you should know that one born of Manu is nonexistent because a person is nonexistent; you should know that a child of Manu is nonexistent because one born of Manu is nonexistent; you should know that an agent is nonexistent because a child of Manu is nonexistent; you should know that an experiencer is nonexistent because an agent is nonexistent; you should know that a knower is nonexistent because an experiencer is nonexistent; you should know that a viewer is nonexistent because a knower is nonexistent; you should know that the realm of the inconceivable is nonexistent because a viewer is nonexistent. You should know that the eyes are nonexistent because the realm of the inconceivable is nonexistent; you should know that the ears are nonexistent because the eyes are nonexistent; you should know that the nose is nonexistent because the ears are nonexistent; you should know that the tongue is nonexistent because the nose is nonexistent; you should know that the body is nonexistent because the tongue is nonexistent; you should know that the mental faculty is nonexistent because the body is nonexistent; and you should know that space is nonexistent because the mental faculty is nonexistent. You should know [F.282.a] that the Great Vehicle is nonexistent because space is nonexistent. You should know that the immeasurable is nonexistent because the Great Vehicle is nonexistent; you should know that the countless is nonexistent because the immeasurable is nonexistent; you should know that the unfathomable is nonexistent because the countless is nonexistent; and you should know that all phenomena are nonexistent because the unfathomable is nonexistent.

11.78 “For this reason, too, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle gives space to countless, immeasurable beings. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the self, a being, a life form, a living being, a life, an individual, a person, one born of Manu, a child of Manu, an agent, an experiencer, a knower, a viewer, the realm of the inconceivable, the eyes, the ears, the nose, the tongue, the body, the mental faculty, space, the Great Vehicle, the immeasurable, the countless, the unfathomable, and all phenomena, they all cannot be apprehended.

11.79 “Moreover, Subhūti, you should know that a being is nonexistent because the self is nonexistent; you should know that a life form is nonexistent because a being is nonexistent; you should know that a living being is nonexistent because a life form is nonexistent; you should know that a life is nonexistent because a living being is nonexistent; you should know that an individual is nonexistent because a life is nonexistent; you should know that a person [F.282.b] is nonexistent because an individual is nonexistent; you should know that one born of Manu is nonexistent because a person is nonexistent; you should know that a child of Manu is nonexistent because one born of Manu is nonexistent; you should know that an agent is nonexistent because a child of Manu is nonexistent; you should know that an experiencer is nonexistent because an agent is nonexistent; you should know that a knower is nonexistent because an experiencer is nonexistent; you should know that a viewer is nonexistent because a knower is nonexistent; and you should know that the realm of the inconceivable is nonexistent because a viewer is nonexistent. You should know that sights are nonexistent because the realm of the inconceivable is nonexistent; you should know that sounds are nonexistent because sights are nonexistent; you should know that odors are nonexistent because sounds are nonexistent; you should know that tastes are nonexistent because odors are nonexistent; you should know that tangibles are nonexistent because tastes are nonexistent; you should know that mental phenomena are nonexistent because tangibles are nonexistent; and you should know that space is nonexistent because mental phenomena are nonexistent. You should know that the Great Vehicle is nonexistent because space is nonexistent. You should know that the immeasurable is nonexistent because the Great Vehicle is nonexistent; you should know that the countless is nonexistent because the immeasurable is nonexistent; you should know that the unfathomable is nonexistent because the countless is nonexistent; and you should know that all phenomena are nonexistent because the unfathomable is nonexistent.

11.80        “For this reason, too, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle gives space to countless, immeasurable beings. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the self, a being, a life form, a living being, a life, an individual, a person, one born of Manu, a child of Manu, an agent, an experiencer, a knower, a viewer, [F.283.a] the realm of the inconceivable, sights, sounds, odors, tastes, tangibles, mental phenomena, space, the Great Vehicle, the immeasurable, the countless, the unfathomable, and all phenomena, they all cannot be apprehended.

11.81        “Moreover, Subhūti, you should know that a being is nonexistent because the self is nonexistent; you should know that a life form is nonexistent because a being is nonexistent; you should know that a living being is nonexistent because a life form is nonexistent; you should know that a life is nonexistent because a living being is nonexistent; you should know that an individual is nonexistent because a life is nonexistent; you should know that a person is nonexistent because an individual is nonexistent; you should know that one born of Manu is nonexistent because a person is nonexistent; you should know that a child of Manu is nonexistent because one born of Manu is nonexistent; you should know that an agent is nonexistent because a child of Manu is nonexistent; you should know that an experiencer is nonexistent because an agent is nonexistent; you should know that a knower is nonexistent because an experiencer is nonexistent; you should know that a viewer is nonexistent because a knower is nonexistent; and you should know that the realm of the inconceivable is nonexistent because a viewer is nonexistent. You should know that visual consciousness is nonexistent because the realm of the inconceivable is nonexistent; you should know that auditory consciousness is nonexistent because visual consciousness is nonexistent; you should know that olfactory consciousness is nonexistent because auditory consciousness is nonexistent; you should know that gustatory consciousness is nonexistent because olfactory consciousness is nonexistent; you should know [F.283.b] that tactile consciousness is nonexistent because gustatory consciousness is nonexistent; you should know that mental consciousness is nonexistent because tactile consciousness is nonexistent; and you should know that space is nonexistent because mental consciousness is nonexistent. You should know that the Great Vehicle is nonexistent because space is nonexistent. You should know that the immeasurable is nonexistent because the Great Vehicle is nonexistent; you should know that the countless is nonexistent because the immeasurable is nonexistent; you should know that the unfathomable is nonexistent because the countless is nonexistent; and you should know that all phenomena are nonexistent because the unfathomable is nonexistent.

11.82       “For this reason, too, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle gives space to countless, immeasurable beings. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the self, a being, a life form, a living being, a life, an individual, a person, one born of Manu, a child of Manu, an agent, an experiencer, a knower, a viewer, the realm of the inconceivable, visual consciousness, auditory consciousness, olfactory consciousness, gustatory consciousness, tactile consciousness, mental consciousness, space, the Great Vehicle, the immeasurable, the countless, the unfathomable, and all phenomena, [F.284.a] they all cannot be apprehended.

11.83       “Moreover, Subhūti, you should know that a being is nonexistent because the self is nonexistent; you should know that a life form is nonexistent because a being is nonexistent; you should know that a living being is nonexistent because a life form is nonexistent; you should know that a life is nonexistent because a living being is nonexistent; you should know that an individual is nonexistent because a life is nonexistent; you should know that a person is nonexistent because an individual is nonexistent; you should know that one born of Manu is nonexistent because a person is nonexistent; you should know that a child of Manu is nonexistent because one born of Manu is nonexistent; you should know that an agent is nonexistent because a child of Manu is nonexistent; you should know that an experiencer is nonexistent because an agent is nonexistent; you should know that a knower is nonexistent because an experiencer is nonexistent; you should know that a viewer is nonexistent because a knower is nonexistent; and you should know that the realm of the inconceivable is nonexistent because a viewer is nonexistent. You should know that visually compounded sensory contact is nonexistent because the realm of the inconceivable is nonexistent; you should know that aurally compounded sensory contact is nonexistent because visually compounded sensory contact is nonexistent; you should know that nasally compounded sensory contact is nonexistent because aurally compounded sensory contact is nonexistent; you should know that lingually compounded sensory contact is nonexistent because nasally compounded sensory contact is nonexistent; you should know that corporeally compounded sensory contact is nonexistent because lingually compounded sensory contact is nonexistent; you should know that mentally compounded sensory contact is nonexistent because corporeally compounded sensory contact is nonexistent; and you should know that space is nonexistent because mentally compounded sensory contact is nonexistent. You should know that the Great Vehicle is nonexistent because space is nonexistent. You should know that the immeasurable is nonexistent because the Great Vehicle is nonexistent; you should know that the countless is nonexistent because the immeasurable is nonexistent; you should know [F.284.b] that the unfathomable is nonexistent because the countless is nonexistent; and you should know that all phenomena are nonexistent because the unfathomable is nonexistent.

11.84 “For this reason, too, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle gives space to countless, immeasurable beings. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the self, a being, a life form, a living being, a life, an individual, a person, one born of Manu, a child of Manu, an agent, an experiencer, a knower, a viewer, the realm of the inconceivable, visually compounded sensory contact, aurally compounded sensory contact, nasally compounded sensory contact, lingually compounded sensory contact, corporeally compounded sensory contact, mentally compounded sensory contact, space, the Great Vehicle, the immeasurable, the countless, the unfathomable, and all phenomena, they all cannot be apprehended.

11.85 “Moreover, Subhūti, you should know that a being is nonexistent because the self is nonexistent; you should know that a life form is nonexistent because a being is nonexistent; you should know that a living being is nonexistent because a life form is nonexistent; you should know that a life is nonexistent because a living being is nonexistent; you should know that an individual is nonexistent because a life is nonexistent; you should know that a person is nonexistent because an individual is nonexistent; you should know that one born of Manu is nonexistent because a person is nonexistent; you should know that a child of Manu is nonexistent because one born of Manu is nonexistent; you should know that an agent is nonexistent [F.285.a] because a child of Manu is nonexistent; you should know that an experiencer is nonexistent because an agent is nonexistent; you should know that a knower is nonexistent because an experiencer is nonexistent; you should know that a viewer is nonexistent because a knower is nonexistent; and you should know that the realm of the inconceivable is nonexistent because a viewer is nonexistent. You should know that feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact are nonexistent because the realm of the inconceivable is nonexistent; you should know that feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact are nonexistent because feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact are nonexistent; you should know that feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact are nonexistent because feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact are nonexistent; you should know that feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact are nonexistent because feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact are nonexistent; you should know that feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact are nonexistent because feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact are nonexistent; you should know that feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact are nonexistent because feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact are nonexistent; and you should know that space is nonexistent because feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact are nonexistent. You should know that the Great Vehicle is nonexistent because space is nonexistent. You should know that the immeasurable is nonexistent because the Great Vehicle is nonexistent; you should know that the countless is nonexistent because the immeasurable is nonexistent; you should know that the unfathomable is nonexistent because the countless is nonexistent; and you should know that all phenomena are nonexistent because the unfathomable is nonexistent.

11.86      “For this reason, too, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle gives space to countless, immeasurable beings. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the self, a being, [F.285.b] a life form, a living being, a life, an individual, a person, one born of Manu, a child of Manu, an agent, an experiencer, a knower, a viewer, the realm of the inconceivable, feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact, feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact, feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact, feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact, feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact, feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact, space, the Great Vehicle, the immeasurable, the countless, the unfathomable, and all phenomena, they all cannot be apprehended.

11.87      “Moreover, Subhūti, you should know that a being is nonexistent because the self is nonexistent; you should know that a life form is nonexistent because a being is nonexistent; you should know that a living being is nonexistent because a life form is nonexistent; you should know that a life is nonexistent because a living being is nonexistent; you should know that an individual is nonexistent because a life is nonexistent; you should know that a person is nonexistent because an individual is nonexistent; you should know that one born of Manu is nonexistent because a person is nonexistent; you should know that a child of Manu is nonexistent because one born of Manu is nonexistent; you should know that an agent is nonexistent because a child of Manu is nonexistent; you should know that an experiencer is nonexistent because an agent is nonexistent; you should know that a knower is nonexistent because an experiencer is nonexistent; you should know [F.286.a] that a viewer is nonexistent because a knower is nonexistent; and you should know that the realm of the inconceivable is nonexistent because a viewer is nonexistent. You should know that the earth element is nonexistent because the realm of the inconceivable is nonexistent; you should know that the water element is nonexistent because the earth element is nonexistent; you should know that the fire element is nonexistent because the water element is nonexistent; you should know that the wind element is nonexistent because the fire element is nonexistent; you should know that the space element is nonexistent because the wind element is nonexistent; you should know that the consciousness element is nonexistent because the space element is nonexistent; and you should know that space is nonexistent because the consciousness element is nonexistent. You should know that the Great Vehicle is nonexistent because space is nonexistent. You should know that the immeasurable is nonexistent because the Great Vehicle is nonexistent; you should know that the countless is nonexistent because the immeasurable is nonexistent; you should know that the unfathomable is nonexistent because the countless is nonexistent; and you should know that all phenomena are nonexistent because the unfathomable is nonexistent.

11.88      “For this reason, too, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle gives space to countless, immeasurable beings. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the self, a being, a life form, a living being, a life, an individual, a person, one born of Manu, a child of Manu, an agent, an experiencer, a knower, a viewer, the realm of the inconceivable, the earth element, the water element, the fire element, the wind [F.286.b] element, the space element, the consciousness element, space, the Great Vehicle, the immeasurable, the countless, the unfathomable, and all phenomena, they all cannot be apprehended.

11.89      “Moreover, Subhūti, you should know that a being is nonexistent because the self is nonexistent; you should know that a life form is nonexistent because a being is nonexistent; you should know that a living being is nonexistent because a life form is nonexistent; you should know that a life is nonexistent because a living being is nonexistent; you should know that an individual is nonexistent because a life is nonexistent; you should know that a person is nonexistent because an individual is nonexistent; you should know that one born of Manu is nonexistent because a person is nonexistent; you should know that a child of Manu is nonexistent because one born of Manu is nonexistent; you should know that an agent is nonexistent because a child of Manu is nonexistent; you should know that an experiencer is nonexistent because an agent is nonexistent; you should know that a knower is nonexistent because an experiencer is nonexistent; you should know that a viewer is nonexistent because a knower is nonexistent; and you should know that the realm of the inconceivable is nonexistent because a viewer is nonexistent. You should know that ignorance is nonexistent because the realm of the inconceivable is nonexistent; you should know that formative predispositions are nonexistent because ignorance is nonexistent;

you should know that consciousness is nonexistent because formative predispositions are nonexistent; you should know that name and form are nonexistent because consciousness is nonexistent; you should know that the six sense fields are nonexistent because name and form are nonexistent; you should know that sensory contact is nonexistent because the six sense fields are nonexistent; you should know that sensation is nonexistent because sensory contact is nonexistent; [F.287.a] you should know that craving is nonexistent because sensation is nonexistent; you should know that grasping is nonexistent because craving is nonexistent; you should know that the rebirth process is nonexistent because grasping is nonexistent; you should know that birth is nonexistent because the rebirth process is nonexistent; you should know that aging and death are nonexistent because the rebirth process is nonexistent; and you should know that space is nonexistent because aging and death are nonexistent. You should know that the Great Vehicle is nonexistent because space is nonexistent. You should know that the immeasurable is nonexistent because the Great Vehicle is nonexistent; you should know that the countless is nonexistent because the immeasurable is nonexistent; you should know that the unfathomable is nonexistent because the countless is nonexistent; and you should know that all phenomena are nonexistent because the unfathomable is nonexistent.

11.90 “For this reason, too, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle gives space to countless, immeasurable beings. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the self, a being, a life form, a living being, a life, an individual, a person, one born of Manu, a child of Manu, an agent, an experiencer, a knower, a viewer, the realm of the inconceivable, ignorance, formative predispositions, consciousness, name and form, the six sense fields, sensory contact, sensation, craving, grasping, the rebirth process, birth, aging and death, space, the Great Vehicle, the immeasurable, [F.287.b] the countless, the unfathomable, and all phenomena, they all cannot be apprehended.

11.91 “Moreover, Subhūti, you should know that a being is nonexistent because the self is nonexistent; you should know that a life form is nonexistent because a being is nonexistent; you should know that a living being is nonexistent because a life form is nonexistent; you should know that a life is nonexistent because a living being is nonexistent; you should know that an individual is nonexistent because a life is nonexistent; you should know that a person is nonexistent because an individual is nonexistent; you should know that one born of Manu is nonexistent because a person is nonexistent; you should know that a child of Manu is nonexistent because one born of Manu is nonexistent; you should know that an agent is nonexistent because a child of Manu is nonexistent; you should know that an experiencer is nonexistent because an agent is nonexistent; you should know that a knower is nonexistent because an experiencer is nonexistent; you should know that a viewer is nonexistent because a knower is nonexistent; and you should know that the realm of the inconceivable is nonexistent because a viewer is nonexistent. You should know that the perfection of generosity is nonexistent because the realm of the inconceivable is nonexistent; you should know that the perfection of ethical discipline is nonexistent because the perfection of generosity is nonexistent; you should know that the perfection of tolerance is nonexistent because the perfection of ethical discipline is nonexistent; you should know that the perfection of perseverance is nonexistent because the perfection of tolerance is nonexistent; you should know that the perfection of meditative concentration is nonexistent because the perfection of perseverance is nonexistent; you should know that the perfection of wisdom is nonexistent because the perfection of meditative concentration is [F.288.a] nonexistent; and you should know that space is nonexistent because the perfection of wisdom is nonexistent. You should know that the Great Vehicle is nonexistent because space is nonexistent. You should know that the immeasurable is nonexistent because the Great Vehicle is nonexistent; you should know that the countless is nonexistent because the immeasurable is nonexistent; you should know that the unfathomable is nonexistent because the countless is nonexistent; and you should know that all phenomena are nonexistent because the unfathomable is nonexistent.

11.92 “For this reason, too, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle gives space to countless, immeasurable beings. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the self, a being, a life form, a living being, a life, an individual, a person, one born of Manu, a child of Manu, an agent, an experiencer, a knower, a viewer, the realm of the inconceivable, the perfection of generosity, the perfection of ethical discipline, the perfection of tolerance, the perfection of perseverance, the perfection of meditative concentration, the perfection of wisdom, space, the Great Vehicle, the immeasurable, the countless, the unfathomable, and all phenomena, they all cannot be apprehended.

11.93 “Moreover, Subhūti, you should know that a being is nonexistent because the self is nonexistent; you should know that a life form [F.288.b] is nonexistent because a being is nonexistent; you should know that a living being is nonexistent because a life form is nonexistent; you should know that a life is nonexistent because a living being is nonexistent; you should know that an individual is nonexistent because a life is nonexistent; you should know that a person is nonexistent because an individual is nonexistent; you should know that one born of Manu is nonexistent because a person is nonexistent; you should know that a child of Manu is nonexistent because one born of Manu is nonexistent; you should know that an agent is nonexistent because a child of Manu is nonexistent; you should know that an experiencer is nonexistent because an agent is nonexistent; you should know that a knower is nonexistent because an experiencer is nonexistent; you should know that a viewer is nonexistent because a knower is nonexistent; and you should know that the realm of the inconceivable is nonexistent because a viewer is nonexistent. You should know that the emptiness of internal phenomena is nonexistent because the realm of the inconceivable is nonexistent; you should know that the emptiness of external phenomena is nonexistent because the emptiness of internal phenomena is nonexistent; you should know that the emptiness of external and internal phenomena is nonexistent because the emptiness of external phenomena is nonexistent; you should know that the emptiness of emptiness is nonexistent because the emptiness of external and internal phenomena is nonexistent; you should know that the emptiness of great extent is nonexistent because the emptiness of emptiness is nonexistent; you should know that the emptiness of ultimate reality is nonexistent because the emptiness of great extent is nonexistent; you should know that the emptiness of conditioned phenomena is nonexistent because the emptiness of ultimate reality is nonexistent; you should know that the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena is nonexistent because the emptiness of conditioned phenomena is nonexistent; you should know that the emptiness of the unlimited is nonexistent because the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena is nonexistent; you should know that the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end is nonexistent because the emptiness of the unlimited is nonexistent; you should know that the emptiness of nonexclusion is nonexistent because the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end [F.289.a] is nonexistent; you should know that the emptiness of inherent nature is nonexistent because the emptiness of nonexclusion is nonexistent; you should know that the emptiness of all phenomena is nonexistent because the emptiness of inherent nature is nonexistent; you should know that the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics is nonexistent because the emptiness of all phenomena is nonexistent; you should know that the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended is nonexistent because the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics is nonexistent; you should know that the emptiness of nonentities is nonexistent because the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended is nonexistent; you should know that the emptiness of essential nature is nonexistent because the emptiness of nonentities is nonexistent; you should know that the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities is nonexistent because the emptiness of essential nature is nonexistent; and you should know that space is nonexistent because the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities is nonexistent. You should know that the Great Vehicle is nonexistent because space is nonexistent. You should know that the immeasurable is nonexistent because the Great Vehicle is nonexistent; you should know that the countless is nonexistent because the immeasurable is nonexistent; you should know that the unfathomable is nonexistent because the countless is nonexistent; and you should know that all phenomena are nonexistent because the unfathomable is nonexistent.

11.94 “For this reason, too, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle gives space to countless, immeasurable beings. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the self, a being, a life form, a living being, a life, an individual, a person, one born of Manu, a child of Manu, an agent, an experiencer, a knower, a viewer, the realm [F.289.b] of the inconceivable, the emptiness of internal phenomena, the emptiness of external phenomena, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, the emptiness of emptiness, the emptiness of great extent, the emptiness of ultimate reality, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, the emptiness of the unlimited, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, the emptiness of nonexclusion, the emptiness of inherent nature, the emptiness of all phenomena, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, the emptiness of nonentities, the emptiness of essential nature, the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities, space, the Great Vehicle, the immeasurable, the countless, the unfathomable, and all phenomena, they all cannot be apprehended.

11.95 “Moreover, Subhūti, you should know that a being is nonexistent because the self is nonexistent; you should know that a life form is nonexistent because a being is nonexistent; you should know that a living being is nonexistent because a life form is nonexistent; you should know that a life is nonexistent because a living being is nonexistent; you should know that an individual is nonexistent because a life is nonexistent; you should know that a person is nonexistent because an individual is nonexistent; you should know that one born of Manu is nonexistent because a person is nonexistent; you should know that a child of Manu is nonexistent because one born of Manu is nonexistent; you should know that an agent is nonexistent because a child of Manu is nonexistent; [F.290.a] you should know that an experiencer is nonexistent because an agent is nonexistent; you should know that a knower is nonexistent because an experiencer is nonexistent; you should know that a viewer is nonexistent because a knower is nonexistent; and you should know that the realm of the inconceivable is nonexistent because a viewer is nonexistent. You should know that the applications of mindfulness are nonexistent because the realm of the inconceivable is nonexistent; you should know that the correct exertions are nonexistent because the applications of mindfulness are nonexistent; you should know that the supports for miraculous ability are nonexistent because the correct exertions are nonexistent; you should know that the faculties are nonexistent because the supports for miraculous ability are nonexistent; you should know that the powers are nonexistent because the faculties are nonexistent; you should know that the branches of enlightenment are nonexistent because the powers are nonexistent; you should know that the noble eightfold path is nonexistent because the branches of enlightenment are nonexistent; and you should know that space is nonexistent because the noble eightfold path is nonexistent. You should know that the Great Vehicle is nonexistent because space is nonexistent. You should know that the immeasurable is nonexistent because the Great Vehicle is nonexistent; you should know that the countless is nonexistent because the immeasurable is nonexistent; you should know that the unfathomable is nonexistent because the countless is nonexistent; and you should know that all phenomena are nonexistent because the unfathomable is nonexistent.

11.96      “For this reason, too, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle gives space to countless, immeasurable beings. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the self, a being, a life form, a living being, a life, an individual, a person, one born of Manu, a child of Manu, [F.290.b] an agent, an experiencer, a knower, a viewer, the realm of the inconceivable, the applications of mindfulness, the correct exertions, the supports for miraculous ability, the faculties, the powers, the branches of enlightenment, the noble eightfold path, space, the Great Vehicle, the immeasurable, the countless, the unfathomable, and all phenomena, they all cannot be apprehended.

11.97      “Moreover, Subhūti, you should know that a being is nonexistent because the self is nonexistent; you should know that a life form is nonexistent because a being is nonexistent; you should know that a living being is nonexistent because a life form is nonexistent; you should know that a life is nonexistent because a living being is nonexistent; you should know that an individual is nonexistent because a life is nonexistent; you should know that a person is nonexistent because an individual is nonexistent; you should know that one born of Manu is nonexistent because a person is nonexistent; you should know that a child of Manu is nonexistent because one born of Manu is nonexistent; you should know that an agent is nonexistent because a child of Manu is nonexistent; you should know that an experiencer is nonexistent because an agent is nonexistent; you should know that a knower is nonexistent because an experiencer is nonexistent; you should know that a viewer is nonexistent because a knower is nonexistent; and you should know that the realm of the inconceivable is nonexistent because a viewer is nonexistent. You should know that the truths of the noble ones are nonexistent because the realm of the inconceivable is nonexistent; [F.291.a] you should know that the meditative concentrations are nonexistent because the truths of the noble ones are nonexistent; you should know that the immeasurable attitudes are nonexistent because the meditative concentrations are nonexistent; you should know that the formless absorptions are nonexistent because the immeasurable attitudes are nonexistent; you should know that the liberations are nonexistent because the formless absorptions are nonexistent; you should know that the serial steps of meditative absorption are nonexistent because the liberations are nonexistent; you should know that the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation are nonexistent because the serial steps of meditative absorption are nonexistent; you should know that the extrasensory powers are nonexistent because the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation are nonexistent; you should know that the meditative stabilities are nonexistent because the extrasensory powers are nonexistent; you should know that the dhāraṇī gateways are nonexistent because the meditative stabilities are nonexistent; and you should know that space is nonexistent because the dhāraṇī gateways are nonexistent. You should know that the Great Vehicle is nonexistent because space is nonexistent. You should know that the immeasurable is nonexistent because the Great Vehicle is nonexistent; you should know that the countless is nonexistent because the immeasurable is nonexistent; you should know that the unfathomable is nonexistent because the countless is nonexistent; and you should know that all phenomena are nonexistent because the unfathomable is nonexistent.

11.98      “For this reason, too, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle gives space to countless, immeasurable beings. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the self, a being, a life form, a living being, one who [F.291.b] lives, an individual, a person, one born of Manu, a child of Manu, an agent, an experiencer, a knower, a viewer, the realm of the inconceivable, the truths of the noble ones, the meditative concentrations, the immeasurable attitudes, the formless absorptions, the eight liberations, the nine serial steps of meditative absorption, the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation, the extrasensory powers, the meditative stabilities, the dhāraṇī gateways, space, the Great Vehicle, the immeasurable, the countless, the unfathomable, and all phenomena, they all cannot be apprehended.

11.99       “Moreover, Subhūti, you should know that a being is nonexistent because the self is nonexistent; you should know that a life form is nonexistent because a being is nonexistent; you should know that a living being is nonexistent because a life form is nonexistent; you should know that a life is nonexistent because a living being is nonexistent; you should know that an individual is nonexistent because a life is nonexistent; you should know that a person is nonexistent because an individual is nonexistent; you should know that one born of Manu is nonexistent because a person is nonexistent; you should know that a child of Manu is nonexistent because one born of Manu is nonexistent; you should know that an agent is nonexistent because a child of Manu is nonexistent; you should know that an experiencer is nonexistent because an agent is nonexistent; you should know that a knower is nonexistent because an experiencer is nonexistent; [F.292.a] you should know that a viewer is nonexistent because a knower is nonexistent; and you should know that the realm of the inconceivable is nonexistent because a viewer is nonexistent. You should know that the powers of the tathāgatas are nonexistent because the realm of the inconceivable is nonexistent; you should know that the fearlessnesses are nonexistent because the powers of the tathāgatas are nonexistent; you should know that the kinds of exact knowledge are nonexistent because the fearlessnesses are nonexistent; you should know that great compassion is nonexistent because the kinds of exact knowledge are nonexistent; you should know that the distinct qualities of the buddhas are nonexistent because great compassion is nonexistent; and you should know that space is nonexistent because the distinct qualities of the buddhas are nonexistent. You should know that the Great Vehicle is nonexistent because space is nonexistent. You should know that the immeasurable is nonexistent because the Great Vehicle is nonexistent; you should know that the countless is nonexistent because the immeasurable is nonexistent; you should know that the unfathomable is nonexistent because the countless is nonexistent; and you should know that all phenomena are nonexistent because the unfathomable is nonexistent.

11.100       “For this reason, too, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle gives space to countless, immeasurable beings. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the self, a being, a life form, a living being, a life, an individual, a person, one born of Manu, a child of Manu, an agent, an experiencer, a knower, a viewer, [F.292.b] the realm of the inconceivable, the powers of the tathāgatas, the fearlessnesses, the kinds of exact knowledge, great compassion, the distinct qualities of the buddhas, space, the Great Vehicle, the immeasurable, the countless, the unfathomable, and all phenomena, they all cannot be apprehended.

11.101 “Moreover, Subhūti, you should know that a being is nonexistent because the self is nonexistent; you should know that a life form is nonexistent because a being is nonexistent; you should know that a living being is nonexistent because a life form is nonexistent; you should know that a life is nonexistent because a living being is nonexistent; you should know that an individual is nonexistent because a life is nonexistent; you should know that a person is nonexistent because an individual is nonexistent; you should know that one born of Manu is nonexistent because a person is nonexistent; you should know that a child of Manu is nonexistent because one born of Manu is nonexistent; you should know that an agent is nonexistent because a child of Manu is nonexistent; you should know that an experiencer is nonexistent because an agent is nonexistent; you should know that a knower is nonexistent because an experiencer is nonexistent; you should know that a viewer is nonexistent because a knower is nonexistent; and you should know that the realm of the inconceivable is nonexistent because a viewer is nonexistent. You should know that the level of the spiritual family is nonexistent because the realm of the inconceivable is nonexistent; you should know that the eighth level is nonexistent because the level of the spiritual family is nonexistent; you should know that the level of insight is nonexistent because the eighth level is nonexistent; you should know that the level of attenuated refinement is nonexistent because the level of insight is nonexistent; you should know that the level of no attachment is nonexistent [F.293.a] because the level of attenuated refinement is nonexistent; you should know that the level of spiritual achievement is nonexistent because the level of no attachment is nonexistent; and you should know that space is nonexistent because the level of spiritual achievement is nonexistent. You should know that the Great Vehicle is nonexistent because space is nonexistent. You should know that the immeasurable is nonexistent because the Great Vehicle is nonexistent; you should know that the countless is nonexistent because the immeasurable is nonexistent; you should know that the unfathomable is nonexistent because the countless is nonexistent; and you should know that all phenomena are nonexistent because the unfathomable is nonexistent.

11.102 “For this reason, too, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle gives space to countless, immeasurable beings. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the self, a being, a life form, a living being, a life, an individual, a person, one born of Manu, a child of Manu, an agent, an experiencer, a knower, a viewer, the realm of the inconceivable, the level of the spiritual family, the eighth level, the level of insight, the level of attenuated refinement, the level of no attachment, the level of spiritual achievement, space, the Great Vehicle, the immeasurable, the countless, the unfathomable, and all phenomena, they all cannot be apprehended.

11.103 “Moreover, [F.293.b] Subhūti, you should know that a being is nonexistent because the self is nonexistent; you should know that a life form is nonexistent because a being is nonexistent; you should know that a living being is nonexistent because a life form is nonexistent; you should know that a life is nonexistent because a living being is nonexistent; you should know that an individual is nonexistent because a life is nonexistent; you should know that a person is nonexistent because an individual is nonexistent; you should know that one born of Manu is nonexistent because a person is nonexistent; you should know that a child of Manu is nonexistent because one born of Manu is nonexistent; you should know that an agent is nonexistent because a child of Manu is nonexistent; you should know that an experiencer is nonexistent because an agent is nonexistent; you should know that a knower is nonexistent because an experiencer is nonexistent; you should know that a viewer is nonexistent because a knower is nonexistent; and you should know that the realm of the inconceivable is nonexistent because a viewer is nonexistent. You should know that those who have entered the stream are nonexistent because the realm of the inconceivable is nonexistent; you should know that once-returners are nonexistent because those who have entered the stream are nonexistent; you should know that non-returners are nonexistent because once-returners are nonexistent; you should know that arhats are nonexistent because non-returners are nonexistent; and you should know that space is nonexistent because arhats are nonexistent. You should know that the Great Vehicle is nonexistent because space is nonexistent. You should know that the immeasurable is nonexistent because the Great Vehicle is nonexistent; you should know that the countless is nonexistent because the immeasurable is nonexistent; you should know that the unfathomable is nonexistent because the countless is nonexistent; and you should know that all phenomena are nonexistent because the unfathomable is nonexistent.

11.104 “For this reason, too, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle gives space to countless, immeasurable beings. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the self, [F.294.a] a being, a life form, a living being, a life, an individual, a person one born of Manu, a child of Manu, an agent, an experiencer, a knower, a viewer, the realm of the inconceivable, those who have entered the stream, once-returners, non-returners, arhats, space, the Great Vehicle, the immeasurable, the countless, the unfathomable, and all phenomena, they all cannot be apprehended.

11.105 “Moreover, Subhūti, you should know that a being is nonexistent because the self is nonexistent; you should know that a life form is nonexistent because a being is nonexistent; you should know that a living being is nonexistent because a life form is nonexistent; you should know that a life is nonexistent because a living being is nonexistent; you should know that an individual is nonexistent because a life is nonexistent; you should know that a person is nonexistent because an individual is nonexistent; you should know that one born of Manu is nonexistent because a person is nonexistent; you should know that a child of Manu is nonexistent because one born of Manu is nonexistent; you should know that an agent is nonexistent because a child of Manu is nonexistent; you should know that an experiencer is nonexistent because an agent is nonexistent; you should know that a knower is nonexistent because an experiencer is nonexistent; you should know that a viewer is nonexistent because a knower is nonexistent; and you should know that the realm of the inconceivable is nonexistent because a viewer is nonexistent. You should know that pratyekabuddhas [F.294.b] are nonexistent because the realm of the inconceivable is nonexistent; you should know that perfectly complete buddhas are nonexistent because pratyekabuddhas are nonexistent; and you should know that space is nonexistent because perfectly complete buddhas are nonexistent. You should know that the Great Vehicle is nonexistent because space is nonexistent. You should know that the immeasurable is nonexistent because the Great Vehicle is nonexistent; you should know that the countless is nonexistent because the immeasurable is nonexistent; you should know that the unfathomable is nonexistent because the countless is nonexistent; and you should know that all phenomena are nonexistent because the unfathomable is nonexistent.

11.106 “For this reason, too, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle gives space to countless, immeasurable beings. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the self, a being, a life form, a living being, a life, an individual, a person, one born of Manu, a child of Manu, an agent, an experiencer, a knower, a viewer, the realm of the inconceivable, pratyekabuddhas, perfectly complete buddhas, space, the Great Vehicle, the immeasurable, the countless, the unfathomable, and all phenomena, they all cannot be apprehended.

11.107 “Moreover, Subhūti, you should know that a being is nonexistent because the self is nonexistent; you should know that a life form is nonexistent because a being is nonexistent; you should know that a living being [F.295.a] is nonexistent because a life form is nonexistent; you should know that a life is nonexistent because a living being is nonexistent; you should know that an individual is nonexistent because a life is nonexistent; you should know that a person is nonexistent because an individual is nonexistent; you should know that one born of Manu is nonexistent because a person is nonexistent; you should know that a child of Manu is nonexistent because one born of Manu is nonexistent; you should know that an agent is nonexistent because a child of Manu is nonexistent; you should know that an experiencer is nonexistent because an agent is nonexistent; you should know that a knower is nonexistent because an experiencer is nonexistent; you should know that a viewer is nonexistent because a knower is nonexistent; and you should know that the realm of the inconceivable is nonexistent because a viewer is nonexistent. You should know the vehicle of the śrāvakas is nonexistent because the realm of the inconceivable is nonexistent; you should know that the vehicle of the pratyekabuddhas is nonexistent because the vehicle of the śrāvakas is nonexistent; you should know that the vehicle of the buddhas is nonexistent because the vehicle of the pratyekabuddhas is nonexistent; you should know that all-aspect omniscience is nonexistent because the vehicle of the buddhas is nonexistent; and you should know that space is nonexistent because all-aspect omniscience is nonexistent. You should know that the Great Vehicle is nonexistent because space is nonexistent. You should know that the immeasurable is nonexistent because the Great Vehicle is nonexistent; you should know that the countless is nonexistent because the immeasurable is nonexistent; you should know that the unfathomable is nonexistent because the countless is nonexistent; and you should know that all phenomena are nonexistent because the unfathomable is nonexistent.

- 11.108 “For this reason, too, Subhūti, this Great Vehicle gives space to countless, immeasurable beings. If you ask why, Subhūti, [F.295.b] it is because the self, a being, a life form, a living being, a life, an individual, a person, one born of Manu, a child of Manu, an agent, an experiencer, a knower, a viewer, the realm of the inconceivable, the vehicle of the śrāvakas, the vehicle of the pratyekabuddhas, the vehicle of the buddhas, all-aspect omniscience, space, the Great Vehicle, the immeasurable, the countless, the unfathomable, and all phenomena, they all cannot be apprehended.
- 11.109 “To illustrate, Subhūti, just as the realm of nirvāṇa gives space to immeasurable, countless, unfathomable beings, similarly this Great Vehicle, too, gives space to immeasurable, countless, unfathomable beings. Subhūti, just as space gives space to immeasurable, countless, unfathomable beings, similarly this Great Vehicle, too, gives space to immeasurable, countless, unfathomable beings.
- 11.110 “Subhūti, you said, ‘In this Great Vehicle, “going and coming” are nonexistent,<sup>590</sup> and “standing still” is nonexistent.’<sup>591</sup> So it is, Subhūti, so it is! In this Great Vehicle going and coming are nonexistent, and standing still too is nonexistent. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because all phenomena are unmoving. They do not come from anywhere, they do not go anywhere, and they do not stand still anywhere. [F.296.a]

11.111 “If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because physical forms do not come from anywhere, they do not go anywhere, and they do not stand still anywhere. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the inherent nature<sup>592</sup> of physical forms does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the real nature of physical forms does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the essential nature of physical forms does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; and the intrinsic defining characteristics of physical forms do not come from anywhere, do not go anywhere, and do not stand still anywhere. Feelings do not come from anywhere, they do not go anywhere, and they do not stand still anywhere. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the inherent nature of feelings does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the real nature of feelings does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the essential nature of feelings does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; and the intrinsic defining characteristics of feelings do not come from anywhere, do not go anywhere, and do not stand still anywhere. Perceptions do not come from anywhere, they do not go anywhere, and they do not stand still anywhere. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the inherent nature of perceptions does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the real nature of perceptions does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the essential nature [F.296.b] of perceptions does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; and the intrinsic defining characteristics of perceptions do not come from anywhere, do not go anywhere, and do not stand still anywhere. Formative predispositions do not come from anywhere, they do not go anywhere, and they do not stand still anywhere. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the inherent nature of formative predispositions does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the real nature of formative predispositions does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the essential nature of formative predispositions does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; and the intrinsic defining characteristics of formative predispositions do not come from anywhere, do not go anywhere, and do not stand still anywhere. Consciousness does not come from anywhere, it does not go anywhere, and it does not stand still anywhere. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the inherent nature of consciousness does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the real nature of consciousness does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the essential nature of consciousness does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; and the intrinsic defining characteristics of consciousness do not come from anywhere, do not go anywhere, and do not stand still anywhere.

11.112 “The eyes do not come from anywhere, they do not go anywhere, and they do not stand still anywhere. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the inherent nature of the eyes [F.297.a] does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the real nature of the eyes does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the essential nature of the eyes does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; and the intrinsic defining characteristics of the eyes do not come from anywhere, do not go anywhere, and do not stand still anywhere. The ears do not come from anywhere, they do not go anywhere, and they do not stand still anywhere. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the inherent nature of the ears does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the real nature of the ears does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the essential nature of the ears does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; and the intrinsic defining characteristics of the ears do not come from anywhere, do not go anywhere, and do not stand still anywhere. The nose does not come from anywhere, it does not go anywhere, and it does not stand still anywhere. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the inherent nature of the nose does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the real nature of the nose does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the essential nature of the nose does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; and the intrinsic defining characteristics of the nose do not come from anywhere, do not go anywhere, and do not stand still anywhere. The tongue does not come from anywhere, it does not go anywhere, [F.297.b] and it does not stand still anywhere. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the inherent nature of the tongue does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the real nature of the tongue does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the essential nature of the tongue does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; and the intrinsic defining characteristics of the tongue do not come from anywhere, do not go anywhere, and do not stand still anywhere. The body does not come from anywhere, it does not go anywhere, and it does not stand still anywhere. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the inherent nature of the body does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the real nature of the body does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the essential nature of the body does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; and the intrinsic defining characteristics of the body do not come from anywhere, do not go anywhere, and do not stand still anywhere. The mental faculty does not come from anywhere, it does not go anywhere, and it does not stand still anywhere. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the inherent nature of the mental faculty does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the real nature of the mental faculty does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the essential nature of the mental faculty does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; and the intrinsic defining characteristics of the mental faculty do not come from anywhere, do not go anywhere, and do not [F.298.a] stand still anywhere. [B21]

11.113 “Sights do not come from anywhere, they do not go anywhere, and they do not stand still anywhere. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the inherent nature of sights does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the real nature of sights does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the essential nature of sights does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; and the intrinsic defining characteristics of sights do not come from anywhere, do not go anywhere, and do not stand still anywhere. Sounds do not come from anywhere, they do not go anywhere, and they do not stand still anywhere. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the inherent nature of sounds does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the real nature of sounds does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the essential nature of sounds does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; and the intrinsic defining characteristics of sounds do not come from anywhere, do not go anywhere, and do not stand still anywhere. Odors do not come from anywhere, they do not go anywhere, and they do not stand still anywhere. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the inherent nature of odors does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the real nature of odors does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not [F.298.b] stand still anywhere; the essential nature of odors does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; and the intrinsic defining characteristics of odors do not come from anywhere, do not go anywhere, and do not stand still anywhere. Tastes do not come from anywhere, they do not go anywhere, and they do not stand still anywhere. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the inherent nature of tastes does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the real nature of tastes does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the essential nature of tastes does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; and the intrinsic defining characteristics of tastes do not come from anywhere, do not go anywhere, and do not stand still anywhere. Tangibles do not come from anywhere, they do not go anywhere, and they do not stand still anywhere. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the inherent nature of tangibles does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the real nature of tangibles does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the essential nature of tangibles does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; and the intrinsic defining characteristics of tangibles do not come from anywhere, do not go anywhere, and do not stand still anywhere. Mental phenomena do not come from anywhere, they do not go anywhere, and they do not stand still anywhere. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the inherent nature of mental phenomena does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the real nature of mental phenomena does not come from anywhere, [F.299.a] does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the essential nature of mental phenomena does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; and the intrinsic defining characteristics of mental phenomena do not come from anywhere, do not go anywhere, and do not stand still anywhere.

11.114 “Visual consciousness does not come from anywhere, it does not go anywhere, and it does not stand still anywhere. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the inherent nature of visual consciousness does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the real nature of visual consciousness does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the essential nature of visual consciousness does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; and the intrinsic defining characteristics of visual consciousness do not come from anywhere, do not go anywhere, and do not stand still anywhere. Auditory consciousness does not come from anywhere, it does not go anywhere, and it does not stand still anywhere. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the inherent nature of auditory consciousness does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the real nature of auditory consciousness does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the essential nature of auditory consciousness does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; and the intrinsic defining characteristics of auditory consciousness do not come from anywhere, do not go anywhere, and do not stand still anywhere. Olfactory consciousness does not come from anywhere, it does not go anywhere, and it does not stand still anywhere. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the inherent nature of olfactory consciousness does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the real nature of olfactory consciousness does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the essential nature of olfactory consciousness does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; and the intrinsic defining characteristics of olfactory consciousness do not come from anywhere, do not go anywhere, and do not [F.299.b] stand still anywhere. Gustatory consciousness does not come from anywhere, it does not go anywhere, and it does not stand still anywhere. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the inherent nature of gustatory consciousness does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the real nature of gustatory consciousness does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the essential nature of gustatory consciousness does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; and the intrinsic defining characteristics of gustatory consciousness do not come from anywhere, do not go anywhere, and do not stand still anywhere. Tactile consciousness does not come from anywhere, it does not go anywhere, and it does not stand still anywhere. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the inherent nature of tactile consciousness does not come from anywhere, does not go [F.300.a] anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the real nature of tactile consciousness does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the essential nature of tactile consciousness does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; and the intrinsic defining characteristics of tactile consciousness do not come from anywhere, do not go anywhere, and do not stand still anywhere. Mental consciousness does not come from anywhere, it does not go anywhere, and it does not stand still anywhere. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the inherent nature of mental consciousness does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the real nature of mental consciousness does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the essential nature of mental consciousness does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; and the intrinsic defining characteristics of mental consciousness do not come from anywhere, do not go anywhere, and do not stand still anywhere.

11.115 “Visually compounded sensory contact does not come from anywhere, it does not go anywhere, and it does not stand still anywhere. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the inherent nature of visually compounded sensory contact does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the real nature of visually compounded sensory contact does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the essential nature [F.300.b] of visually compounded sensory contact does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; and the intrinsic defining characteristics of visually compounded sensory contact do not come from anywhere, do not go anywhere, and do not stand still anywhere. Aurally compounded sensory contact does not come from anywhere, it does not go anywhere, and it does not stand still anywhere. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the inherent nature of aurally compounded sensory contact does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the real nature of aurally compounded sensory contact does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the essential nature of aurally compounded sensory contact does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; and the intrinsic defining characteristics of aurally compounded sensory contact do not come from anywhere, do not go anywhere, and do not stand still anywhere. Nasally compounded sensory contact does not come from anywhere, it does not go anywhere, and it does not stand still anywhere. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the inherent nature of nasally compounded sensory contact does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the real nature of nasally compounded sensory contact does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the essential nature of nasally compounded sensory contact does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; and the intrinsic defining characteristics of nasally compounded sensory contact do not come from anywhere, do not go anywhere, and do not stand still anywhere. [F.301.a] Lingually compounded sensory contact does not come from anywhere, it does not go anywhere, and it does not stand still anywhere. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the inherent nature of lingually compounded sensory contact does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the real nature of lingually compounded sensory contact does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the essential nature of lingually compounded sensory contact does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; and the intrinsic defining characteristics of lingually compounded sensory contact do not come from anywhere, do not go anywhere, and do not stand still anywhere. Corporeally compounded sensory contact does not come from anywhere, it does not go anywhere, and it does not stand still anywhere. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the inherent nature of corporeally compounded sensory contact does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the real nature of corporeally compounded sensory contact does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the essential nature of corporeally compounded sensory contact does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; and the intrinsic defining characteristics of corporeally compounded sensory contact do not come from anywhere, do not go anywhere, and do not stand still anywhere. Mentally compounded sensory contact does not come from anywhere, it does not go [F.301.b] anywhere, and it does not stand still anywhere. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the inherent nature of mentally compounded sensory contact does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the real nature of mentally compounded sensory contact does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the essential nature of mentally compounded sensory contact does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; and the intrinsic defining characteristics of mentally compounded sensory contact do not come from anywhere, do not go anywhere, and do not stand still anywhere.

- 11.116 “Feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact do not come from anywhere, they do not go anywhere, and they do not stand still anywhere. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the inherent nature of feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the real nature of feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the essential nature of feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; and the intrinsic defining characteristics of feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact do not come from anywhere, do not go anywhere, and do not stand still anywhere. Feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact do not come from anywhere, they do not go anywhere, and they do not stand still anywhere. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the inherent nature of feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the real nature of feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact does not come from [F.302.a] anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the essential nature of feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; and the intrinsic defining characteristics of feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact do not come from anywhere, do not go anywhere, and do not stand still anywhere. Feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact do not come from anywhere, they do not go anywhere, and they do not stand still anywhere. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the inherent nature of feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the real nature of feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the essential nature of feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; and the intrinsic defining characteristics of feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact do not come from anywhere, do not go anywhere, and do not stand still anywhere. Feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact do not come from anywhere, they do not go anywhere, and they do not stand still anywhere. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the inherent nature of feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the real nature of feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, [F.302.b] and does not stand still anywhere; the essential nature of feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; and the intrinsic defining characteristics of feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact do not come from anywhere, do not go anywhere, and do not stand still anywhere. Feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact do not come from anywhere, they do not go anywhere, and they do not stand still anywhere. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the inherent nature of feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the real nature of feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the essential nature of feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; and the intrinsic defining characteristics of feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact do not come from anywhere, do not go anywhere, and do not stand still anywhere. Feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact do not come from anywhere, they do not go anywhere, and they do not stand still anywhere. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the inherent nature of feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the real nature of feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; [F.303.a] the essential nature of feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; and the intrinsic defining characteristics of feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact do not come from anywhere, do not go anywhere, and do not stand still anywhere.

11.117 “The earth element does not come from anywhere, it does not go anywhere, and it does not stand still anywhere. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the inherent nature of the earth element does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the real nature of the earth element does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the essential nature of the earth element does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; and the intrinsic defining characteristics of the earth element do not come from anywhere, do not go anywhere, and do not stand still anywhere. The water element does not come from anywhere, it does not go anywhere, and it does not stand still anywhere. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the inherent nature of the water element does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the real nature of the water element does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the essential nature of the water element does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; and the intrinsic defining characteristics of the water element do not come from anywhere, do not go anywhere, and do not stand still anywhere. The fire element does not come from anywhere, it does not go anywhere, and it does not [F.303.b] stand still anywhere. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the inherent nature of the fire element does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the real nature of the fire element does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the essential nature of the fire element does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; and the intrinsic defining characteristics of the fire element do not come from anywhere, do not go anywhere, and do not stand still anywhere. The wind element does not come from anywhere, it does not go anywhere, and it does not stand still anywhere. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the inherent nature of the wind element does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the real nature of the wind element does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the essential nature of the wind element does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; and the intrinsic defining characteristics of the wind element do not come from anywhere, do not go anywhere, and do not stand still anywhere. The space element does not come from anywhere, it does not go anywhere, and it does not stand still anywhere. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the inherent nature of the space element does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the real nature of the space element does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the essential nature of the space element does not come from anywhere, does not [F.304.a] go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; and the intrinsic defining characteristics of the space element do not come from anywhere, do not go anywhere, and do not stand still anywhere. The consciousness element does not come from anywhere, it does not go anywhere, and it does not stand still anywhere. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the inherent nature of the consciousness element does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the real nature of the consciousness element does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the essential nature of the consciousness element does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; and the intrinsic defining characteristics of the consciousness element do not come from anywhere, do not go anywhere, and do not stand still anywhere.

11.118     “Ignorance does not come from anywhere, it does not go anywhere, and it does not stand still anywhere. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the inherent nature of ignorance does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the real nature of ignorance does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the essential nature of ignorance does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; and the intrinsic defining characteristics of ignorance do not come from anywhere, do not go anywhere, and do not stand still anywhere. Formative predispositions do not come from anywhere, they do not go anywhere, and they do not stand still anywhere. [F.304.b] If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the inherent nature of formative predispositions does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the real nature of formative predispositions does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the essential nature of formative predispositions does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; and the intrinsic defining characteristics of formative predispositions do not come from anywhere, do not go anywhere, and do not stand still anywhere. Consciousness does not come from anywhere, it does not go anywhere, and it does not stand still anywhere. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the inherent nature of consciousness does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the real nature of consciousness does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the essential nature of consciousness does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; and the intrinsic defining characteristics of consciousness do not come from anywhere, do not go anywhere, and do not stand still anywhere. Name and form do not come from anywhere, they do not go anywhere, and they do not stand still anywhere. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the inherent nature of name and form does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not [F.305.a] stand still anywhere; the real nature of name and form does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the essential nature of name and form does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; and the intrinsic defining characteristics of name and form do not come from anywhere, do not go anywhere, and do not stand still anywhere. The six sense fields do not come from anywhere, they do not go anywhere, and they do not stand still anywhere. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the inherent nature of the six sense fields does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the real nature of the six sense fields does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the essential nature of the six sense fields does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; and the intrinsic defining characteristics of the six sense fields do not come from anywhere, do not go anywhere, and do not stand still anywhere. Sensory contact does not come from anywhere, it does not go anywhere, and it does not stand still anywhere. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the inherent nature of sensory contact does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the real nature of sensory contact does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the essential nature of sensory contact does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; and the intrinsic defining characteristics of sensory contact do not come from anywhere, do not go anywhere, and do not stand still anywhere. Sensation does not come from anywhere, it does not go anywhere, and it does not stand still anywhere. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the inherent nature of sensation does not come from anywhere, [F.305.b] does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the real nature of sensation does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the essential nature of sensation does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; and the intrinsic defining characteristics of sensation do not come from anywhere, do not go anywhere, and do not stand still anywhere. Craving does not come from anywhere, it does not go anywhere, and it does not stand still anywhere. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the inherent nature of craving does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the real nature of craving does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the essential nature of craving does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; and the intrinsic defining characteristics of craving do not come from anywhere, do not go anywhere, and do not stand still anywhere. Grasping does not come from anywhere, it does not go anywhere, and it does not stand still anywhere. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the inherent nature of grasping does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the real nature of grasping does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the essential nature of grasping does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; and the intrinsic defining characteristics of grasping do not come from anywhere, do not go anywhere, [F.306.a] and do not stand still anywhere. The rebirth process does not come from anywhere, it does not go anywhere, and it does not stand still anywhere. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the inherent nature of the rebirth process does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the real nature of the rebirth process does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the essential nature of the rebirth process does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; and the intrinsic defining characteristics of the rebirth process do not come from anywhere, do not go anywhere, and do not stand still anywhere. Birth does not come from anywhere, it does not go anywhere, and it does not stand still anywhere. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the inherent nature of birth does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the real nature of birth does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the essential nature of birth does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; and the intrinsic defining characteristics of birth do not come from anywhere, do not go anywhere, and do not stand still anywhere. Aging and death do not come from anywhere, they do not go anywhere, and they do not stand still anywhere. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the inherent nature of aging and death does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the real nature of aging and death does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not [F.306.b] stand still anywhere; the essential nature of aging and death does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; and the intrinsic defining characteristics of aging and death do not come from anywhere, do not go anywhere, and do not stand still anywhere.

11.119     “The perfection of generosity does not come from anywhere, it does not go anywhere, and it does not stand still anywhere. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the inherent nature of the perfection of generosity does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the real nature of the perfection of generosity does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the essential nature of the perfection of generosity does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; and the intrinsic defining characteristics of the perfection of generosity do not come from anywhere, do not go anywhere, and do not stand still anywhere. The perfection of ethical discipline does not come from anywhere, it does not go anywhere, and it does not stand still anywhere. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the inherent nature of the perfection of ethical discipline does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the real nature of the perfection of ethical discipline does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the essential nature of the perfection of ethical discipline does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; and the intrinsic defining characteristics of the perfection of ethical discipline do not come from anywhere, [F.307.a] do not go anywhere, and do not stand still anywhere. The perfection of tolerance does not come from anywhere, it does not go anywhere, and it does not stand still anywhere. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the inherent nature of the perfection of tolerance does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the real nature of the perfection of tolerance does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the essential nature of the perfection of tolerance does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; and the intrinsic defining characteristics of the perfection of tolerance do not come from anywhere, do not go anywhere, and do not stand still anywhere. The perfection of perseverance does not come from anywhere, it does not go anywhere, and it does not stand still anywhere. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the inherent nature of the perfection of perseverance does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the real nature of the perfection of perseverance does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the essential nature of the perfection of perseverance does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; and the intrinsic defining characteristics of the perfection of perseverance do not come from anywhere, do not go anywhere, and do not stand still anywhere. The perfection of meditative concentration does not come from anywhere, it does not go anywhere, and it does not stand still [F.307.b] anywhere. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the inherent nature of the perfection of meditative concentration does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the real nature of the perfection of meditative concentration does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the essential nature of the perfection of meditative concentration does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; and the intrinsic defining characteristics of the perfection of meditative concentration do not come from anywhere, do not go anywhere, and do not stand still anywhere. The perfection of wisdom does not come from anywhere, it does not go anywhere, and it does not stand still anywhere. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the inherent nature of the perfection of wisdom does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the real nature of the perfection of wisdom does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the essential nature of the perfection of wisdom does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; and the intrinsic defining characteristics of the perfection of wisdom do not come from anywhere, do not go anywhere, and do not stand still anywhere.

11.120 “The emptiness of internal phenomena does not come from anywhere, it does not go anywhere, and it does not stand still anywhere. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the inherent nature of the emptiness of internal phenomena does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the real nature [F.308.a] of the emptiness of internal phenomena does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the essential nature of the emptiness of internal phenomena does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; and the intrinsic defining characteristics of the emptiness of internal phenomena do not come from anywhere, do not go anywhere, and do not stand still anywhere. The emptiness of external phenomena does not come from anywhere, it does not go anywhere, and it does not stand still anywhere. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the inherent nature of the emptiness of external phenomena does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the real nature of the emptiness of external phenomena does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the essential nature of the emptiness of external phenomena does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; and the intrinsic defining characteristics of the emptiness of external phenomena do not come from anywhere, do not go anywhere, and do not stand still anywhere. The emptiness of external and internal phenomena does not come from anywhere, it does not go anywhere, and it does not stand still anywhere. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the inherent nature of the emptiness of external and internal phenomena does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the real nature of the emptiness of external and internal phenomena does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the essential nature of the emptiness of external and internal phenomena does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; [F.308.b] and the intrinsic defining characteristics of the emptiness of external and internal phenomena do not come from anywhere, do not go anywhere, and do not stand still anywhere. The emptiness of emptiness does not come from anywhere, it does not go anywhere, and it does not stand still anywhere. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the inherent nature of the emptiness of emptiness does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the real nature of the emptiness of emptiness does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the essential nature of the emptiness of emptiness does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; and the intrinsic defining characteristics of the emptiness of emptiness do not come from anywhere, do not go anywhere, and do not stand still anywhere. The emptiness of great extent does not come from anywhere, it does not go anywhere, and it does not stand still anywhere. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the inherent nature of the emptiness of great extent does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the real nature of the emptiness of great extent does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the essential nature of the emptiness of great extent does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; and the intrinsic defining characteristics of the emptiness of great extent do not come from anywhere, do not go anywhere, and do not stand still anywhere. The emptiness of ultimate reality does not come from anywhere, it does not go anywhere, and it does not stand still anywhere. If you ask why, Subhūti, [F.309.a] it is because the inherent nature of the emptiness of ultimate reality does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the real nature of the emptiness of ultimate reality does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the essential nature of the emptiness of ultimate reality does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; and the intrinsic defining characteristics of the emptiness of ultimate reality do not come from anywhere, do not go anywhere, and do not stand still anywhere. The emptiness of conditioned phenomena does not come from anywhere, it does not go anywhere, and it does not stand still anywhere. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the inherent nature of the emptiness of conditioned phenomena does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the real nature of the emptiness of conditioned phenomena does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the essential nature of the emptiness of conditioned phenomena does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; and the intrinsic defining characteristics of the emptiness of conditioned phenomena do not come from anywhere, do not go anywhere, and do not stand still anywhere. The emptiness of unconditioned phenomena does not come from anywhere, it does not go anywhere, and it does not stand still anywhere. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the inherent nature of the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the real nature of the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and [F.309.b] does not stand still anywhere; the essential nature of the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; and the intrinsic defining characteristics of the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena do not come from anywhere, do not go anywhere, and do not stand still anywhere. The emptiness of the unlimited does not come from anywhere, it does not go anywhere, and it does not stand still anywhere. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the inherent nature of the emptiness of the unlimited does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the real nature of the emptiness of the unlimited does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the essential nature of the emptiness of the unlimited does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; and the intrinsic defining characteristics of the emptiness of the unlimited do not come from anywhere, do not go anywhere, and do not stand still anywhere. The emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end does not come from anywhere, it does not go anywhere, and it does not stand still anywhere. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the inherent nature of the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the real nature of the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the essential nature of the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and [F.310.a] does not stand still anywhere; and the intrinsic defining characteristics of the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end do not come from anywhere, do not go anywhere, and do not stand still anywhere. The emptiness of nonexclusion does not come from anywhere, it does not go anywhere, and it does not stand still anywhere. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the inherent nature of the emptiness of nonexclusion does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the real nature of the emptiness of nonexclusion does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the essential nature of the emptiness of nonexclusion does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; and the intrinsic defining characteristics of the emptiness of nonexclusion do not come from anywhere, do not go anywhere, and do not stand still anywhere. The emptiness of inherent nature does not come from anywhere, it does not go anywhere, and it does not stand still anywhere. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the inherent nature of the emptiness of inherent nature does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the real nature of the emptiness of inherent nature does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the essential nature of the emptiness of inherent nature does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; and the intrinsic defining characteristics of the emptiness of inherent nature do not come from anywhere, do not go anywhere, and do not stand still anywhere. The emptiness of all phenomena [F.310.b] does not come from anywhere, it does not go anywhere, and it does not stand still anywhere. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the inherent nature of the emptiness of all phenomena does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the real nature of the emptiness of all phenomena does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the essential nature of the emptiness of all phenomena does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; and the intrinsic defining characteristics of the emptiness of all phenomena do not come from anywhere, do not go anywhere, and do not stand still anywhere. The emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics does not come from anywhere, it does not go anywhere, and it does not stand still anywhere. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the inherent nature of the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the real nature of the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the essential nature of the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; and the intrinsic defining characteristics of the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics do not come from anywhere, do not go anywhere, and do not stand still anywhere. The emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended does not come from anywhere, it does not go anywhere, and it does not stand still anywhere. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the inherent nature of the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not [F.311.a] stand still anywhere; the real nature of the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the essential nature of the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; and the intrinsic defining characteristics of the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended do not come from anywhere, do not go anywhere, and do not stand still anywhere. The emptiness of nonentities does not come from anywhere, it does not go anywhere, and it does not stand still anywhere. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the inherent nature of the emptiness of nonentities does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the real nature of the emptiness of nonentities does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the essential nature of the emptiness of nonentities does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; and the intrinsic defining characteristics of the emptiness of nonentities do not come from anywhere, do not go anywhere, and do not stand still anywhere. The emptiness of essential nature does not come from anywhere, it does not go anywhere, and it does not stand still anywhere. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the inherent nature of the emptiness of essential nature does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the real nature of the emptiness of essential nature does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still [F.311.b] anywhere; the essential nature of the emptiness of essential nature does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; and the intrinsic defining characteristics of the emptiness of essential nature do not come from anywhere, do not go anywhere, and do not stand still anywhere. The emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities does not come from anywhere, it does not go anywhere, and it does not stand still anywhere. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the inherent nature of the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the real nature of the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the essential nature of the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; and the intrinsic defining characteristics of the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities do not come from anywhere, do not go anywhere, and do not stand still anywhere.

11.121     “The applications of mindfulness do not come from anywhere, they do not go anywhere, and they do not stand still anywhere. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the inherent nature of the applications of mindfulness does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the real nature of the applications of mindfulness does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the essential nature of the applications of mindfulness does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still [F.312.a] anywhere; and the intrinsic defining characteristics of the applications of mindfulness do not come from anywhere, do not go anywhere, and do not stand still anywhere. The correct exertions do not come from anywhere, they do not go anywhere, and they do not stand still anywhere. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the inherent nature of the correct exertions does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the real nature of the correct exertions does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the essential nature of the correct exertions does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; and the intrinsic defining characteristics of the correct exertions do not come from anywhere, do not go anywhere, and do not stand still anywhere. The supports for miraculous ability do not come from anywhere, they do not go anywhere, and they do not stand still anywhere. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the inherent nature of the supports for miraculous ability does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the real nature of the supports for miraculous ability does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the essential nature of the supports for miraculous ability does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; and the intrinsic defining characteristics of the supports for miraculous ability do not come from anywhere, do not go anywhere, and do not stand still anywhere. the faculties do not come from anywhere, they do not go anywhere, [F.312.b] and they do not stand still anywhere. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the inherent nature of the faculties does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the real nature of the faculties does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the essential nature of the faculties does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; and the intrinsic defining characteristics of the faculties do not come from anywhere, do not go anywhere, and do not stand still anywhere. the powers do not come from anywhere, they do not go anywhere, and they do not stand still anywhere. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the inherent nature of the powers does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the real nature of the powers does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the essential nature of the powers does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; and the intrinsic defining characteristics of the powers do not come from anywhere, do not go anywhere, and do not stand still anywhere. The branches of enlightenment do not come from anywhere, they do not go anywhere, and they do not stand still anywhere. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the inherent nature of the branches of enlightenment does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the real nature of the branches of enlightenment does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still [F.313.a] anywhere; the essential nature of the branches of enlightenment does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; and the intrinsic defining characteristics of the branches of enlightenment do not come from anywhere, do not go anywhere, and do not stand still anywhere. The noble eightfold path does not come from anywhere, it does not go anywhere, and it does not stand still anywhere. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the inherent nature of the noble eightfold path does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the real nature of the noble eightfold path does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the essential nature of the noble eightfold path does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; and the intrinsic defining characteristics of the noble eightfold path do not come from anywhere, do not go anywhere, and do not stand still anywhere.

11.122 “The truths of the noble ones do not come from anywhere, they do not go anywhere, and they do not stand still anywhere. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the inherent nature of the truths of the noble ones does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the real nature of the truths of the noble ones does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the essential nature of the truths of the noble ones does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; and the intrinsic defining characteristics of the truths of the noble ones do not come from anywhere, do not go anywhere, and [F.313.b] do not stand still anywhere. The meditative concentrations do not come from anywhere, they do not go anywhere, and they do not stand still anywhere. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the inherent nature of the meditative concentrations does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the real nature of the meditative concentrations does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the essential nature of the meditative concentrations does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; and the intrinsic defining characteristics of the meditative concentrations do not come from anywhere, do not go anywhere, and do not stand still anywhere. The immeasurable attitudes do not come from anywhere, they do not go anywhere, and they do not stand still anywhere. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the inherent nature of the immeasurable attitudes does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the real nature of the immeasurable attitudes does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the essential nature of the immeasurable attitudes does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; and the intrinsic defining characteristics of the immeasurable attitudes do not come from anywhere, do not go anywhere, and do not stand still anywhere. The formless absorptions do not come from anywhere, they do not go anywhere, and they do not stand still anywhere. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the inherent nature of the formless absorptions [F.314.a] does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the real nature of the formless absorptions does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the essential nature of the formless absorptions does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; and the intrinsic defining characteristics of the formless absorptions do not come from anywhere, do not go anywhere, and do not stand still anywhere. The liberations do not come from anywhere, they do not go anywhere, and they do not stand still anywhere. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the inherent nature of the liberations does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the real nature of the liberations does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the essential nature of the liberations does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; and the intrinsic defining characteristics of the liberations do not come from anywhere, do not go anywhere, and do not stand still anywhere. The serial steps of meditative absorption do not come from anywhere, they do not go anywhere, and they do not stand still anywhere. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the inherent nature of the serial steps of meditative absorption does not come from [F.314.b] anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the real nature of the serial steps of meditative absorption does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the essential nature of the serial steps of meditative absorption does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; and the intrinsic defining characteristics of the serial steps of meditative absorption do not come from anywhere, do not go anywhere, and do not stand still anywhere. The emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation do not come from anywhere, they do not go anywhere, and they do not stand still anywhere. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the inherent nature of the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the real nature of the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the essential nature of the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; and the intrinsic defining characteristics of the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation do not come from anywhere, do not go anywhere, and do not stand still anywhere. The extrasensory powers do not come from anywhere, they do not go anywhere, and they do not stand still anywhere. If you ask why, Subhūti, [F.315.a] it is because the inherent nature of the extrasensory powers does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the real nature of the extrasensory powers does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the essential nature of the extrasensory powers does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; and the intrinsic defining characteristics of the extrasensory powers do not come from anywhere, do not go anywhere, and do not stand still anywhere. The meditative stabilities do not come from anywhere, they do not go anywhere, and they do not stand still anywhere. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the inherent nature of the meditative stabilities does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the real nature of the meditative stabilities does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the essential nature of the meditative stabilities does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; and the intrinsic defining characteristics of the meditative stabilities do not come from anywhere, do not go anywhere, and do not stand still anywhere. The dhāraṇī gateways do not come from anywhere, they do not go anywhere, and they do not stand still anywhere. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the inherent nature of the dhāraṇī gateways does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the real nature of the dhāraṇī gateways does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the essential nature of the dhāraṇī [F.315.b] gateways does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; and the intrinsic defining characteristics of the dhāraṇī gateways do not come from anywhere, do not go anywhere, and do not stand still anywhere. The ten powers of the tathāgatas do not come from anywhere, they do not go anywhere, and they do not stand still anywhere. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the inherent nature of the powers of the tathāgatas does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the real nature of the powers of the tathāgatas does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the essential nature of the powers of the tathāgatas does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; and the intrinsic defining characteristics of the powers of the tathāgatas do not come from anywhere, do not go anywhere, and do not stand still anywhere. The four fearlessnesses do not come from anywhere, they do not go anywhere, and they do not stand still anywhere. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the inherent nature of the fearlessnesses does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the real nature of the fearlessnesses does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the essential nature of the fearlessnesses does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; and the intrinsic defining characteristics of the fearlessnesses do not come from anywhere, do not go anywhere, and do not stand still anywhere. The four kinds of exact knowledge do not come from anywhere, they do not go anywhere, and they do not stand still anywhere. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the inherent nature of the kinds of exact knowledge does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the real nature of the kinds of exact knowledge does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the essential nature of the kinds of exact knowledge does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; and the intrinsic defining characteristics of the kinds of exact knowledge do not come from anywhere, do not go anywhere, and [F.316.a] do not stand still anywhere. Great compassion does not come from anywhere, it does not go anywhere, and it does not stand still anywhere. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the inherent nature of great compassion does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the real nature of great compassion does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the essential nature of great compassion does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; and the intrinsic defining characteristics of great compassion do not come from anywhere, do not go anywhere, and do not stand still anywhere. [B22]

11.123     “The eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas [F.316.b] do not come from anywhere, they do not go anywhere, and they do not stand still anywhere. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the inherent nature of the distinct qualities of the buddhas does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the real nature of the distinct qualities of the buddhas does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the essential nature of the distinct qualities of the buddhas does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; and the intrinsic defining characteristics of the distinct qualities of the buddhas do not come from anywhere, do not go anywhere, and do not stand still anywhere.

11.124     “The realm of phenomena does not come from anywhere, it does not go anywhere, and it does not stand still anywhere. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the inherent nature of the realm of phenomena does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the real nature of the realm of phenomena does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the essential nature of the realm of phenomena does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; and the intrinsic defining characteristics of the realm of phenomena do not come from anywhere, do not go anywhere, and do not stand still anywhere. The real nature does not come from anywhere, it does not go anywhere, and it does not stand still anywhere. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the inherent nature of the real nature does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the [F.317.a] real nature of the real nature does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the essential nature of the real nature does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; and the intrinsic defining characteristics of the real nature do not come from anywhere, do not go anywhere, and do not stand still anywhere. The very limit of reality does not come from anywhere, it does not go anywhere, and it does not stand still anywhere. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the inherent nature of the very limit of reality does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the real nature of the very limit of reality does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the essential nature of the very limit of reality does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; and the intrinsic defining characteristics of the very limit of reality do not come from anywhere, do not go anywhere, and do not stand still anywhere. The realm of the inconceivable does not come from anywhere, it does not go anywhere, and it does not stand still anywhere. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the inherent nature of the realm of the inconceivable does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the real nature of the realm of the inconceivable does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the essential nature of the realm of the inconceivable does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and [F.317.b] does not stand still anywhere; and the intrinsic defining characteristics of the realm of the inconceivable do not come from anywhere, do not go anywhere, and do not stand still anywhere.

11.125 “Enlightenment does not come from anywhere, it does not go anywhere, and it does not stand still anywhere. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the inherent nature of enlightenment does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the real nature of enlightenment does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the essential nature of enlightenment does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; and the intrinsic defining characteristics of enlightenment do not come from anywhere, do not go anywhere, and do not stand still anywhere.

11.126 “The buddhas do not come from anywhere, they do not go anywhere, and they do not stand still anywhere. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the inherent nature of the buddhas does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the real nature of the buddhas does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the essential nature of the buddhas does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; and the intrinsic defining characteristics of the buddhas do not come from anywhere, do not go anywhere, and do not stand still anywhere.

11.127 “Conditioned phenomena do not come from anywhere, they do not go anywhere, and they do not stand still anywhere. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the inherent nature of conditioned phenomena does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still [F.318.a] anywhere; the real nature of conditioned phenomena does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the essential nature of conditioned phenomena does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; and the intrinsic defining characteristics of conditioned phenomena do not come from anywhere, do not go anywhere, and do not stand still anywhere.

11.128 “Unconditioned phenomena do not come from anywhere, they do not go anywhere, and they do not stand still anywhere. If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because the inherent nature of unconditioned phenomena does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the real nature of unconditioned phenomena does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; the essential nature of unconditioned phenomena does not come from anywhere, does not go anywhere, and does not stand still anywhere; and the intrinsic defining characteristics of unconditioned phenomena do not come from anywhere, do not go anywhere, and do not stand still anywhere.

11.129 “Subhūti, you said, ‘For this Great Vehicle ... the limit of the past cannot be apprehended, the limit of the future cannot be apprehended, and a middle cannot be apprehended ... it is a vehicle that is the sameness of the three times; that is why it is called a Great Vehicle.’ That is so, Subhūti, that is so! For this Great Vehicle the limit of the past cannot be apprehended, the limit of the future cannot be apprehended, and a middle cannot be apprehended. It is a vehicle that is the sameness of the three times; that is why it is called a Great Vehicle. [F.318.b] If you ask why, Subhūti, it is because past time is empty of past time; future time, too, is empty of future time; and present time, too, is empty of present time. The sameness of the three times, too, is empty of the sameness of the three times. The Great Vehicle, too, is empty of the Great Vehicle. A bodhisattva, too, is empty of a bodhisattva.

11.130 “Subhūti, in emptiness ‘one’ does not exist, ‘two’ does not exist, ‘three’ does not exist, ‘four’ does not exist, ‘five’ does not exist, ‘six’ does not exist, ‘seven’ does not exist, ‘eight’ does not exist, ‘nine’ does not exist, ‘ten’ does not exist, and ‘different’ does not exist.

11.131 “So, this is the vehicle of bodhisattva great beings that is a sameness. In it ‘the same’ and ‘not the same’ cannot be apprehended. In it desire and the absence of desire cannot be apprehended, hatred and the absence of hatred cannot be apprehended, delusion and the absence of delusion cannot be apprehended, names and the absence of names cannot be apprehended, conditioned phenomena and unconditioned phenomena cannot be apprehended, virtues and nonvirtues cannot be apprehended, basic transgressions and not basic transgressions cannot be apprehended, contaminated and uncontaminated cannot be apprehended, defilement and the absence of defilement cannot be apprehended, mundane and supramundane cannot be apprehended, arising and ceasing cannot be apprehended, and defilement and purification cannot be apprehended. In it permanence and impermanence cannot be apprehended, happiness and suffering cannot be [F.319.a] apprehended, self and selflessness cannot be apprehended, and peace and the absence of peace cannot be apprehended. The realm of desire and the transcendence of the realm of desire cannot be apprehended, the realm of form and the transcendence of the realm of form cannot be apprehended, the realm of formlessness and the transcendence of the realm of formlessness cannot be apprehended, and saṃsāra and nirvāṇa cannot be apprehended. If you ask why, it is because its own essential nature cannot be apprehended.

11.132 “Subhūti, past physical forms are empty of past physical forms. If you ask why, it is because in emptiness, past physical forms cannot be apprehended. If even emptiness cannot be apprehended, because it is empty of emptiness, how could past physical forms ever be apprehended in emptiness? Subhūti, past feelings are empty of past feelings. If you ask why, it is because in emptiness, past feelings cannot be apprehended. If even emptiness cannot be apprehended, because it is empty of emptiness, how could past feelings ever be apprehended in emptiness? Subhūti, past perceptions are empty of past perceptions. If you ask why, it is because in emptiness, past perceptions cannot be apprehended. If even emptiness cannot be apprehended, because it is empty of emptiness, how could past perceptions ever be apprehended in emptiness? Subhūti, past formative predispositions are empty of past formative predispositions. If you ask why, it is because in emptiness, past formative predispositions cannot be apprehended. If even emptiness cannot be apprehended, because it is empty of emptiness, [F.319.b] how could past formative predispositions ever be apprehended in emptiness? Subhūti, past consciousness is empty of past consciousness. If you ask why, it is because in emptiness, past consciousness cannot be apprehended. If even emptiness cannot be apprehended, because it is empty of emptiness, how could past consciousness ever be apprehended in emptiness?”

